THE TWEED RING: HOW NEW YORK ENDED ITS GRIP

Robbed City; Boss Died in Cell.

The following account of the Tweed ring of New York, taken from an article by the late B. O. Flower, published in the Arena in March, 1905, reviewing a book written by Albert Bigelow Paine setting forth in detail the story of "The Tweed Ring, Its Rise, Dominance, and Downfall," is printed at the request of citizens active in governmental and municipal reform:

"It was in 1869," says Mr. Flower, "that Thomas Nast, who had returned from fighting in freedom's glorious cause under Garibaldi and had accepted a position on Harper's Weekly, fired two or three broadsides, in the form of powerful cartoons, at the political corruptionists who were plundering the city and in the form of a ring or machine had begun that systematic reign of loot and graft that has few if any parallels in modern history.

"The conditions prevailing are graphically described by Mr. Paine. At that time, we are told 'the government of the city of New York was wholly in the hands of four men': William Marcy Tweed, known as 'the Boss' or 'Big Bill'; Peter B. Sweeney, often called the 'brains' of the ring; Richard B. Connolly, popularly and accurately described as 'Slippery Dick,' and A. Oakey Hall, whose name was often written by himself as 'O. K. Hall,' and by Nast as 'O. K. Haul.'

Governor a Figurehead.

"'Their reign,' observes our author, 'was as absolute as if they owned every street, public building, and park of the city, with most of the inhabitants, body and soul. They did, as a matter of fact, own or control every public office in New York City, and a working majority in the state legislature, while the Tammany governor, John T. Hoffman, was a mere figurehead, elected and directed by the ring.

"'Nor did the baleful influence of corruption end with state and city officials. Bondholders, contractors, merchants, artisans—even ministers of the gospel and philanthropists—were hoodwinked, intimidated, or subsidized into aiding those gigantic pilferings which in a period of less than thirty months defrauded the city of New York of a round thirty millions of dollars, emptied the treasury and added more than fifty millions to the public debt, which, in the form of taxation, we and the generations to follow must pay. In that evil hour the blight of the ring had extended to every corner of the city's moral and intellectual life.

Composed of Odd Bedfellows.

"'The ring itself was a curious assortment of incongruous natures—its single bond of unity being that of sordid self-interest and gain. Tweed, the leader—supervisor and commissioner of public works, etc., etc.—who had begun his public career as foreman of the Americus (or Big Six) Fire company, was a coarse and thoroughly illbred ward politician, a former member of the "forty thieves" board of aldermen (1860), a drinking, licentious Falstaff, with a faculty for making friends.

"'Sweeney—park commissioner, city chamberlain, etc., etc.—was a lawyer of education and ability, somber and seclusive—a man who loved to control great multitudes, unseen—to direct legislation, unsuspected. Connolly, controller of public expenditures (a bank clerk who had early acquired the sobriquet of "Slippery Dick") was a shifty human quantity without an honest bone in his body; while Mayor Hall—"Elegant Oakey," as they called him—was a frequenter of clubs, a beau of fashion, a wit, a writer of clever tales, a punster, a versatile mountebank, a lover of social distinction and applause.

Rings Within Rings, They Were.

"'Tweed was the bold burglar, Sweeney the dark plotter, Connolly the sneak thief, Hall the dashing bandit of the gang. This curious assemblage constituted the great central ring. Other rings there were, and rings within rings—each with its subsidiaries and go-betweens—but all tributary to the motley aggregation of four whose misdeeds have been the one reason for preserving the record of their features and their lives.'

"Such was the ring and its power in the early '70s. The city government was entirely in the hands of the ring. Controller Connolly refused to show his books. The courts were entirely controlled by the ring, members of the bar were apparently in sympathy with it, and men who were too curious about the way the city's money vanished

"WHITE HOUSE" IS UNDER SYCAMORE OF BLUE RIDGE

Harding Camps with Edison Party.

Hagerstown, Md., July 23.—President Harding was today initiated into the country's most famous camping club.

Having motored out from Washington before noon, he was resting tonight in a secluded camp, pitched near Pecktinville, a Maryland village in the Blue Ridge mountains. The President took the place left vacant by the death of the naturalist, John Burroughs, in the famous club, comprising Thomas A. Edison, Harvey S. Firestone, Henry Ford, and Burroughs.

This time the party had been expanded by the inclusion of the families of the members, and Bishop and Mrs. William F. Anderson of Cincinnati.

The President and his companions "fell to" a hearty lunch, which was awaiting them on arrival.

Edison's "Trick" Table.

The party ate off a trick table with a revolving center said to have been designed by Edison. The revolving center piece worked by the simple process of giving it a pull when one wanted something reposing on the other side.

After lunch the camp chairs were placed under a shady sycamore and pipes and cigars were lighted. Harding, sitting near Edison, asked the inventor what he did for recreation.

"You don't sleep much," remarked Harding. "Do you eat much?"

"No, I don't eat much," answered Edison.

"Do you play golf?" queried Harding.

"No," Edison said.

"Not old enough?" smiled Harding. Edison laughed in reply.

President's Five Day Fast.

The group then drifted into a discussion on eating and the President enlarged on his pet theory that most people over eat, stating that he had gone for five days without eating, taking only water.

Henry Ford took his turn with the ax before Mr. Harding arrived. He plied it with vigor for several minutes, collecting a stack of firewood. Edison stole away while Ford was so engaged, but came back a little later with the announcement that he had found a mint bed.

"I've got the mint," he announced with a smile. "Whose got the julep?"

Long before the Hardings were expected the clear Blue Ridge mountain air was assailed by the odor of wood smoke ascending from the kitchen. Mingled with it were the smell of roasting Virginia ham, lamb chops, sweet corn, and vegetables.

Harding Rides Horseback.

Big Pool, Md., July 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—H. S. Firestone brought to camp a half dozen saddled horses today and with Secretary Christian, Henry and Edsel Ford, H. S. Firestone Jr. and Mrs. Firestone, the President cantered over the country roads for an hour.

On his return to camp he walked up the road to a country store, picking up a blue eyed girl, aged 5, en route, with whom he established amity by a sizable candy purchase.

One of the old well type party line country telephones hung from the wall and President Harding swung its crank to call the White House with a query as to Mrs. Harding's health, who has been indisposed. He was informed that while feeling better, she would be unable to join the party tomorrow.

A little electric light plant was trundled out after dinner, when dusk fell over the camp, and it set a player piano going in addition to its light beams.

Harding Is Asked to Turn All Railroads Over to Ford

Hart, Mich., July 23.—A petition to President Harding, asking that the railroads of the country be turned over to Henry Ford for operation, signed by 400 fruit growers Oceana county, was mailed to Washington today.

A WILL, a disinherited girl, a train wreck at night, a wholesome, sun-browned hero—the old ingredients in a delightful, new mixture.

YANK GIRL KILLS ENOUGH BIG GAME TO STOCK A ZOO

PARIS, July 23.—A remarkable feat in big game hunting and exploration has been accomplished by an American society woman, Mrs. Frederick Dalziel of New York, who has just reached Paris on her way home after a six months' trip in the wilderness of German East Africa.

Mrs. Dalziel was the first white woman to visit the world's greatest extinct volcano in Ngoro, Ngoro, in the wilderness, and whose crater is no less than ten miles in diameter.

Mrs. Dalziel's "bag" included one elephant, two rhinoceri, one buffalo, seven lions, one leopard, one chetah, and three hippopotami.

She will present a splendid rhinoceros to the American Museum of Natural History as a souvenir of her marvelous escape from death. Mrs. Dalziel wounded the monster with her first shot, but she was unable to fire again before the animal charged, hurling her into a thorn bush. Another member of the party brought it down with a bullet in the brain. Apart from scratches, the plucky huntress was uninjured.

KING OF GERMAN INDUSTRY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

BERLIN, July 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—Hugo Stines, the German capitalist, suffered concussion of the brain and a severe cut in the forehead when an automobile in which he was motoring in the vicinity of Wiesbaden, Prussia, was overturned today.

Stinnes was accompanied by his daughter and granddaughter, both of whom were injured. He was taken to Wiesbaden, where he received treatment, and is reported to be resting easily.

Hugo Stinnes is the best known industrialist of Germany. The owner of several newspapers, shipping lines and great industrial plants, he is said to control capital totaling 8,000,000,000 marks.

Recently Stinnes was reported to have acquired large concessions in soviet Russia and to have begun an industrial invasion of several other countries.

Milkmen Wake Him Up; Wants 'Em Rubber Tired

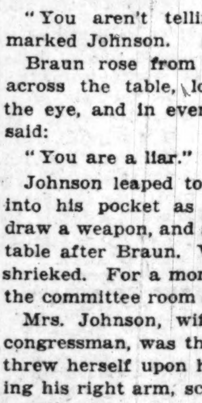
A letter has been received by H. S. Woolhiser, village manager of Winnetka, from C. L. Day, 454 Sheridan road, Winnetka, asking Woolhiser to have an ordinance passed compelling milk companies to equip their wagons with rubber tires. He also wants the horses shod with rubber horseshoes. He complains that in the wee hours of the morn he is awakened by the milk wagons.

GUN THREAT TO BERGDOLL KIN

Wife Stops Shooting 'Lie' Invited.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., July 23.—[Special.]—A violent encounter between Representative Ben Johnson of Kentucky and Charles A. Braun, brother of Grover C. Bergdoll, the draft slacker, broke up the Bergdoll investigation in riotous disorder today.



BEN JOHNSON.

Spectators, fearful of gun play, were thrown into a panic, and the excitement which followed would have furnished a thrilling scenario for an uncensored movie.

Hostilities burst from a tranquil sky while Representative Johnson was questioning Braun, who occupied the witness stand. Johnson didn't like the way Braun answered questions.

How It Started.

"You aren't telling the truth," remarked Johnson.

Braun rose from his chair, leaned across the table, looked Johnson in the eye, and in even, measured tones said:

"You are a liar."

Johnson leaped to his feet, reached into his pocket as though about to draw a weapon, and started around the table after Braun. Women spectators shrieked. For a moment every one in the committee room seemed paralyzed.

Mrs. Johnson, wife of the warlike congressman, was the first to act. She threw herself upon her husband, holding his right arm, screaming:

"No, you must not do that."

Peters Holds Johnson.

A second later Representative Peters of Maine, chairman of the committee, became a participant in the fracas. He tackled Mr. Johnson football fashion, pinning Johnson in a viselike grip. Two more of his colleagues, Representatives Flood of Vrigina and Luhring of Indiana, rushed to his assistance. Johnson, struggling with the fury of a madman, was on the verge of shaking off his captors, when a husky captain of marines went to their aid.

Meanwhile Sergeant-at-Arms Joe Rogers, who happeneed to be in the room, took charge of Braun. He started to lead him out of the room. This added to Johnson's fury. He cursed with the vehemence of a pirate.

"Am I not going to have a chance to settle with that —— —— —— —— —— ——?" he shouted. "Won't this committee let me punish him; that flag hating —— —— —— ——?"

Angry Lawmaker Restrained.

The committee and Mrs. Johnson and the marine captain held him tight.

The big sergeant at arms led Braun out of the capitol and told him to go home. Braun wept as he walked away. He told how he had tried to keep out of the Bergdoll affair, even to the point of changing his name to escape stigma cast upon the family by his brother, the slacker.

Johnson finally became calmed. When the committee thought it safe to release him Chairman Peters decided to call it a day and adjourned the hearing.

Order was established about as quickly as the row arose. It lasted less than two minutes and when the witness had been safely conducted out of the capitol Mr. Johnson walked away with his wife holding his right hand and Representative Harry D. Flood at his side. As he left the hearing room Johnson said: "I would have killed him in a second if I had not been held back."

WOMAN IS LINK IN FUGITIVE BANKER TRAIL

Blonde Seen with Man Like Spurgin.

Detectives searching for Warren C. Spurgin, president of the Michigan Avenue Trust company, took up the trail of a woman last night after it was announced that the missing official's shortage, bordering on $1,000,000, will shortly force the institution into the hands of a receiver.

A handsome blonde woman, known only as "Ethel," is being sought in connection with Spurgin's disappearance. It was said she maintains an expensive apartment in Grand boulevard, rented for her by a man using the name "Edward Walsh," and that she drives a $5,000 automobile. She frequently was seen in the company of a man who was said to resemble Spurgin. Once, it was said, they were seen together in Hot Springs, Ark.

Clews indicating that Spurgin either is in Seattle, Wash., or on his way there en route to the orient, were uncovered, according to the manager of a national bank protective agency.

Crowe Starts Inquiry.

Operatives for Lloyds, which had bonded Spurgin for $100,000, Pinkerton men, and detectives from the state's attorney's office crossed trails in the search. State's Attorney Crowe ordered his chief investigator, Ben J. Newmark, yesterday to conduct an inquiry looking toward the issuance of grand jury subpœnas tomorrow.

"It looks as though some one has stolen a million or more from this bank and that there is a sort of backwardness about prosecuting him," the state's attorney said. "It is high time the thief was apprehended. I shall take this matter before the grand jury just as soon as I have enough evidence."

Seek Ex-South Shore Clubman.

The investigation developed along three distinct lines. One of these was the hunt for the blonde "Ethel," another was an effort to learn the destination of a number of trunks which left the Spurgin home at 5758 Kenwood avenue about the same time that Spurgin left the city, and a third search was being conducted for a certain man, once a prominent member of the South Shore Country club, who is said to have obtained large amounts of the missing cash.

At the same time detectives were trying to learn whether Mrs. Spurgin and her daughter, Vivian, had arrived in Perry, Ia. They are said to have started for there in one of two automobiles owned by Spurgin.

"Spurgin until recently had two automobiles," said one of the detectives. "One of these was smashed up in an accident at 52d street and Drexel boulevard two weeks ago. The other was driven by Mrs. Spurgin toward Perry, where she was going to visit her parents."

Mrs. Spurgin is said to have gone to Iowa at Spurgin's suggestion. According to the police, he told his wife the day before he left Chicago that he was going on an extended trip.

Trace Spurgin's Trunks.

The detectives say Spurgin recently bought several additional trunks for $144, and these are among a number which the detectives were trying to trace.

Spurgin will soon be in custody, Investigator Newmark declared last night.

"Spurgin is a man of conspicuous appearance," Newmark said. "He is 6 feet 3 inches tall and broad—much bigger and broader than the ordinary man."

May Have $300,000.

W. C. Bruns, district manager for the local representatives of Lloyd's, urged the utmost speed in apprehending Spurgin.

"We are afraid that unless we move rapidly something may make the loss irrevocable," he said. "We figure that Spurgin has at least six days' head start, and that he had at least $300,000 in cash and negotiable securities with him. There are indications that he has fled to Mexico."

H. B. Savage, state bank examiner, with a corps of six men, is still busy auditing the books, and it will be another day before final accounting of the bank's funds will be in the hands of the directors. It is evident now, bank officials said, that Spurgin's peculations extended over a period of at least three years.

Kept the Books Balanced.

One of the peculiarities of the case is that the bank's books, despite the great shortage uncovered, balance to the penny. This is due to the fact that for every dollar's worth of valuable

Clyne Says He Will Make City Bone Dry

"The liquor traffic can and shall be stopped.

"An injunction will be placed against every saloon in Chicago which is selling liquor and the places closed in advance of prosecution.

"Every saloon sign in Chicago must be taken down by Tuesday."

District Attorney Charles F. Clyne thus announced a new drive on liquor traffic yesterday on his return from Washington.

"Will Make City Dry."

"I understand there are 6,100 saloon signs in the city or some printed indication that liquor is being sold on the premises," he continued. "If these are not removed or pulled down by Tuesday we will start making arrests and prosecute all proprietors who refuse to comply with the order.

"The large number of violations of the Volstead law can be handled and are being handled. I am going to make the city dry.

"I want to try it once and see how it will be liked. Until a thing is tried no one can tell whether he is going to like it or not. So here goes for a dry Chicago."

Seek to Clear Court Dockets.

Mr. Clyne has been attending a session of a committee to consider emergency legislation for the federal courts. He is secretary of the committee. It is comprised of Col. John Haywood of New York, Judge Sater of Ohio, Judge Pollock of Kansas, and Judge Grubb of Alabama.

These men were appointed by Attorney General Daugherty to look into the condition of the various courts in the United States and discover a remedy for the congestion in liquor, auto theft, and narcotic cases. Thousands of cases are clogging the dockets at present, Mr. Clyne said, and with a view to clearing up the situation, the committee was created.

CAPTURE OF RUM SHIP MAY SOLVE 'PIRATE' MYSTERY

Load of Liquor and 18 Men Taken.

New Haven, Conn., July 23.—Prohibition officials are rejoicing at the seizure of the auxiliary sword fishing sloop Jennie T. of Northport, N. Y., the confiscation of liquor valued at more than $50,000 and the arrests of eighteen men in a spectacular raid early today. Federal and city officials believe they have solved—partly at least—the mystery attached to the elusive "pirate ship" which has been sighted at various times off the New Jersey coast, near Montauk Point, and in Long Island sound.

The authorities have not yet determined whethere there was any direct connection between the Jennie T. and the British schooner Pocomoke, they said tonight.

Had "Jettisoned" Liquor.

The Pocomoke, bound from Nassau, Bahama islands, with a shipment of liquors consigned to Canadian ports, put into Atlantic City a few days ago with its cargo missing. It was explained at the time that the liquor had been jettisoned at sea. The Jennie T. docked at Lighthouse Point, an amusement resort at the eastern entrance of New Haven harbor, early today, laden to capacity with a valuable cargo of liquor, the marks on the cases and bottles indicating that it came from Bermuda and the West Indies.

In the opinion of the federal prohibition enforcement officials the Jennie T. received its freight from a larger craft somewhere off the Long island shore, for the Jennie T. is a small vessel hardly capable of a voyage to Bermuda.

All the arrested men were released during the day on bonds of $3,000 each for a hearing on Monday.

Caught in the Act.

The arrests and seizure were spectacular in the extreme. Prohibition Enforcement Agent McAuliffe, acting on information from superior officers in New York that an attempt might be made during the night to land liquor.

About 2:30 o'clock this morning New Haven police headquarters were notified by some unknown telephone informant that a boat load of liquor was being put ashore at Lighthouse Point.

Several automobile loads of officers, armed with riot guns, were rushed to the spot, where a crowd of men was removing the Jennie T.'s cargo.

With guns drawn the officers charged the party, which surrendered without a struggle.

Seek Liquor Smugglers.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 23.—Every available agency was in motion along the Jersey coast tonight in an effort to trap the fleet of liquor smugglers that is believed by revenue agents to be creeping up the Atlantic ocean from the West Indies, officials here announced.

PLEA AT JUBILEE CALLS IT REPLY TO FARE FIGHT

Heard at Riverview with Thompson.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Gov. Len Small made his first public appearance yesterday since his indictment on charges of embezzling $500,000 of the taxpayers' money and conspiracy to defraud the state of $2,000,000.

It was at the $1,000,000 Lundin-Thompson "jubilee" at Riverview. He arrived at the band stand an hour late, accompanied by Mayor Thompson, Capt. John Naughton of Chief Fitzmorris' office, and half a dozen muscular detectives.

The governor read carefully a speech that was said to have been agreed upon at a morning conference with his city hall friends, and as soon as the speaking was concluded he left the park, again accompanied by Mayor Thompson, Capt. Naughton, and the six detectives.

Back Downstate in Evening.

In the evening it was said at the Great Northern, where he spent the morning, that he had left town, presumably for Springfield or Kankakee.

In his address the governor did not mention so frequently as usual "the commercialized press, the greedy traction barons, and the rich tax dodgers," but he did claim that his indictment on a charge of embezzling the taxpayers' money was nothing more nor less than an effort to make him drop his battle for the 5 cent fare and the tax commission bill. He said nothing about his determination to resist the service of capiases in connection with his indictment or about the reported intention to call on the state militia to stand off the deputies next Tuesday or thereafter.

Climax of His Speech.

This paragraph is what might be called the climax of the governor's speech as it was issued to the newspapers in typewritten form:

"Feeling that it was my duty to do everything within my power to give you an opportunity to vote for a 5 cent street car fare, and to place the hidden millions of the vastly rich upon the tax rolls, I have given notice that I shall call a session of the general assembly next November or December for the consideration of these two great problems, although I know full well that my indictment last Wednesday was intended to frighten me and prevent me from making that call in your interest."

Although the speech was not scheduled for delivery until two or possibly three hours later, copies of it were given out early in the afternoon so there would be plenty of time for its appearance in the afternoon papers and the early edition of this morning's papers which go downstate.

Confers with Mayor and Lundin.

They were sent out following a long conference of the governor with Fred Lundin, Mayor Thompson, and other Chicago allies, at the Great Northern hotel, whither the state executive hurried directly from his early morning train.

He and the others present declined to see newspaper men, but it was understood that the speech was the result of a sort of collaboration during which it was determined that the orator should remain silent concerning his plan of procedure in reference to his arrest.

But that subject was said to have been gone into thoroughly, and from what has been said by members of that contingent it is believed the governor's city hall followers strongly urged him to continue to evade or avoid arrest by any and all means in his power. The use of the militia was said to have been discussed, together with the legal question of whether the governor can "get away with it" if he attempts to call out the state troops to oppose Sheriff Mester of Sangamon county.

May Resort to Legal Fight.

It was said by lawyers in touch with what has developed at Springfield that instead of the use of force Gov. Small is more likely to continue to attempt to keep out of the jurisdiction of the courts by a law battle.

Two programs have been considered, it is reported. The first of these is for Small finally to submit to arrest and immediately begin a fight for a change of venue from Sangamon county. This would be made on grounds that the community is hostile to him and that a fair trial would be impossible in the courts because of that prejudice.

The only basis for this would be a mass of affidavits asserting that the makers know the citizens of Springfield who might be summoned for jury service are so bitterly opposed to Small that they could not consider without bias the law and facts in his case. The presentation of such a case would require considerable time, and State's Attorney Mortimer of Sangamon county would fight it bitterly as a serious reflection upon the community he represents.

Habeas Corpus Is Alternative.

The other procedure, the lawyers say, would be for the defense to take advantage of its present opportunity to investigate discreetly the possibility of finding a judge who would issue a writ of habeas corpus the moment the governor submits to arrest.

For such a purpose, it is claimed, the governor's lawyers would be free to appeal to any judge anywhere in the state. Possibly if the Lundin-Thompson machine had won the judicial election of June 6 Cook county might have been considered as a favorable spot for such a step. But regardless of that point, the governor's attorneys are free to go before any judge from Waukegan to Cairo in this matter.

And if such a judge should hold with them that the governor cannot be arrested during his term of office, Small would be free and—this is important—his decision would not be subject to review, according to eminent lawyers not identified with the case.

The governor's silence on what he will do in reference to the indictment did not seem to matter to the Riverview crowd. Many of those present were city hall employés and their friends who bought Mayor Thompson's $1.10 tickets as they were prorated to them, and, although they resented this form of political assessment they knew it was political wisdom to cheer loudly and conspicuously.

Among the other speakers were County Judge Righeimer, Mayor Thompson, State's Attorney Crowe, Health Commissioner Robertson and Frank D. Ayres. The latter two spoke in the evening.

GOV. SMALL'S SPEECH

Gov. Small's speech at Riverview park follows:

"A year ago this month, on he 10th day of July, 1920, you, Republicans of Cook county, unanimously indorsed me as a candidate for governor of Illinois.

"I promised you then that if elected governor I would give the people an honest, economical, business administration; that I would try to see to it that the people received a dollar in value for every dollar of their money spent.

"I told you that I would urge the legislature, in my inaugural message, to repeal the then existing public utilities law, which repeal would abolish the Lowden public utilities commission, the commision which had held that contracts made between the people and the public utility corporations were binding on the people, but were not binding on the utility corporations; and that I would recommend the enactment in its stead of a law giving to the people of every city in Illinois the right of home rule in the management and control of their public utilities.

"I promised you that I would urge the legislature to pass the enabling act, drawn by the mayor's traction commission, which would give to the people of the city Chicago, you people, the right to determine by your votes and to make, if you wish, the mayor's plan for rapid transportation and a permanent 5 cent fare a living reality.

"I Have Kept Faith with You."

"My friends, it seems like coming back home to greet you again here today, and I want to thank you most sincerely for the confidence you reposed in me in helping to elect me governor of this great state of nearly 7,000,000 people, the third greatest state in the Union.

"My friends, I have kept faith with you and the people of Illinois; and I have done everything within my power to serve the people. I made the recommendations in my inaugural message regarding transportation and utilities and taxation laws, as I promised you. I also sent special messages to the legislature urging the passage of these laws.

"I also recommended the passage of a law giving the state tax commission power to review individual assessments, with a view to placing upon the tax rolls of this state the billions of dollars in bonds and stocks, concealed by the rich taxdodgers who systematically evade payment of their just share of the expense of this government under which they have accumulated their wealth.

"The same powerful interests which were used to defeat the transportation bill were, I believe, responsible for the defeat of this bill, and as a result the small home owner and the taxpayer of moderate means, who do not and cannot conceal their property, will be compelled to continue to pay more than their share of the taxes.

Charges Plot of Big Interests.

"Perhaps never in the history of this state has such an aggregation of great interests combined to defeat the will of the people.

"THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the Daily News, the mouthpieces of organized wealth and greed and of the criminal profiteer, lied about the object of those bills, and did everything they could to defeat them. And when the bills failed to get enough votes to carry they said that Gov. Small had been defeated by the legislature.

"My friends, I want to say to you that those bills were not offered or supported by me because they were in the interest of Gov. Small. They were supported by me because they were in your interests, they were right and fair in the interests of the people. It was not Gov. Small who was defeated, it was the people of Illinois who were defeated by the big interests working through the legislature. Those bills were of no more importance to me than they were to each and every one of you.

"I believe that with the decline in prices the increases in appropriations should be held down as nearly as possible to the real needs of our state government.

Assails Brundage Requests.

"Attorney General Brundage asked the legislature for over $1,500,000 to run his office for two years. This amount was many times as much as the attorneys general of the two great states of Pennsylvania and Ohio combined required for the conduct of the offices of attorney general in those states.

"I went over the appropriations carefully and vetoed $7,000,000, and in doing so reduced the attorney general's appropriation to a little over $600,000, which still leaves him more than the attorneys general of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Wisconsin combined, and more than the total appropriations to the attorneys general of fifteen of the states of the Union combined.

"But I tell you, my friends, it is a hard job working for the interests of the people.

"There is no money to be made working for the people's interests as against the great moneyed interests.

"If there is any money to be made, it is always for those who are on the side of the great, wealthy corporations.

"These interests discovered that they could neither buy nor frighten me, and they have joined with their tools, the attorney general, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and Daily News, and Senator McCormick, in an attempt to disgrace and destroy me by having me indicted by the grand jury of Sangamon county, a county controlled by the most vicious political ring in the state of Illinois.

"But I believe the people of Illinois understand why Len Small was indicted.

"Attorney General Brundage and his whole gang of character assassins and character defamers know that I am innocent of every charge they make.

"But, my friends, the time has come in the life of this republic of ours, if it is to continue to be perpetuated as a republic, when we must have honest state officials, representatives and senators who will faithfully serve the interests of the people and who cannot be bought or bribed or frightened by the big interests and blackmailers.

Move to Halt Special Session.

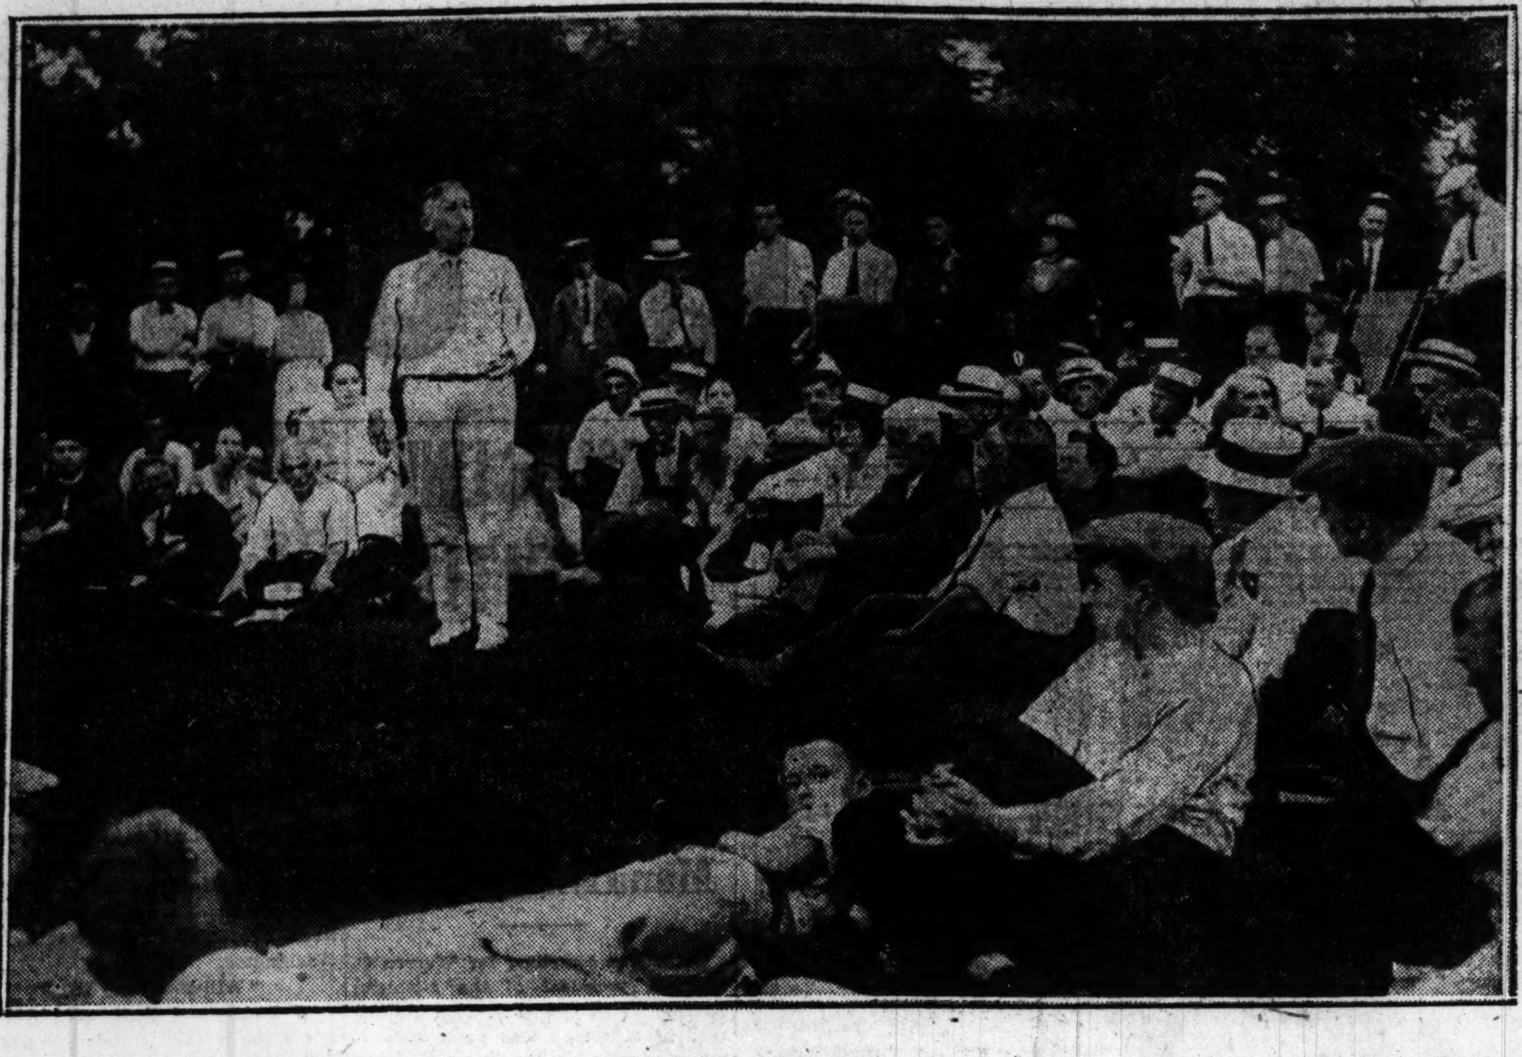
"Feeling that it was my duty to do everything within my power to give you an opportunity to vote for a 5 cent street car fare, and to place the hidden millions of the vastly rich upon the tax rolls, I have given notice that I shall call a session of the general assembly next November or December for the consideration of these two great problems, although I know full well that my indictment last Wednesday was intended to frighten me and prevent me from making that call in your interest.

"These are your problems, my friends, as well as mine. I have no selfish interests to be conserved by their passage. They are in the interest of all the people. They are right, and as long as I am your governor I shall be guided by what I believe is right and to your interest.

"I realize, my friends, that for a governor of a state to stand up against the great moneyed interests, the cement trust and traction barons, and stop the plundering of the state treasury and the robbing of the taxpayers, is almost like taking one's life in his own hands."

The governor closed with a plea for coöperation from the people.

THE BUGS AGAIN ALIGHT IN THE PARK



Opinions clashed in Washington park last night with all their accustomed ferocity, for members of the "Bug club" were permitted to alight on the lawns. The informal forum for the discussion of everything from rats to relativity won a victory in Judge Fisher's court yesterday, when the judge elicited a promise from the park authorities not to molest "the bugs" until he had had a chance to decide their plea for an injunction against the interruption of their meetings. Parker Sercombe, ex-statistician of the school board, is addressing the assemblage.

WASHINGTON NEWS
—IN BRIEF—

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 23.

Representative Ben Johnson of Kentucky threw the Bergdoll investigating committee session into an uproar when he sought to assail Charles A. Braun, brother of the slacker Bergdoll, rushing upon him as he moved his hand toward his pocket as though reaching for a gun, and hurling epithets like a pirate. Johnson's wife and colleagues pitched upon him and restrained him with great difficulty. Braun called the Kentuckian a liar.

Although chary about discussing the situation the Washington government believes that Japan, in its attitude of restriction toward the forthcoming conference on reduction of armaments, is placing herself in a position out of harmony with public opinion of the world.

The state department has appealed to all American citizens holding currency of the Austro-Hungarian bank to report their holdings so that means may be instituted for their protection in the forthcoming liquidation of the bank.

Arrangements have been completed by the prohibition commissioner for a thorough technical investigation of all industrial and denaturing alcohol plants in the country.

President Harding left the White House by motor today for the summer camp of Henry Ford, Harvey Firestone, and Thomas A. Edison on Licking creek, Maryland, and tonight he slept under the stars in the camp de luxe with the former outing pals of John Burroughs, naturalist, who recently died.

LAWYERS DON'T ADVISE SMALL TO CALL MILITIA

No Armed Clash on Tuesday Expected.

Springfield, Ill., July 23.—[Special.]—There will be no clash here on Tuesday between the militia and deputy sheriffs should Judge E. S. Smith order the arrest of Gov. Len Small. It is doubtful if the governor will call out the national guard at all. He has not been advised to do so by his attorneys.

Should Judge Smith decide the governor is subject to arrest—and this is his indicated intention—the procedure will be this:

The court will instruct the Circuit court clerk to hand over to Sheriff Henry Mester of Sangamon county the capiases for Gov. Small under indictments charging him with the embezzlement of $500,000 of state funds, conspiring with Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling and Vernon S. Curtis of Grant Park, to defraud the state of $2,000,000 and with embezzling, jointly with those two, $700,000 belonging to the state.

Will Wait "Reasonable Time."

Sheriff Mester will then notify the governor or his private secretary, George D. Sutton, that the warrants have been issued. The county authorities will then wait a "reasonable time" for the governor to appear in court or to give some expression as to whether he intends to surrender or resist. Should he appear in court his bonds, fixed at $150,000, probably will be reduced by Judge Smith to $50,000, as in the cases of Lieut. Gov. Sterling and Curtis.

Should he announce that he will not appear or fail to appear within a "reasonable time," Judge Smith will instruct the sheriff to bring him in.

Small Guards Against Coup.

In the meanwhile Gov. Small is taking no chances of a coup by the authorities. He is said to have been accompanied by three husky bodyguards when he boarded an early train for Chicago today. He is not expected to return here until Monday night or Tuesday, the day set by Judge Smith for reconvening court.

It was reported that his attorneys were preparing another opinion for submission to him upon his return, but this was denied by Attorney George B. Gillespie.

"Ex-Gov. Fifer, Attorney Graham, and I have submitted our opinion to the governor on his rights in the matter," said Attorney Gillespie. "We have cited to the court the authorities for that opinion. That is all we have done so far or intend doing until the situation changes. Should an emergency arise we shall advise the governor how to meet it. Until it does we shall have nothing more to say."

Has Not Advised Militia Use.

"Have you advised Gov. Small to call out the militia if necessary to resist arrest?" Mr. Gillespie was asked.

"I have given Gov. Small no such advice, and neither has either of his other attorneys."

It is known, however, that Gov. Small held a conference yesterday with Adjt. Gen. Frank S. Dickson, and the latter admitted the matter had been discussed. What decision was reached was not learned, but those in close touch with the governor at the state house say it is his firm intention to call out troops if necessary to prevent arrest.

It is the contention of constitutional lawyers and experts on military law that the governor has no authority for calling out the troops in a matter of this kind, and should he do so State Treasurer E. E. Miller and State Auditor Andrew Russel probably would be enjoined by the courts from making any disbursements for pay or rations for the soldiers.

STERLING GOES TO ROCKFORD.

Rockford, Ill., July 23.—Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling reached Rockford today, having stopped in Chicago en route from Springfield between trains only. The lieutenant governor indicated that he would remain in Rockford for the present and that he does not anticipate returning to Springfield next week.

Two persons were killed and three injured yesterday in three automobile accidents.

Mrs. Esther Paine, 72 years old, 4017 West Madison street, was walking on Crawford avenue, near Grand, when an automobile driven by Fred Binse, Park Ridge, struck a machine owned by George Van De Miller, 1817 North Crawford avenue, which was parked beside the curb. It hurtled over, striking Mrs. Paine. She died at St. Anne's hospital.

IRATE SISTER OF WEE WILLY BELABORS COP

Policeman Henry Maley was nearly relieved of his eyes and hair by an irate girl last night. He had been sent to a home at 1918 North Clark street in response to a telephone call from 19 year old Rose Riley.

"My brother Willy, who just escaped from the juvenile farm a few days ago, is throwing bricks at me," she said.

Hardly had the policeman reached the alley in the rear of the Riley ménage, when his person encountered a large rock hurrying in the other direction. It was 15 year old Willy resisting arrest.

Maley fired. He meant to shoot in the air and scare the boy, but his aim was bad. The bullet entered Willy's foot.

At this point Elizabeth Riley, 24 years old, arrived.

"I think she'd have killed me in about another minute if the dicks hadn't come," he said later. "She oughta fight Dempsey."

HIGHCOURTHOLDS GOVERNOR IS NOT ARREST IMMUNE

Wisconsin Decision Fixes Status.

A Wisconsin Supreme court case—the case of Ekern vs. McGovern, 154 Wisconsin, page 457—was mentioned to THE TRIBUNE yesterday as a complete and final answer to the contention that Gov. Small is above arrest.

After discussing the three grand divisions of the American form of government—the legislative, the executive, and the judicial—the opinion continues:

"No right is more sacred under such system than that of an individual to appeal to the judicial forum of his country for redress of any wrong perpetrated upon him. Without that right neither life, liberty, nor the pursuit of happiness would be secure, and the very purpose for which, in contemplation of our constitution, 'governments are instituted among men' would fail utterly.

Governor to Conserve, Not Destroy.

"To conserve that purpose, not to destroy it, executive power was conferred on the governor, coupled with the restraint and balance afforded by judicial authority to confine it within its jurisdiction, not to regulate, by dealing with all judicial questions—a guaranty which distinguishes our constitutional liberties from the system of old.

"The executive is absolutely free from judicial interference within the scope of his duties. To that extent the court will not attempt to invade his realm to enjoin him, to mandate him, or to prohibit him. There are a multitude of authorities on this.

"But when he steps aside from the sphere of his duty and violates the law he is amenable to the law the same as any other person.

Not Immune As Law Breaker.

"The scope of his duty does not extend to breaking the law.

"Within its scope, acting as governor, he is powerful, but, outside thereof, though pretending to act as governor, he is but an individual, and must bow to the underlying principle of our system that all men are equal before the law—the humblest, the most exalted, the lowliest in legitimate industry with the highest surrounded by all the power which wealth can give, or the highest in agency authority referable to the people; there is no difference in the contemplation of our system, and, if courts do their duty, there can be no difference in fact.

"The courts must settle rights in any controversy respecting violation thereof, whether the violator be the governor or a private individual."

Ten warrants have been sworn out by Mr. Glode during the last few days.

'BUGS' BUZZ ONCE MORE IN PARK; ARMISTICE ON

Delay Hearing on Writ to Banish Club.

The "Bug club" met last night in Washington park. About 400 "Bugs" attended, talked on free speech, Einstein, THE TRIBUNE, and other subjects. And none of them was slugged or kicked by any South park policeman and none of them was chased out of the park.

The meeting was the result of the "Bugs'" day in Judge Harry M. Fisher's court. They had asked for an order restraining the south park board from forbidding them to meet in the park.

Agree to Armistice.

Judge Fisher set the hearing for the injunction for Aug. 2, when attorneys for the board agreed that pending the judge's decision no action would be taken against the meetings.

"It's a great thing, this club," said one of the men sitting on the grass around the speaker last night. "A fellow can come out here with his wife and kids and keep cool and yet learn something. Listen to that fellow talking on relatively. Is there anythinig wrong in that? Say, we sure appreciate THE TRIBUNE'S story of the raid made by the police the other night. It has started something."

Judge Assails Ban.

Attorney William Rothman told Judge Fisher yesterday morning that he understood the park rules prohibit meetings in which there are speakers. He added that this rule was followed when the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic asked for space in the park.

"In my mind that action was inexcusable and unlawful on the part of the commissioners," said Judge Fisher. "There is no more American and beneficial recreation than that of public speaking. It not only should be permitted, but it should be encouraged."

Lawrence J. Ryan of 6341 Champlain avenue, a wounded war veteran, who is said to have been assaulted by Policemen B. A. Piedmond and Harry Speaker, yesterday asked Judge Howard Hayes for warrants. Judge Hayes refused to issue them unless the complainant would agree to have the case heard on its merits. Ryan refused.

MANAGER OF N.Y. ANTIQUE STORE JAILED IN PARIS

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1921.]

PARIS, July 23.—John Vigouroux, manager of the New York branch of the Paris antiquity house of De Motte, was arrested here today, states Le Matin, on the charge of appropriating from the New York store thirteen ancient Persian manuscripts valued at 3,000,000 francs, formerly a part of the collection of the shah of Persia. The arrest was made in the Grand hotel, where Vigouroux arrived this morning from Deauville.

Despite his outburst and his indignant protestations of innocence, he was committed to prison pending an investigation.

VILLAGE LACKS OFFICIALS; THEY ARE ALL IN JAIL

St. Paul, Minn., July 23.—The village of Buhl is without a mayor, recorder or other city officials, according to an appeal made to Gov. J. A. O. Preus here today. It is the first instance in the history of the state that any village or city has been without officers.

The five officials were recently sentenced to sixty days in jail on contempt of court charges by Federal Judge Page Morris in Duluth.

An opinion has been asked of the state's attorney general whether or not the governor "could give us a head of the village for the time being."

BURKHARDT NIPS "CORNER" IN CITY BATHING SUITS

Admits O. K.'ing Loan to Beach Men.

William Burkhardt, deputy commissioner of public works and brother-in-law of Mayor Thompson, is the official who O. K.'d the use of city owned bathing suits by private concessionaires at Clarendon beach. He admitted it frankly yesterday.

Mr. Burkhardt also is the official who approved the hauling away of part of one of the city's south side beaches during April and May. The gravel was sold for $2.50 a cubic yard and the city got nothing.

The 6,000 bathing suits in question were rented by the city hall favorites who have the concession at Clarendon beach. As much as $1,500 a day was received by the concessionaires for the use of the suits, according to Ald. Joseph B. McDonough. The city got nothing.

In explaining his o. k. of the beach grab, Mr. Burkhardt said the gravel was "just rocks, and no good to anybody." He said the city was glad to get rid of it, although he "didn't know it was being sold."

Yesterday Mr. Burkhardt took a similar stand in attempting to explain the bathing suit scandal.

"I was under the impression that the finance committee had approved the sale of the suits to McGrath, one of the concessionaires," he said. "McGrath offered $500. That was a fair price for the 6,000 suits, in my opinion, and I thought the deal went through.

"The suits are just junk, anyway, you know.

The "junk" referred to by Mr. Burkhardt has been a miniature gold mine for the concessionaires, according to Ald. McDonough, who declares that for two years the profits from renting the city's suits has amounted to not less than $50,000 a season.

Mr. Burkhardt said he would order that the use of the city's suits be discontinued at once, in view of Ald. McDonough's charges.

MYSTERY MAN IN SOX CASE TELLS HUNT FOR BURNS

Maharg Says He Faced Guns' and Snakes.

"Billy" Maharg, pal of "Bill" Burns, star witness for the state in the prosecution of the "Black Sox," yesterday in an interview in Philadelphia dissolved the fog of mystery that has surrounded his identity. He told reporters a story of his successful search for Burns through the sage brush trails of Texas.

The story is a wild west thriller, filled with moonshiners' gun play, rattlesnakes, wolves, and the discomforts of the chaparral-cactus trail. Starting in Philadelphia several months after Burns had fled into the brush to escape indictments, Maharg said he followed the former White Sox pitcher through central Texas, along the border, and into Mexico.

His persistency was finally rewarded when he found Burns calmly fishing near Devil's River, several hundred miles from the ball player's ranch.

Not "Peaches" Graham.

Maharg is not "Peaches" Graham, former Cub catcher, as attorneys for the defense have contended. Neither is he a notorious Quaker City gambler. He revealed himself as a dillettante ball player, former prize fighter, and now a fat Philadelphia bachelor of about 40, well known in sporting circles and by professional baseball players. He is a teetotaler.

Next to Burns the state regards him as their most important witness. When he takes the stand some time this week he is not only expected to corroborate Burns' story of the sell out of the world's series by former White Sox players but also to furnish several other sensational details.

Claims Attel Won Fortune.

Some of the high spots which it is believed will feature his testimony are:

"That not only the first two games but also the final game of the series won by Cincinnati was fixed."

"That Abe Attel won a fortune for himself and a clique of New York gamblers."

"That Abe Attel double crossed every one with whom he dealt."

"I would never have been successful in locating Bill Burns had it not been for the fact that I once spent six months hunting and fishing with him in his favorite Texas fishing and hunting grounds," Maharg said yesterday.

All at Ranch Silent.

"I had been to Chicago to talk over the situation with Ban Johnson and one of the state's attorneys. They had said it was vitally necessary that Burns be located. I told them that because of my knowledge of the country I believed I could find him.

"In April I went to San Seba, where the Burns ranch is located. No one would tell me a word about where the former left handed pitcher had fled. Burns' friends had heard that the 'law in Chicago' wanted him and that was enough for them. In spite of my professions of friendship, they turned me down.

"I remembered that the Colorado river was once a favorite fishing place of Burns. I didn't care to ride horseback so I rented a flivver. Near Cherokee I got one of the biggest surprises of my career.

"I knew that somewhere near Cherokee there was a fishing hut 'Bill' had built. I found it shortly before sundown one evening and hurried to the door expecting to find him inside. At the worst I felt sure of a good place to spend the night.

Meets a Rattlesnake.

"Jerking open the door I heard the unmistakable rattle of a rattlesnake."

The former pugilist leaped two feet in the air to illustrate how he jumped when he encountered the squatter tenants of his pal's hut.

"They darted toward me, but I had no intention of staying. I had a hunch then Burns might be at a little back woods town called Milano. It was there that I was taken for a prohibition officer.

Faces Moonshiners' Guns.

"I had noticed a rude building surrounded by several men. Thinking they might be able to give me information I started in their direction. Becoming alarmed, two of the Texans drew guns and covered me. I wasn't long in telling them my business.

"It might have gone hard with me at that, had not one of the fellows recognized me as a friend of Bill's. They offered me a drink of hooch, but they wouldn't tell me where to find Bill.

"One said he might be fishing down yonder, pointing vaguely to the west, but I didn't find him there.

"My next thought was that Burns had a brother-in-law near San Antonio. I looked him up, but he did not know anything about the ball player relation. At Del Rio, a small town near the Mexican border on the Rio Grande, I hunted up his brother. The natives told me the ranch was forty miles up Devil's river, near Comstock.

Finds Bill Catching Fish.

"I took a turn through Mexico and then looked up the brother. The road there was through the wild part of the country, rough and rocky. Cactus bushes furnished the principal vegetation.

"There I learned that Bill was fishing on Devil's river a few miles away. I hired an automobile and drove to his shack. I found him fishing from a rock about fifty feet from the shack. In the water beside him was a string of black bass he had caught.

"Why you 'old son of a gun,' said Bill, 'I reckon its sure a treat to see you again. We had a good supper of fried bass, hot biscuits and black coffee. Bill cooked it himself. Afterward he lit his pipe and I told him what I had come for.

Wolves' Howls Prevent Sleep.

"Burns said hardly a word. The sun set and the stars came out while I talked to him. It was long after midnight before he finally decided to talk the matter over with Johnson and the state authorities.

"We were located in a valley fringed with mountains. Burns had only one cot and he gave me that. Even then I could not sleep because of the howling of wolves, some of which came within a few feet of the hut in the early morning.

"At Del Rio, we met Johnson and Assistant State's Attorney John F. Tyrell. There Burns made his first statement concerning the conspiracy. It was the same story that he related on the stand last week."

Hasty search of the documentary evidence held by the state revealed yesterday that scores of telegrams and private papers taken before the grand jury when three White Sox players confessed to conspiracy to throw the 1919 world's baseball series have disappeared. Loss of the original grand jury statements and the immunity waivers was announced Friday.

Assistant State's Attorney George E. Gorman said he was unable to account for the loss.

ROTHSTEIN TALKS.

New York, July 23.—Arnold Rothstein's expected "details" today of the Chicago baseball scandal proved to be a denial of charges that he was the financial backbone of the Sox fraud.

Rothstein, widely known in the east as a gambler and owner of race horses, at his home in West 84th street told reporters this afternoon that he turned down "Bill" Burns' proposition as an "insult" from a "blackguard."

GOV. SMALL DISCLAIMING EMBEZZLEMENT OF TAXPAYERS' FUNDS

The governor made his first public appearance yesterday following his indictment on charges of embezzling $500,000 of the taxpayers' money and conspiracy to embezzle $2,000,000. With Mayor Thompson, State's Attorney Crowe, and other leaders of the city hall organization the governor attended the "Republican jubilee" at Riverview park.

HORSE, HURDLING, THROWS GIRL; INJURY FATAL

Charlottesville, Va., July 23.—[Special.]—Miss Alice McElroy, debutante, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. McElroy of New York and an expert horsewoman, died last night at University hospital from injuries suffered in a riding accident.

The young woman was showing her grandmother, Mrs. S. R. McElroy, who had just arrived from California, how proficient her favorite mount, recently shipped from the McElroy country place at Belle Mead, N. J., was in taking the hurdles. In taking a jump of medium height the animal tipped the top bar and tossed the rider over its head.

Miss McElroy fell on the ground with such force that she had concussion of the brain.

Though born in Chicago eighteen years ago, Miss McElroy had spent most of her life at White Stone, L. I.

COOKS WITH AIR

Beats City Gas for Cooking and Baking. Works in Any Stove.

A wonderful new burner which works in any coal or wood stove, and beats city gas, coal or wood for cooking and baking, is the proud achievement of the International Heating Co., 4541 N. Broadway, St. Louis, Mo. This amazingly simple and inexpensive invention makes gas in any stove, and is controlled by a simple valve, which makes it ideal for summer cooking. It burns 94% air and 6% kerosene. The recent big cut in price of oil makes it a great money saver. It is perfectly safe and can be installed in twenty minutes. WHEELS VIE WITH MAYOR'S 'JUBILEE' AT RIVERVIEW

Crowe, Newmark, and Piquet There.

Riverview park yesterday was the scene of the Thompson-Lundin Republican "jubilee," but to the casual observer this fact had no effect upon the activities of the paddle wheels and other gambling devices which daily draw a tribute from the pockets of workingmen and the purses of shopgirls and children.

Regardless of the fact that Gov. Len Small and the mayor were in their midst, the wheels whirled round and round. Undaunted by the presence of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, his chief investigator, Ben Newmark, and City Prosecutor Louis Piquet, the drone of the barkers continued and a steady stream of nickels, dimes, and quarters rattled into the big hoppers back of the counters.

Rival Political Ballyhoos.

Even the fact that Gov. Small and the mayor were speaking, explaining how they were being persecuted and prosecuted by the "money interests and the criminal profiteers," did not cause the barkers to pause. Loyal Thompsonite job holders strove in vain to hear the governor tell of his promises to the people.

Instead they heard the ballyhoos enumerating the possibilities of winning a "Shimmying Kewpie" or a basket of fruit or any one of a half dozen other things for "10 cents, a dime, the tenth part of a dollar, and every single, solitary numbah wins a prize."

Apparently, too, none of the many members of the Thompson administration who attended the picnic were any more interested in the gambling than the operators of the concessions were in them.

They Can't See Gambling.

"When are you going to start with the investigation?" Mr. Piquet was asked.

"What investigation?"

"The investigation of gambling here. You always complained that you didn't know there was any gambling, now you can see for yourself."

"I haven't seen any gambling," but the prosecutor refused the reporter's invitation to take a walk around the park and have some of the gambling pointed out to him. He explained that it was his duty to prosecute, not investigate.

The reporter then hunted up Mr. Newmark, the chief investigator, whose duty it is to investigate. But he, too, had seen no gambling and apparently didn't want to see any, for like Mr. Piquet he had no desire to walk around the park. An effort was made to find Mr. Crowe but just then the afternoon speaking was completed and the governor, the mayor, the state's attorney, the county judge and many lesser lights in the organization went away. The wheels, however, never stopped their whirling at their departure.

The governor and Mayor Thompson at ease on the platform after the governor had finished speaking. The mayor and other administration leaders met the governor in conference yesterday morning and assisted the governor in shaping his remarks.

Adopted Child of Late Opera Singer Gets $39,600

New Hartford, Conn., July 23.—[Special.]—Julia Clara Strakosch, adopted daughter of Clara Louise Kellogg, the late concert singer, and her husband, the late Carl Strakosch, was today awarded $39,600 by the Probate court from the estate of Mr. Strakosch on the novel plea that he had promised her that amount before he died. Strakosch was an Austrian, and he and his wife, the former opera singer, had no children. They adopted Julia Clara Harris in New York city twelve years ago.

WORLD WAR A LA CITY HALL STIRS IRE OF PARENTS

Slip 'Wondrous Story' Over on Children.

The Thompson-Lundin machine now seeks the impressionable ears of Chicago's school children with its own version of the war.

"The Wondrous Story of Illinois" is the title of a seventeen page booklet, distributed to school children at the annual Riverview Park outing, which is being criticised by parents as an effort to sow propaganda among 500,000 pupils of the public schools.

As an embellishment the booklet carries a replica of a typewritten letter from Edwin S. Davis, president of the board of education, in which he says the picnicking children are met "to play and to learn," and that the pamphlet is placed in their hands to inspire them "to emulate those noble souls who have made our grand commonwealth what it is today."

Two Sun-Crowned Heroes.

As Mr. Davis continues:

"Illinois, true to her name, has produced great men. From the days of the early explorers down to and including our present Gov. Small and Mayor Thompson, Illinois has given to the people of our state, our nation and the world, tall, sun-crowned men who have made profound impressions not only on their own times, but who, 'departing, have left behind them footprints on the sands of time.'"

After the two "sun crowned" heroes—Gov. Small and Mayor Thompson—the head of the school board mentions Abraham Lincoln.

Under the caption, "Illinois and the World War," are the passages to which the parents of school children have taken strenuous exception.

"The army of 2,000,000 men sent to Europe by the United States won the war for the allies as against the central powers," the story states. "Our army probably saved England, France, and Italy from destruction, but cost more than 100,000 American lives, while a quarter of a million or more were wounded or sustained injuries.

"The cost in money to the American people was at least $50,000,000,000, and a national debt was created which our people will not be able to pay for years and years. Nobody seems able to point to any definite benefit which the American people received for the sacrifices."

What's a Fact Among Friends?

After referring to the reëlection of President Wilson in 1916 the attack continues:

"Within a few weeks after he was inaugurated for his second term he appeared before congress with a request that war be declared against Germany. With practically no investigation, and with less than two hours' debate, congress on April 6, 1917, voted the United States into war. A nationwide propaganda was immediately instituted to prevent and discourage the American people from inquiring why we were at war or what we expected to accomplish through it."

The "Wondrous Story" then lauds Mayor Thompson for giving sanctuary to the "Council for Democracy and Terms of Peace" in 1917, when the nation was straining every resource toward successful participation in the war. The "council," which comprised a number of radical pacifists, had previously been refused permission to hold its sessions in South Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

But no mention is made of the ordering out of the soldiers by Gov. Lowden to stop the meeting—the troops arrived too late—not a word either of the refusal of the mayor to invite Gen. Joffre to Chicago.

ERIN SEES BASIS FOR SETTLEMENT IN BRITISH PLAN

Sinn Fein Heads Digest Premier's Proposal.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 23.—There is a growing feeling of optimism that the Irish problem is well on the road to settlement in official circles here as a result of reports received in London from Ireland.

Sir John Anderson, who arrived from Dublin today, reported that all indications there pointed to acceptance of the government's offer as a basis for a conference at which the details of peace will be worked out.

Nature of Terms Veiled.

Both sides assert most positively that none of the forecasts of terms published in England or America are more than more or less intelligent guesses.

Prime Minister Lloyd George has promised Eamonn de Valera that there will be no publication here until the Irish leader has had a chance to present the terms to his colleagues. This action was tagen to enable Mr. de Valera to forestall any hostile action by Irish extremists.

Proposal Delights Erin.

All that can be said definitely is that the terms are so generous that they astonished the Irish, who expected long haggling to obtain anything worth considering and that, on broad lines, they comprise dominion status for the north and south, with provisions for eventual union and certain reservations made necessary by the geographical proximity of the two countries.

The date for the full meeting of Dail Eireann has not yet been fixed, but it probably will be held in a week or ten days.

NO CHANGE IN ULSTER VIEW

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BELFAST, July 23.—The principal point in the government's offer to Eamonn de Valera is declared here to be fiscal autonomy for southern Ireland. This was the question on which the Irish convention broke up, as it was strongly opposed by the northern unionist delegates. Of course acceptance by the southern parliament of fiscal autonomy would involve reconsideration of the question in the north.

DUBLIN SEES SETTLEMENT.

DUBLIN, July 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—The impression is growing here that the Irish peace offer made by Premier Lloyd George to Eamonn de Valera, the republican leader, will work out in a settlement.

Mr. de Valera, Arthur Griffith, Alderman Cosgrove and Liam Roisite, Sinn Fein member of parliament for Cork, met at the Mansion house today and discussed the peace terms.

Mr. de Valera afterward told an interviewer that there was nothing to report, adding he believed there would be nothing definite for a few days.

Smuts Going to Ireland.

LONDON, July 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. Jan C. Smuts, the South African premier, is expected to leave London for Ireland early next week, probably Monday, to place his services at the disposal of both Eamonn de Valera and Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, during their critical consideration of the Irish peace proposals made by Premier Lloyd George.

ALDERMEN SEEK A SHOWDOWN ON EXPERT RECORDS

U. S. Gets Data, but They Don't; Want to Know Why.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

"Are the official records of the city the private property of administrative officials?" That is the issue upon which the council subcommittee, investigating expert fee payments, expects to have a showdown this week.

The subcommittee started its attack Friday by filing a petition in the Circuit court for a mandamus to compel Deputy Controller Louis E. Gosselin to "permit your petitioners"—Aldermen Schwartz, Guernsey, and Woodhull—"to examine at all reasonable times all papers, vouchers, contracts, bonds, receipts, warrants, books of accounts, and other things" relating to the payment of expert fees to Ernest H. Lyons, Arthur S. Merigold, Frank H. Mesce, Edward C. Waller Jr., and Austin J. Lynch for the years 1919, 1920, and 1921. In the natural course of court business that will be heard by Judge Brothers this week.

Committee Launches New Move.

Yesterday the committee launched another offensive, which may result in getting all of the experts, except Lyons, into court within a short time. This was in the form of a letter from Chairman Schwartz to the four experts. It asserts that President Faherty of the board of local improvements testified before the finance committee last March that he had entered into a five year contract with the experts by which they "were employed for the years 1920 to 1924 inclusive as regular city employés of the board of local improvements and of the city of Chicago."

Then the alderman goes on: "We are advised by our counsel that if the agreement between yourself and Mr. Faherty is a valid and legal agreement, you, as an employé of the city of Chicago, are under legal obligation to submit for our inspection at our request all reports, maps, plats, estimates and figures compiled by you in the exercise of your duties as an employé of the city of Chicago, and also to give this subcommittee a full report of all work done by you for the city and to answer all questions concerning your employment and the performance of your duties."

Demands the Four Appear Tuesday.

Then followed a demand that each of the four experts appear next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. If they fail to respond or fail to give information requested, the aldermen propose to find out whether they are city employés. If it is determined by the court that they are, then the court will be asked to order them to comply with yesterday's letter under penalty. If the court finds they are not city employés, then there will be a court decision of record on that point.

The committee claims to have "been hindered and hampered by obstructive tactics" of the city administration. The petition filed with the Circuit court Friday makes the subcommittee appear ridiculous on one point in contrast with the information which the federal government has collected.

Comparison of Figures.

Both have filed for court record the amounts received by the experts in 1919. The comparison of the two follow:

Expert paid.	Aldermen.	U.S.Gov't.
Austin J. Lynch...	$ 40,960.21	$ 66,144.37
Ernest H. Lyons..	38,193.43	68,421.19
Frank H. Mesce...	42,958.02	70,316.58
Edward C. Waller Jr.	35,768.43	67,821.19
Arthur S. Merigold	20,037.12	20,037.12
Totals..............	$177,917.21	$292,740.45

If the federal government can obtain the information from the city regarding the payments to the experts the aldermen cannot understand why they cannot obtain the same information, especially when the city code asserts that the official records shall be open to the aldermen. But the subcommittee lacks considerable of finding out how much has been paid the experts in 1919, according to the statements made in Judge Landis' court Friday.

The aldermen say they sent Deputy Controller Gosselin a letter on July 13 asking him for "all warrants, vouchers, orders, correspondence, documents, ledgers, records, books of account, canceled checks, blue prints, maps, letters, contracts and documents of every sort and description" relating to the payment of expert fees. Gosselin made no reply, but later refused orally to give the subcommittee any information. Now the aldermen find out that the federal income tax collector has obtained more information than they have been able to gain to date.

BULLDOGS STEER IN 9 SECONDS, WORLD RECORD

Mike Hastings of Cheyenne, Wyo., made a new world record in steer bulldogging at the cowboy contests in Grant park last night. He pinned his steer in 9 seconds flat. The former record was 9 2-5 seconds, made by Slim Caskey of Wichita Falls, Tex. Hastings' feat practically cinches the world's championship for him if he succeeds in pinning his ninth steer this afternoon in fast time. Caskey is running a close second.

In the calf roping contest Fred Beason of Arkansas City, Kas., is leading Eddie Burgess of Schulter, Okla., by only nine seconds on the eight calves. This means Beason's title is in danger today.

Bryan Roach of Fort Worth, Tex., winner of the world's championship in bronk riding last year, is not in the finals this time. The riders in the finals this afternoon and evening are Yakima Canutt of La Crosse, Wash.; Joe Hut of Grand Cañon, Ariz.; Howard Tegland of Miles City, Mont.; Dave White of Sheridan, Wyo.; Jesse Coates of Bozeman, Mont.; Ray Bell of Cheyenne, Wyo.; Bob Askins of Miles City, Mont., and Hippy Burmeister of Los Angeles.

The contests close tonight.

ST. MATTHEW'S TO HAVE PICNIC.

St. Matthew's, one of the oldest Roman Catholic parishes in the diocese, will hold its annual parish picnic next Saturday, July 30 at Elm Tree grove, 6543 Irving Park boulevard. The Rev. John J. Gearty is in charge of arrangements. One of the features will be a number of athletic contests. The Rev. James A. Flood is the pastor of St. Matthew's, which is at Walnut street and Albany avenue.

HARRIMAN LINES TO RUN 5 SHIPS SEIZED BY U. S.

Firm Denies It Is in Board's Debt.

New York, July 23.—The United American line temporarily will operate the five passenger liners seized last night from the United States Mail Steamship company by the shipping board, according to J. B. Smull, an operating director of the board, to avert interference with plans and contracts made by passengers.

The first to sail will be the George Washington for France Aug. 3, with 250 members of the American Legion.

The United American lines is a subsidiary of the American Ship and Commerce corporation, of which W. A. Harriman is president. A year ago, it was announced, it had contracted with the Hamburg-American to reopen former German trade routes.

Has Contract with Germans.

The United States Mail Steamship company has a similar contract with the North German Lloyd, which, so far as is known, never has been approved by the shipping board. Its details have not been made public.

Decision to seize the ships was made last Thursday at Washington, at a full meeting of the shipping board, Mr. Smull said, and the action was unanimous.

The alleged dereliction of the company in the matter of payments was called to the attention of the new board by the district auditor, and it was former Chairman Benson, now one of the commissioners, who suggested the course taken.

According to Elmer Schlesinger, general counsel of the shipping board, who was with Mr. Smull, the board has got to get down to a business basis.

Replying to a charge made today by officials of the United States Mail that the shipping board owed it money, Mr. Schlesinger said he was in a position to say that the shipping board did not owe the company anything.

Francis R. Mayer, president of the company from which the five steamships were seized on the ground of failure to pay $400,000 rent, insisted again that instead of the line owing money to the board the board owed $2,000,000 to the company. He said the company had given the board more than $250,000 as an advance upon rentals and that, in fact, the board had been overpaid.

Anti-American Bias?

E. A. Quarles, another official, said the shipping board seizure "is the culmination of efforts that have been put forth by foreign competitors and allied American interests, ever since we organized a year ago, to keep the American flag off the Atlantic."

This charge also was vigorously denied by the shipping board officers.

Three of the additional ships which the shipping board announced it would seize now are in foreign waters or on the sea. The Princess Matoika arrived at Bremen July 2, the Potomac is due here from Bremen July 27, and the Pocahontas arrived at Naples July 4.

A New Mixup Follows.

Complication arose tonight when Emil Lederer, traffic manager of the United American lines, made an unsuccessful attempt to secure possession of the United States Mail Steamship company's business office at 45 Broadway.

He presented a letter from Mr. Smull directing him to take possession of the premises. The agent in charge, however, said no such authority would be recognized, and denied him admission to the offices.

Custer, S. D., July 23.—Joseph Foertsch, ranger, charged with having shot and killed his wife, was captured near Fairburn today. He had been hiding since the commission of the crime last night.

"A Car That Never Wears Out"

Of course, that can not be literally true. But because of the ease with which adjustments can be made and replacements installed, the Hudson Super-Six has virtually a perpetual life.

No Super-Six seems ever to have become wholly disabled through wear. In fact, in various parts of the country men make a business of buying up old Hudsons and restoring them. You would be surprised at the slight cost necessary to put a Super-Six in good condition. No special skill not found in the average repair shop is required.

And the fact that Hudson body lines have been so consistently expressive of good taste makes them acceptable when more extreme types have become "Old Fashioned."

Because of these facts you will find Hudsons six years old that are nearing a hundred thousand miles of service.

WARD FEUD ADDS TWO-GUN JOHNNY TO DEATH ROLL

Slayer Escapes; 35 Land in Police Dragnet.

Murders in 19th Ward Feud Since Jan. 1....... 11

"Two Gun Johnny" Gardino, lieutenant of Tony D'Andrea and said by the police to have been delegated by the dying political leader to exact revenge for his killing, became No. 11 yesterday on the list of murder victims in the Nineteenth ward feud.

Gardino was shot three times and fatally wounded as he stood in front of a grocery at 947 West Polk street, three doors from his former home. He died while en route to the Jefferson Park hospital.

Slayer Flees; 35 Seized.

His slayer escaped, but by midnight the Maxwell street police were holding thirty-five men for questioning. These were picked up in raids on poolrooms near the scene of the shooting.

The first knowledge the police received of the shooting was obtained when three men in an automobile truck bearing Gardino's body pulled up at the hospital. The hospital authorities grabbed one of the men; the other two fled, leaving the truck behind.

According to the story told by the captured man, whose name has not yet been learned, Gardino was standing with two other men in front of the grocery of Anton Basili, 947 Polk street, when a heavy set Italian, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, walked up to him and fired six times. Gardino dropped with three bullets in his body. His companions commandeered a passing truck and rushed him to the hospital.

Sealed Lips Balk Police.

Police arriving at the scene from Maxwell street station found the usual policy of sealed lips in force. They discovered, however, that Gardino formerly lived at 943 West Polk street, and that diagonally opposite, at 934 Polk street, stood the poolroom of Giuseppe Nuzzo.

Shortly after the murder last March of Paul Labriola, one of Ald. John Powers' henchmen, Gardino and Nuzzo were standing in front of the latter's place when a big black automobile sped up the street. A hail of bullets came from between its curtains. Gardino dropped, shot through the leg; Nuzzo, with two bullet clipped fingers, yelled for help.

Picked to Revenge D'Andrea?

The police pointed to the fact that Tony D'Andrea, just before his death, had sent a message to Gardino. The message is supposed to have contained the names of D'Andrea's slayers, and Gardino was said to have been chosen as avenger.

After his recovery Gardino continued to make Nuzzo's poolroom his hangout. He was there on May 15 when the police raided it, and captured several wagon loads of gambling equipment. Then he dropped from sight.

He moved to 323 Honroe street. Two weeks ago he left there; no one in that neighborhood knew where he had gone to live.

Nuzzo was taken into custody within an hour of the shooting yesterday; so was Gardino's nephew. Neither told the police anything of importance, they say.

The slayer after the shooting walked a few steps to a nearby building, turned into a tiny areaway between stores, and disappeared. No one recognized him, it was said.

Gardino had been taken into custody many times by the police. He was noted as a gun toter. He was questioned regarding the murder of Paul Loberg, Milwaukee avenue jeweler, and was identified April 7 as one of four men who robbed Morris Rissman, 3323 West Fifteenth street, of $165 and a diamond ring. Yet the identification bureau last night declared it had no record of him.

The Feudist's Death Roll.

His death marks the eleventh slaying connected by the police with the Nineteenth ward feud since March 9. The first two to meet death were Paul Labriola and Harry Raymond, Powers henchmen. Then came Tony Marchese. Then the pendulum began to swing the other way. D'Andrea himself was slain.

Then a body of an Italian was found tied in a sack in the drainage canal at Summit. On May 26 Michael Laccari, former D'Andrea pal, was shot to death. On June 22 Clemento Basile met the same fate. Five days later Joseph Laspisa, D'Andrea bodyguard, was killed, and on July 7 his friend, Joseph Sinacola, was slain.

Thursday night Andrew Ortlando, 1648 West Ohio street, was riddled with bullets as he sat in his automobile at 103d and Peoria streets. Ortlando was a former D'Andrea lieutenant. The inquest over his body was continued yesterday until Aug. 4.

Overwork Caused Tredick Suicide, Widow Declares

"Up to the moment he fired the shot my husband had not definitely decided on suicide—that is my belief." This is the statement of Mrs. Alton Tredick, whose husband, head of Alton Tredick & Co., 105 West Monroe street, committed suicide in the Plaza hotel Friday. "The only possible reason for suicide is extreme nervousness due to overwork. The inquest was continued.

BARBARY COAST TRIBESMEN ROUT SPANISH TROOPS

10,000 Moroccans Go on the Warpath.

MADRID, July 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—Spanish forces which suffered a reverse at the hands of 10,000 rebellious tribesmen in the Melilla zone of Morocco have received reinforcements and have repulsed all subsequent attacks against them, according to the latest news received here this evening from Morocco.

After the cabinet discussed the situation today, the following communique was issued:

"Rebellious Moors reattacked our positions at Anual with great violence. Their numbers were so great and they were so well armed we were obliged to evacuate the position and several others were recently captured. We withdrew to Dardris. The retreat was most disastrous. We had many casualties and two Spanish colonels were killed. There is no news from Meilila of Gen. Silvestre, giving rise to the fear that he was killed.

Reinforcements on Way.

"Two thousand troops have been urgently dispatched from Ceuta to Melilla. Reinforcements will be sent from other parts of the country to replace troops sent from Melilla and Ceuta."

The newspapers say the fighting continued yesterday, the enemy having received reinforcements, and that the Spanish troops, both peninsular and native, offered stubborn resistance.

Rumors are current here that Gen. Silvestre, commander of the Spanish forces at Melilla, committed suicide on finding himself cut off and surrounded at the head of a small detachment some distance from the main Spanish position.

King Hurries to Madrid.

King Alfonso, who was called to the capital from San Sebastian because of the Moroccan stuation, visited the war minister immediately after his arrival, and then presided at the cabinet meeting. After this meeting the ministers told interviewers that there was no fresh news from Morocco.

It appears, however, that the Moorish tribesmen, who were in great force, took from the Spaniards at the onset, a position which the Spanish troops had previously captured and which the Spanish command mistakenly considered a small garrison was sufficient to retain.

The government has decided to send additional reinforcements from Spain. These troops will not enter the firing line, but will be used to garrison important positions.

To Keep Straightest, Unruliest Hair in Curl

The straightest, contrariest hair can be kept in curl, even in the hottest or dampest weather, by such simple and harmless means, that the use of the drying, singeing, blistering curling iron is altogether inexcusable. One need only get a few ounces of plain liquid Silmerine from the druggist and apply a little to the hair before doing it up. The result is quite remarkable. The hair is delightfully wavy and beautifully glossy, without being in the least greasy, gummy or streaked. The effect lasts very much longer than where curlers alone or waving irons are used.

The Silmerine is best put on with a clean tooth brush, drawing this through the hair from crown to tip, preferably after dividing it into strands. The application seems to gradually improve the texture and health of the hair.

HEROIC FEATS OF POLICE IN THIEF CHASES PRAISED

Lincoln Park Men, Egan's Squad Win Honors.

Two Lincoln park motorcycle policemen, George A. Johnstone and Otto Weber, are sharing honors with the squad of Detective Sergeant John Egan of the detective bureau, though figuring in different exploits.

JOHN O'SHEA.

Johnstone and Weber, who have been cited for bravery many times, stopping runaway horses, rescuing persons from the lake, and making spectacular arrests, captured two alleged auto thieves and recovered two machines Friday in Sheridan road.

The men in the machine threatened to crush Johnstone against the curb. Johnstone jumped from his motorcycle, going at tremendous speed, and lighted on the running board of the auto, gun in hand. The auto stopped. James Walsh, 6619 Newgard avenue, and Harold Sullivan, 1451 Farragut avenue, were taken to the Town Hall station.

Won Tribune's Prize.

Johnstone won THE TRIBUNE'S monthly prize of $100 in August of last year when single handed he captured five bandits, two of them armed with revolvers and three with hammers.

A week ago this morning Johnstone and Weber captured five men in a stolen automobile in Sheridan road, after a running revolver battle which extended over two miles. The policemen's pistols were empty when they made the arrest, but the fugitives didn't know it.

Egan and his squad, consisting of Sergts. Michael McFadden, Arthur Murphy, James McCarthy, and Edward Kennelly, won the praise of Chief Fitzmorris a few days ago when, twenty-five minutes after a holdup had occurred, they had captured the three alleged holdup men.

The saloon of Anton Strazdauske and Charles Sewickas, 5339 South Halsted street, had been robbed of $18 by three men. The men were arrested at the Pistol inn, 5259 Racine avenue. They gave the names of James McCormick, 5402 South Carpenter street; Robert Boyce, 737 West 50th place, and John O'Shea, 958 Garfield boulevard.

Arrest Detroit Suspect.

Motorcycle Policemen Grover Gormley and Leroy Carlson arrested two men in an auto yesterday after a chase. One, who gave the name of Frank Burns, was identified as Fred Andrews, wanted in Detroit on a $13,500 robbery charge. The other, John Connors, had a number of telephone box keys. The police believe the pair have been robbing telephone boxes.

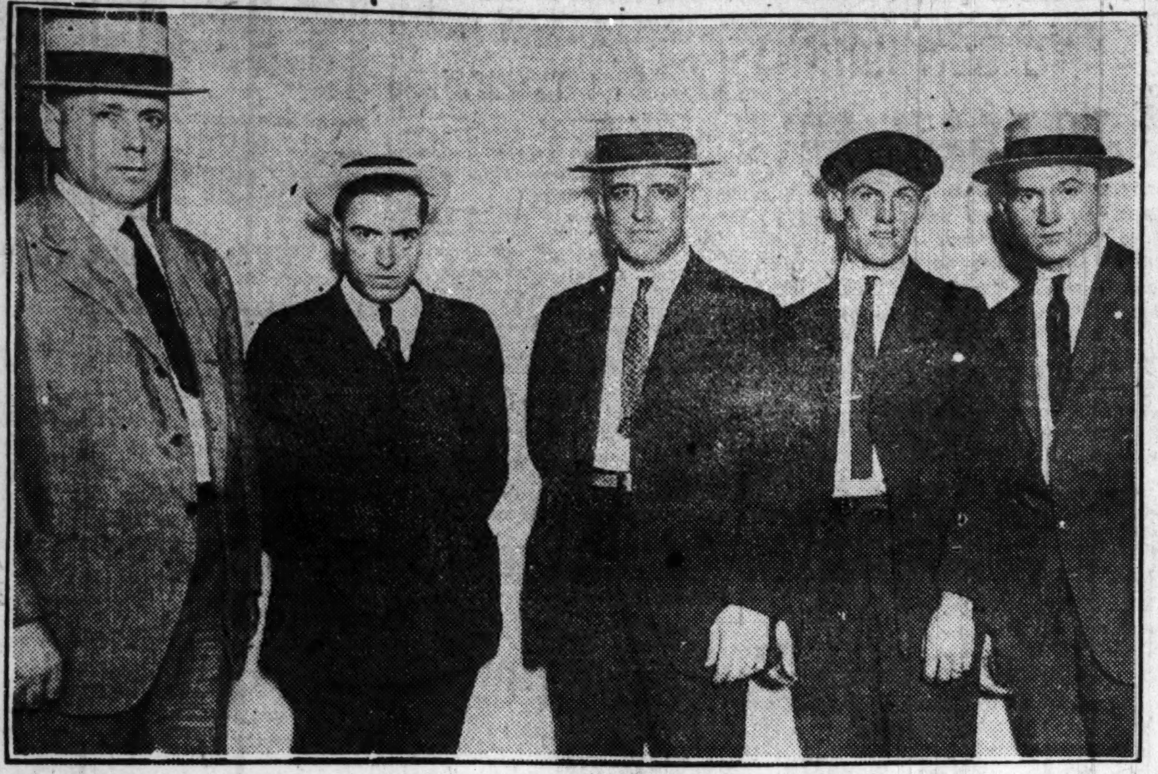
WIFE'S PERFUME BARRAGE LEADS TO DIVORCE SUIT

A perfume barrage was offered as one of the causes for divorce yesterday when R. H. Waldo brought suit against his wife, Vinnie Mae Waldo, in the Superior court.

Attorneys Pennist and Rashbaum, representing Mr. Waldo, allege the wife is possessed of a spirited temper, and occasionally hurls a family skillet or a bit of bric-a-brac.

And further, according to the bill, while in a Broadway drug store last March, Mr. Waldo made a remark about the high cost of powder puffs and other articles. Mrs. Waldo took exception. Then she hurled bottle after bottle of perfume from the druggist's counter at her husband. Waldo's feelings were hurt. He was also compelled to pay the druggist $12 for the perfume.

THEY HAVE EARNED THE POLICEMAN'S D. S. C.



The squad commanded by Sergt. John Egan of the detective bureau, who distinguished themselves a few days ago when, from meager data, they captured three alleged holdup men twenty-five minutes after the robbery occurred. Several weeks ago the squad was commended for the capture of an automobile bandit after a revolver battle. The members are (from left to right) Sergts. Michael McFadden, Edward Kennelly, Egan, Arthur Murphy, and James McCarthy.

ALL "ROMEO AND JULIET" NEEDED WAS GOOD SHOCK

BY EDWARD MOORE.

About all that the week end performance of "Romeo and Juliet" at Ravinia needed to put it on a leve with some of the other good performances there was a shock, something that would jar its component parts together into a whole.

There were details, many of them each a good one of its kind. There was Charles Hackett's "Leve-toi soleil," in the garden scene; there was Marie Sundelius' duet with him just after; the orchestral prelude just before; Margery Maxwell's serenade in the scene following; several others of the same sort. Considered as individual bits they were quite unexceptionable, yet they produced a curious effect as of having no particular relation with each other. They needed coordinating. The separate features were greater than the whole.

The audience was one of the largest of the season. It filled all the seats and overflowed into some half dozen rows of stands at the edge of the pavilion. It was also cordial; the applause for Miss Sundelius and Mr. Hackett at the end of their love scene in the garden was prolonged and genuine.

NEW DRY CHIEF TO KEEP EYE ON ALCOHOL PLANTS

Washington, D. C., July 23.—[Special.] — Prohibition Commissioner Haynes has completed arrangements for the carrying out of thorough technical investigations of the industrial alcohol plants and denaturing plants of the country. All of these plants are operated under government supervision from the time the corn or blackstrap molasses is received on the premises until the finished alcohol is ready for the market.

He also plans for the inspection of colleges, hospitals, and sanitariums, which, under the law, procure alcohol free of tax for scientific, medicinal, and mechanical purposes in order to see that the supplies are kept under secure storage conditions and that the alcohol is used for the legitimate purposes for which it is procured.

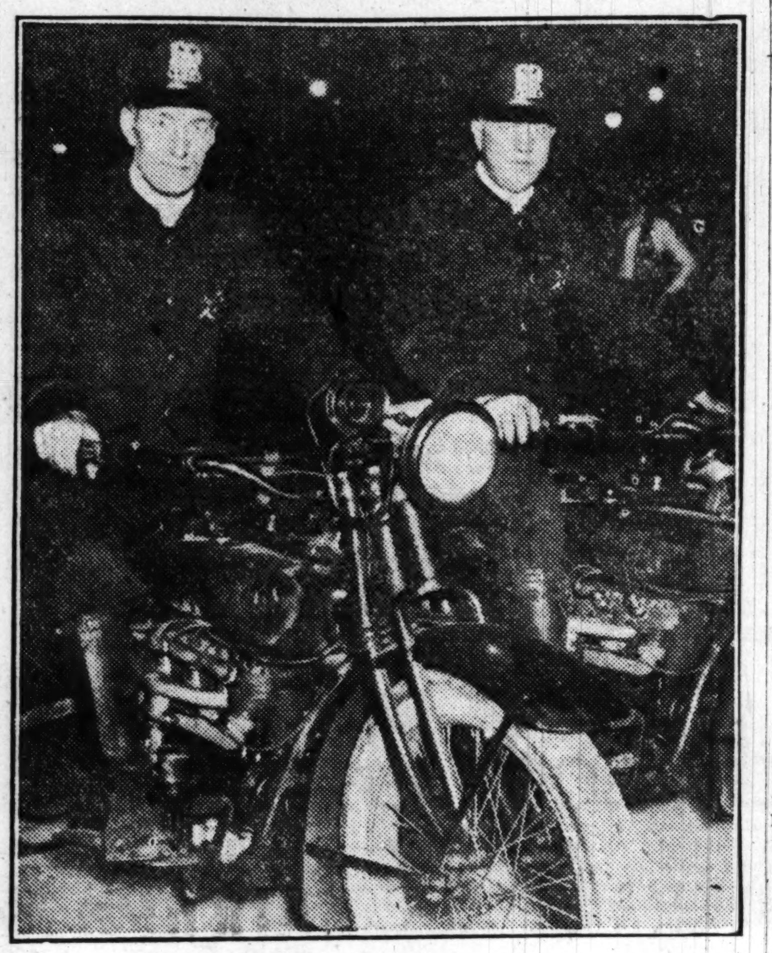
The production and distribution of industrial alcohol is a large industry of itself.

BURGLAR SLAIN WHILE BREAKING INTO TIRE SHOP

An unidentified man was shot and killed early yesterday morning while he and three companions were trying to force their way into the tire repair shop of Albert Sigvedsen at 3910 Grand avenue.

Sigvedsen, who lives with his wife in the rear of the shop, was awakened at 2 o'clock by the noises made by the burglars. He fired a volley of shots. The body of the burglar is in Wold's undertaking rooms at 3357 West North avenue.

William Wuenshe, 2965 Allen avenue, a chauffeur, was shot in the left thigh by one of three holdup men, who were firing at Paul Grosse, 3067 Milwaukee avenue, and Charles Grot.



Motorcycle Policemen George Johnstone and Otto Weber of the Lincoln park force, who have risked their lives on several occasions to take suspected outlaws prisoners. Johnstone's heroic conduct was climaxed early Saturday morning, when he leaped from his racing motorcycle to the running board of an automobile which had attempted to run him into the curb and captured two men in a stolen machine.

FANCY! YOU CAN'T BATHE WITH YOUR DOG IN SUBURB!

Lake Forest Beach Also Bars Mr. Hoi Polloi.

Lake Forest will observe new rules this Sabbath when approaching, sitting beside, and bathing in Lake Michigan. Placards were posted yesterday by the suburb's park board.

Particularly oppressive is the regulation considered which forbids dogs upon the beach. Hereafter society women will be denied the company of their blue-ribbon canines when they sit upon the sand. For Lake Forest administrators have banned the pedigreed purps along with dogs that have only a bar sinister.

"Joint use of a bathing pool by human beings and dogs may be approved in some places," states the placard with dignity, "but there is a legitimate difference of opinion on the subject, and life guards have been instructed to enforce this rule strictly, regardless of the class of dog involved. If one dog is allowed all must be allowed, and when dogs congregate fights usually result."

Bar Old Mr. Hoi Polloi.

Not so democratic is the park board, however, in regard to the species homo. Hoi Polloi of Chicago and his three sons—Tom, Dick, and Harry—are effectively banned from debarking from their flivver and entering the sacred water which abounds just east of Lake Forest by a parking charge of $1 on Sundays and holidays. Citizens of the village may get a season parking ticket for 25 cents.

"Many people in Lake Forest," explains the placard, "thought they could not take their wives and children to the lakeside park because at any time they were likely to be subjected to profanity or other improper language. There were booze parties, beach lizards, and others better not mentioned.

"There was a growing tendency on the part of visitors to use their autos for dressing rooms. Some had decency enough to hang curtains over their machines. Some did not have any regard for occupants of the beach. Many outsiders, both men and women, would undress in shrubbery on the bluff rather than wait until a dressing room was vacant."

Final Shot Hits Pagans.

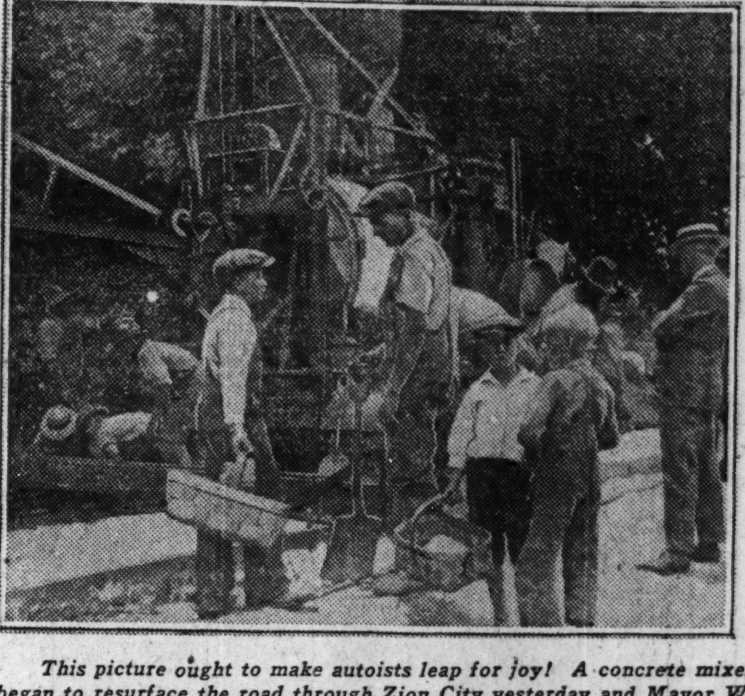
One parting shot is taken at pagan Chicagoans—refraining, however, with the same delicate nicety, from embarrassing the metropolis by specfic mention:

"Bathing costumes for ladies and gentlemen shall be consistent with ordinary principles of decency. Improper costumes shall be noted by the life guards. Some of the costumes worn by visitors have made this action necessary."

New York News to Aid Jobless Ex-Service Men

New York, July 23.—[Special.]—The Daily and Sunday News, New York's picture newspaper, announces in its Sunday issue plans for immediate relief of jobless ex-service men. A fund is started with money sent to the newspaper during the last week following publication of the fact that 100,000 soldiers are jobless hereabouts and the discovery that of 250 homeless sleepers in one park, 122 were found to be former soldiers. Six thousand jobs are to be provided immediately on farms in Connecticut, Long Island, and upstate.

LET JOY BE UNCONFINED



This picture ought to make autoists leap for joy! A concrete mixer began to resurface the road through Zion City yesterday and Mayor W. H. Clendinen (with his arms folded and wearing a straw hat) was on the job to witness the laying of the first stretch, between 21st street and Shiloh boulevard. Within three weeks the north half mile of the road will be complete. A gang is grading the south half between 29th street and 33d street. This will probably take another three weeks. Voliva is considering a 50 or 60 foot pavement through the half mile business district. The state is putting in one mile of the concrete. The City of Zion must take care of the business zone.

FRANCE ORDERS GERMAN TROOPS TO MOVE TROOPS

10,000 Men Ready for Silesia Drive.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 23.—Marshal Foch has designated the 11th infantry division, stationed at Nancy and commanded by Gen. Vidalon, to reinforce the French garrison in Upper Silesia.

M. Laurent, the French ambassador at Berlin, this afternoon asked Wilhelmstrasse to place ten thirty car trains at the disposal of the French forces at Mayence as soon as possible for the purpose of transporting the 10,000 troops, with their complements of field artillery, machine guns, tanks, airplanes, and other services, to Upper Silesia.

France Determined to Act.

Quai d'Orsay today indicated that France would send the reinforcements as soon as the rolling stock was ready regardless of the British and Italian attitude and despite Lord Curzon's exhortation to Ambassador St. Aulaire at London for France not to proceed alone.

In face of the deadlock on the partitioning of Upper Silesia and despite the gravity of the situation it is declared by certain officials that there is the strongest chance that the industrial and mining zone in the plebiscite region will be placed under a special régime like the Sarre basin, except that the administration and control will be in the hands of the supreme council instead of the league of nations. This is advanced as a compromise move to restore allied accord.

Count Sforza sometime ago proposed a boundary which probably will be accepted, but it is likely that the industrial, manufacturing and mining regions in the German and Polish sections of Upper Silesia, while technically under the sovereignty of their respective nations, actually will be under the direction of the supreme council for a period of twenty-five to forty years.

Would Give U. S. a Voice.

A special commission, composed of representatives from France, Great Britain, Italy, Germany, Poland and America, if the United States consents to take part, would administer the region and control the output of the mines and factories to insure a certain proportion of production to Poland and Germany.

It would also regulate prices, prevent discrimination and supervise transportation, labor, the importation of raw materials and all other questions pertaining to the economic life of the region.

6 Army Cantonments to Vanish in Economy Wave

Washington, D. C., July 23.—Six army cantonments will be abandoned by the war department, Secretary Weeks announced today. Two are Camp Devens, Mass., and Camp Meade, Md. The remaining four have not been named. The secretary said one big cantonment, somewhere in the south, would be maintained permanently because of advantages due to climatic conditions. True economy will be practiced by the department in reorganizing the army down to 150,000, it was said.

REDS EXPLOIT FAMINE TO AID SOVIETS' CAUSE

To Launch World Drive for Recognition.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 22.—The Russian bolshevists are preparing to launch a world-wide campaign to obtain recognition of the soviet régime through enlisting the sympathy of all civilized countries and asking them for aid against wholesale starvation from famine due to crop failures.

From White Russian headquarters here it is learned that a committee, headed by Nicolai Lenin and including Maxim Gorky, Leonid Krassin and Leo Kameneff, will soon be sent to England, Italy, Scandivania, Belgium, Switzerland, and South America for the purpose of seeking aid for the starving Russians by lifting the commercial blockade and to encourage trade treaties with Moscow.

Seek French Recognition.

Well founded reports indicate that the sovietists are preparing formally and officially to recognize the old Russian debt to France in return for French recognition of the present government.

Moscow believes that if the French will withdraw their objections to the soviet government the United States will emulate their example, thus clearing up all difficulties, as Great Britain and Italy have resumed relations, but the latter have hesitated at fully restoring commercial dealings through fear of becoming involved with Washington and Paris because the Russians attempted to sell them concessions and other properties formerly held by French and American citizens.

The French government has already expressed its willingness to negotiate with the sovietists as soon as the Russians recognize the French debt.

REDS APPEAL TO WORLD

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, July 23.—From the Russian embassy here it was officially learned today that an appeal has been sent to the International Red Cross asking that the American Red Cross food depots in the Baltic states be placed at the disposal of Moscow and Petrograd committees for the relief of the famine stricken in Russia.

According to information received here special leagues have been formed throughout Russia to which members of all parties and beliefs, including the monarchists, belong. These leagues are endeavoring to aid the starving multitudes.

The Russians hope the American Red Cross depots at Helsingfors and Wiborg in Finland and the depots in Esthonia, which were originally destined for Russia, will not be turned over to them.

LINCOLN
MOTOR CARS
$7.05 was the lowest automobile license tax paid for 1921 in Eaton county Michigan, according to a Detroit newspaper, on a one-cylinder car, now 17 years old, still in good condition, and in daily use on the village streets.

The car is one of some twenty thousand of its kind built by Henry M. and Wilfred C. Leland in the early days of the industry, when you could count on your fingers the men who had the vision to foresee the almost limitless possibilites of the motor car.

And as it later proved, those LELAND-BUILT cars were merely the forerunners of the many developments and betterments which were subsequently inaugurated by these same men.

The same dogged stamina which has carried that car thru 17 years unflinching service, but which stamina has been intensified by rich and ripe experience, is the dominant characteristic in the LELAND-BUILT car of today—The LINCOLN.

And to LINCOLN qualities of sturdiness and endurance, there is added a measure of riding and driving comfort which is proving a positive revelation, even to those who have never counted cost in their motoring equipment.

COSTLY DOLLAR BLOCKS YANKEE EXPORTS TRADE

Plan Proposed for a World Standard.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., July 23.—[Special.]—As a means of increasing American foreign trade, now suffering from adverse monetary exchange conditions Controller of the Currency Crissinger has proposed to President Harding the initiation of negotiations with other powers for the establishment of an international exchange standard.

With such a standard established and supported by the principal nations international balances would be paid at fixed and permanent rates of exchange and the United States would regain the foreign trade which is now being diverted to countries in which products can be purchased more cheaply than in the American markets with its high and fluctuating exchange rate.

Cites Cuba's Experience.

Controller Crissinger explained to THE TRIBUNE correspondent today his proposal which he has submitted not only to the President but to the leading bankers of the country. In the course of the interview Mr. Crissinger adverted to the plight of the American farmers, who he believes are suffering primarily from too much speculation on the tide of high war prices.

"We are all familiar," said Mr. Crissinger, "with the processes by which inflation of money and credits together with the scarcity of goods and services, has caused a continuing depreciation of money and appreciation of prices. We have seen the classic illustration in Cuba's experience, of how a country may find itself caught in a terrific crisis at the end of a long period of unprecedented prosperity. At the beginning of the war, almost anybody, if informed that for five years the island would have huge crops of sugar and sell them at the enormous prices it actually did receive, would have said: 'Cuba will be in proportion to population the richest country in the world at the war's end.'

Tempted to Extravagance.

"Instead, Cuba is in great distress, because its good fortune tempted it to extravagance, speculation, inflation of money, credit, and prices. Yet, if you smile the smile of superior sophistication at little Cuba, caught in the war, of its super-prosperity, I will retort that Cuba and our own midwest farming country are in precisely the same pickle. The farmers made money so fast on the high prices, that 'everybody' did exactly what 'everybody' did in Cuba—went to speculating in farms, forcing the prices higher and higher, selling and reselling on small payments, and discounting the notes which represented deferred payments. Then the price of cotton and wheat and corn and hogs started downward on the same path that Cuba's sugar was following; and our farmers and agricultural speculators found themselves in full fellowship with Cuba's planters.

"So we see the profits of the profiteer, whether in Cuba or here, have disappeared. He cannot meet his notes, the banks cannot afford to carry him, and both he and the banks are being squeezed. Pretty much everybody is directly or indirectly affected and all of them together stop spending simply because they have nothing to spend. We call it a buyers' strike, but it is really a buyers' paralysis, a clotted circulation, a case of credits congested and 'frozen.'"

Discussing his plan for the establishment of an international exchange standard, Mr. Crissinger said:

"We need to increase our exports, but in our new quality as a great creditor country we find it more difficult than ever to export more than we import. The difficulty is increased by the fact that our money is the best in the world—the most expensive. On a gold basis five Italian lire would buy a dollar's worth of goods from us. But the lira is so depreciated that it takes more nearly twenty now to buy a dollar. Naturally the Italian wants to get into a market where he gets more for his money; and our money being at the top of the entire heap, they are all trying to get things somewhere else rather than from us.

"No two money systems have been depreciated in the same degree; none of them maintains any fixed relation to any other. They all fluctuate incessantly, adding the complications of uncertainty to the fundamental difficulties that grow out of our generally higher standard of money values in relation to gold. Is there any way in which, for the purposes of international trade, something like an international standard could be fixed, wherein to pay international balances at reasonably fixed and permanent rates of exchange? Is it possible to help the foreign countries to maintain one currency, with especially sound resources behind it, as a currency of international circulation, regardless of the domestic use of the present depreciated moneys of internal circulation?

America Must Take Hand.

"I am aware that there has been much opposition to the United States becoming a party to any such coöperation in the effort to create an international medium for the purposes of international trade. It has been assumed that because our money was the best in the world—the most expensive in terms of gold—we could not afford to become partners in any international trade banking plan with states whose moneys were of lower quality. But I think it possible that as we realize the discrimination that other nations are compelled to exercise against us for the very reason that our money is so much more expensive than theirs we will be less and less disposed to hold aloof from plans which might be efficacious if we were party to them, and which, if backed by a banking structure based on especially segregated and guaranteed proportions of the national credit of many countries, might be found practicable, sound, and workable. For myself, I believe the plan deserves most serious consideration and that this country could well assume an attitude of interest, even of initiative, in behalf of such a program."

PREPARING COMPETITION FOR DEMPSEY

Capt. F. L. Beals, in charge of the 600 young men who are undergoing military training at Camp Roosevelt, has his hands full when he referees a bout like the above. The lads are sprightly millers, and the captain is apt to get in the way of a punch if he isn't careful. And no one in that circumstance is to blame but the captain, because, as you can see, the boxers are blindfolded. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

W. W. White of 313 Wisconsin avenue has asked THE TRIBUNE to help find Guy McLaughlin, whose father, Jean McLaughlin, died suddenly from heart failure last Monday at Cincinnati. It is believed young McLaughlin is in Chicago. He was employed by a west side firm three months ago. Funeral arrangements await word from the son, who is the only heir.

Exchange Brings Drop in China's Exports to U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SHANGHAI, July 23.—The value of exports from China to America for the first half of 1921 show a decline of approximately $11,000,000, according to a report issued today by the American consul general in this city. Foreign exchange has been a large factor in the decrease, since many commodities show an increase in the quantity shipped.

The total trade for the half year 1921 totaled $37,980,285 gold, as compared with $48,985,858 for the same period in 1920.

SAFETY COUNCIL FIGHTS ANNUAL $25,000,000 LOSS

Employs 328 to Train People of Chicago.

What the Chicago Safety council has done during the first year of its existence to prevent accidents and fire losses, now causing an estimated annual economic loss in this district of $25,000,000, is detailed in a report issued yesterday for the period ending July 1.

Fostered by Harold F. McCormick, in coöperation with the Chicago Association of Commerce and the National Safety council, the Chicago Safety council was formed April 16, 1920.

Since Aug. 16, 1920, the council has:

Organized four divisons and twenty committees, actively engaging 328 men and women in its work, including business men, physicians, safety engineers, lawyers, clubwomen, representatives of juvenile organizations, and other.

Conducted a school for safety supervisors, graduating 283 men qualified to supervise safety work in industry.

Succeeded, through coöperation of board of education, in having safety and fire prevention taught in all Chicago public schools.

Conducted foremen's safety instruction course, with average attendance of 525 foremen, representing 50,000 workers, at ten meetings.

Assumed charge of annual fire prevention day, and aided in promoting sane Fourth of July celebrations.

Coöperated in Americanization activities by addressing 18,000 persons in parks and playgrounds.

1921 IS REWARDING FIGHTERS

EUROPE HAS NOT FORGOTTEN HER CRIPPLED HEROES

Mutilated Men Reborn by Thousands.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 23.—Europe's cripples of the great war are well treated and receiving fairly adequate financial assistance in the shape of pensions from their respective governments, according to statistics obtained from CHICAGO TRIBUNE investigators in England, France, Belgium, Italy, and Germany.

The different governments are handling the situation to the best of their ability despite the desperate state of their finances and the high taxes, and special organizations, under the control of medical boards, have been established to handle the cases of disabled and blind veterans.

Thrift Aids War Victims.

The proverbial thrift of the continental peoples has proven an important factor in the relief of mutilated men, as nearly all the cripples have relatives living in the country who are willing to take them in either for nothing or for nominal board, which the cripple can pay from his pension.

English cripples are also benefiting through the fact that practically every one had some near relative engaged in making munitions during the war, drawing high wages and saving something, thus enabling them to aid their stricken relatives now.

Public Opinion Spurs Work.

The allied nations expect to get back money paid out in pensions from the reparations to be paid by Germany and, in face of the public opinion, treasury officials and prime ministers do not dare neglect the cripples nor to refuse to grant pensions and allowances.

The war crippled in the allied countries and in Germany have formed organizations to protect their rights and all have powerful senators, deputies, and wealthy leading citizens espousing their cause and protecting their interests.

Statistics, however, reveal that many of the mutilated and blind are committing suicide through despondency, marital troubles and impoverishment. The figures also show that thousands who suffered head wounds and were trepanned are dying although their operations had been considered successful.

France's Army of Cripples.

The total number of war cripples in France is estimated at 1,500,000 by the reparations commission, of which 60,000 have been reëducated, that is, taught to live despite their maimings, and it is estimated another 100,000 will be reëducated by the state.

The government has been maintaining eighty reëducation and readaptation schools, but it has just reduced the number to fifty-eight owing to the disinclination of the cripples to attend. Generally the cripples prefer to live with their relatives or to find jobs somewhere, receiving pensions besides.

Reëducated cripples receive state loans of 2,000 francs [normally about $400] at 1 per cent and repayable in ten years, their pledges being taken in security.

Pension Scale in France.

Pensions for total incapacity amount to 2,400 francs, plus special allowances of another 1,000 francs annually.

The blind are in another category, receiving 6,000 francs annually.

The war cripples all over France are grouped into local organizations, and also have formed three national federations with headquarters at Paris, where they exercise strong political pressure. Minister of Pensions Andre Maginot is himself a war cripple.

This year's budget provides 3,000,750,000 francs for army pensions, 44,500,000 francs for naval pensions, and 15,000,000 francs for civilians who were victims of the war.

A number of American welfare organizations are assisting in reëducational work, especially among the blind.

Other Benefits Received.

War cripples receive reduced rates on railway, street cars, omnibus, and bread tickets. The legless receive tricycles operated by arm power.

The blind, who, just after the armistice were able to sell many trinkets and objects which they had made, are now unable to dispose of their products because of competing factory labor and they are returning to state homes for support.

The British do nothing for the war disabled after they are discharged from the hosiptals as cured, except to provide artificial legs and arms if necessary, but every British former soldier receives an adequate pension based on the percentage of disability and graded according to rank.

How Britain Aids Heroes.

The totally disabled private soldier receives 30 shillings [normally about $7.50] weekly, the half disabled man receives 15 shillings, and so on.

A board of medical experts grades the cripples and all must appear periodically for examination to learn if they are enabled to work or to improve their condition.

Much complaint has been made recently about former soldiers begging in the streets, playing hand organs and selling post cards, but these generally are able bodied men who have not been able to obtain jobs and who are not entitled to pensions.

The relief of crippled German soldiers is centralized under the control of the ministry of labor, but the department is handicapped by lack of funds.

Germany's Welfare Plan.

Officials of the German National Association of War Cripples, War Widows, and War Orphans gave the following outline of the Berlin government's welfare work:

The total number of war cripples receiving relief is 1,350,000, for whom the government allows 500,000,000 marks annually. This is distributed in pensions, which vary according to the degree the man is incapacitated for working.

Those classed as 50 per cent incapacitated are called slightly wounded and received last year monthly allowances of 50 marks each.

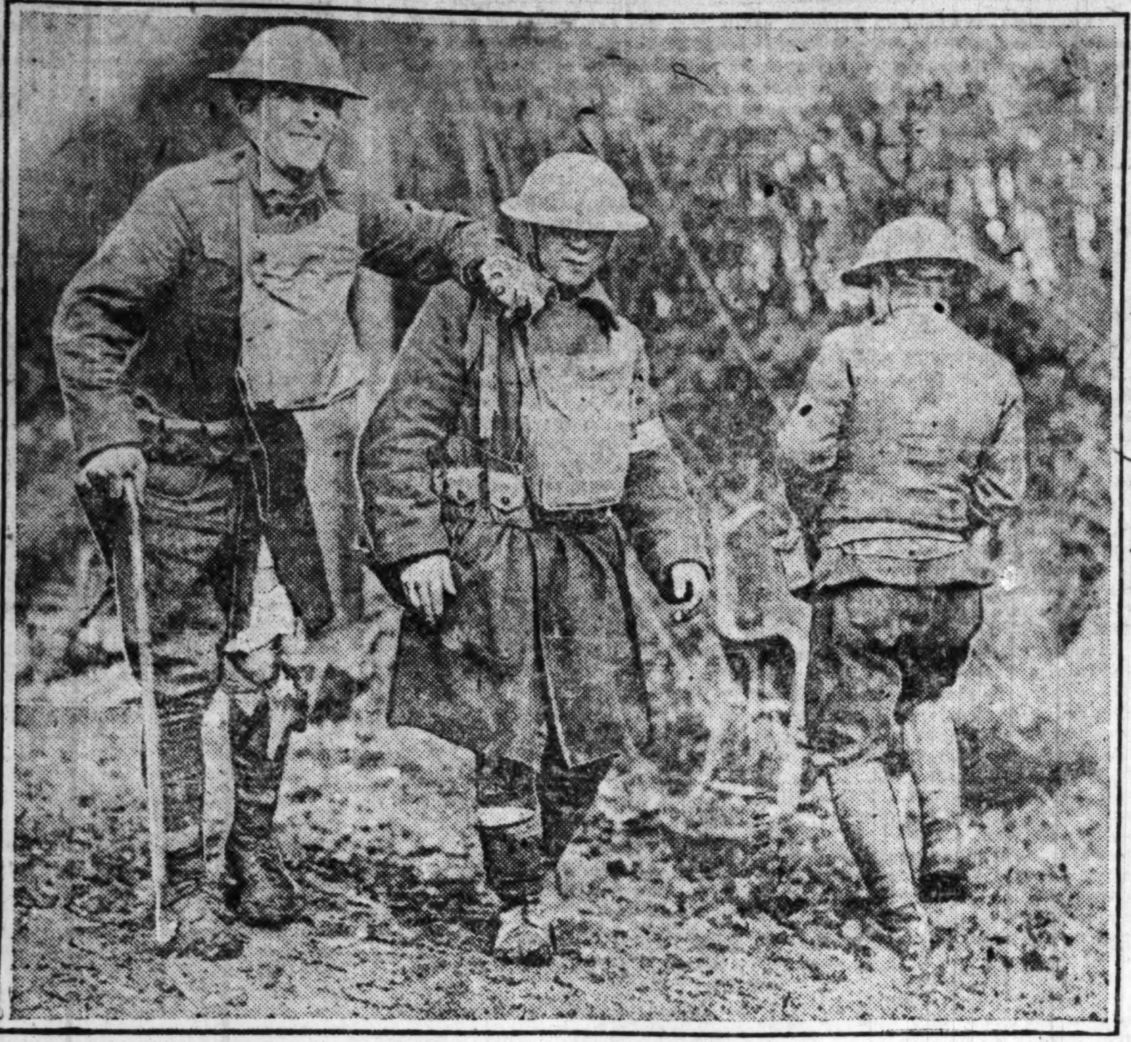
More than half the incapacitated are divided into two groups—those who are still capable of doing some work receive 200 marks monthly, and those who are classified as unfit for occupation but who nevertheless are employed receive 100 marks monthly.

The totally incapacitated receive five or six hundred marks a month according to the number of dependents in their families.

"Hundreds of cases are brought to attention daily of families who are not able to live on the inadequate allowances," said Herr Schumann, secretary of the war cripples' association. "As a result it is necessary to organize private societies to extend additional relief to worthy cases. However, these societies have been able to raise only an insignificant amount of money."

A law has just been passed in Germany which compels all firms with fifty or more employés to hire at least two per cent cripples.

HE DID HIS JOB WITH A SMILE



A copy of this picture has been sent by Capt. James C. Russell of Chicago to every member of congress to help push relief legislation.

BATTLE HORROR RECALLED TO AID MAIMED YANKS

Chicago Captain Puts Spurs to Congress.

To jolt the memories of senators and representatives deliberating on beneficial legislation for ex-service men James C. Russell of Blackhawk post, 107, American Legion, has sent a post card to all of them. The missive depicts a soldier who only a few minutes before the photograph was taken, received two gunshot wounds. He grins cheerfully as he is being helped away from the line by a member of the medical corps.

Mr. Russell appended to the card this note:

"Sir: This man, a soldier of the 27th division, helped to smash the Hindenburg line near St. Souplet, Oct. 19, 1918. What are YOU going to do to smash the shameful inertia that prevents him and his comrades from getting just treatment at the hands of the government for which they fought? JAMES C. RUSSELL,

"104 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill."

They Did "a-Plenty."

Already several congressmen have replied to the postcard. Here are typical answers:

"You bet I am in favor of helping them," Representative W. F. Stevenson of South Carolina wrote. "There were four companies of the 30th division from my district and what they, along with the 27th division, did to the Hindenburg line was a-plenty. I have pending a bill to give some relief to the wounded emergency officer, but the powers that be won't let my bill get out of committee and they choke all legislation looking to the relief of those who fought."

Representative Addison T. Smith of Idaho wrote under date of July 19:

"I am sure that we recognize the great service and the hardships endured by the service men, and we are exceedingly anxious that the most liberal provision shall be made for the comfort of those who are maimed or in ill health.

"The vocational training law has been amended so as to extend further benefits to those desiring vocational training, with pay for disabled men whose impaired health or wounds are traceable to the service.

"Legislation providing for retirement of disabled emergency officers is pending in the house committee on military affairs. I am heartily in favor of the enactment of this legislation and am disappointed that favorable action has not heretofore been taken."

Sweet Bill Again Delayed.

The Sweet bill, creating a veterans' bureau with a head responsible to the President, a recommendation of the Dawes commission and granting more liberal relief to mained and ailing veterans passed the senate July 20. Next it will be taken up tomorrow by the senate and house conferees. These men are Senators Smoot, Utah; Calder, New York, and Walsh, Massachusetts; Representatives Sweet, Iowa; Winslow, Massachusetts; Parker, New York; Barkley, Kentucky; Rayburn, Texas.

There was no meeting of the conferees last Friday. The bill has passed the house, but the senate made amendments.

NEVER AGAIN WILL THESE 3 BOYS LOOK AT A MELON

Sentence was passed yesterday upon 6 year old Carmen Rosirio of 721 South La Salle street and his two 7 year old neighbors, Salvator Guiroey and John Butelegio. Their yearning for watermelon led them Friday night to a box car on the New York Central. Just as they were about to pounce upon an unsuspecting victim, three coppers appeared.

"What do you want to steal watermelons for?" inquired one policeman. "Your ears ain't dirty."

Probation Officer Michael Kelly took the boys in charge.

"Salvator," said he, after hearing the evidence, I sentence you to wash your mother's dishes for the next two weeks. Carmen, you sweep the kitchen floor. And John, you stay around the house and perform any odd jobs mother tells you to do. If your parents tell me your work has not been satisfactory, I will give you two weeks more."

Woman's Band Will Have Community Auxiliaries

The Woman's Band of Chicago will eventually be supplemented by numerous auxiliary bands for girls and women, it was announced yesterday. When the enrollment is sufficiently great there will be a band formed for each of the score of communities that compose Chicago. The Illinois Woman's Athletic club is the chief sponsor of a concert and dance to be given by the new band Tuesday night at Broadway armory.

ILLINOIS RETURNS TO HERSELF.

Seven years ago the coming Thursday Austria declared war on Serbia. Ten days later the German guns were battering at Liege and the gigantic catastrophe of a world war was dawning red upon horrified mankind.

During the years that then followed the people of America, and among them the people of this city of Chicago and the people of Illinois, turned their eyes away from their own concerns and watched anxiously the vast struggle which was drawing them gradually into its bloody vortex. Politics, finance, commerce, manufacture, even social life, were all breathed upon by the winds of conflict and were taking in new issues and new problems and new interests.

Then, too, we entered the war, and for nearly two years the nation's energies, moral, mental, and material, were passionately absorbed in the greatest concentrated effort of our history. In that effort Illinois and its people more than repeated their history of patriotic service. They surpassed it. They did more than their share as they did more than their share for the preservation of the union in the rebellion. At the front the Prairie division at Chipilly Ridge and in the Argonne advance wrote glorious names on our battle flag. Our regiment of the historic Rainbow division, the 149th artillery, held high the honor of the state helping to break the last great German offensive in Champagne, fighting through all the offensives that followed to the end. In the regular divisions and on the sea and in the air sons of Illinois showed the "mettle of their pastures"; while at home the men, women, and children joined in an unsurpassed effort, serving eagerly in a hundred ways to meet the needs of the great hour.

Illinois in the war was magnificent, maintaining the noblest traditions of American citizenship.

But the thought of Illinois was overseas. Her back was turned upon her home problems, and because our state affairs were in the keeping of a patriotic executive and because our citizen leadership was rallying us to the effort of the nation, we ignored the evils rapidly developing in our own household. Yellow sedition and red demagogy had hissed and shown their fangs. But they had been promptly scotched. Illinois was true to herself.

Then came peace, suddenly, and at the height of our effort. The war was won, with the battle flags of Illinois in the vanguard of victory. Our blood sacrifice was ended. The great account was closed.

Illinois and the nation drew a deep breath of relief and relaxed. Human nature, though it rises in days of need to heights of selfless devotion and sacrifice, does not live on the heights. The terrific strain had told and there followed a moral reaction stronger and deeper than we realized. The people were weary of effort and of sacrifice, weary of anxious thought and weary of struggle.

That was the zero hour of opportunity for every corrupt and destroying force which had skulked and waited during the war. Illinois was tired. Illinois wanted to rest, to forget evil, to believe in itself, and to recline comfortably on the assurances of its own solid character and well being.

That was weakness, a human, a natural, and excusable weakness. But it has cost Chicago and the state a heavy price. We are learning day by day how great it is. We are realizing day by day what happened when our eyes were turned to the old world tragedy. Almost anything could happen and almost everything did. The old plunderers of the days of Yerkes had crept back, and with false faces and false political battle cries had seized power. The tide of moral reaction floated them everywhere into public office and they called it the will of the people. Once in power, they acted according to their natures and repeated their own history, but on a scale proportioned to their greater opportunity. They have poisoned the air with class hatred. That is new tactics in their school of politics. They have spread slander broadcast. They have organized a network of petty oppression and bullied weak men into aid or alliance. With the power our relapse of civic energy gave them they have wasted the public funds as they have never before been wasted, and demoralized the public service as it has never before been demoralized. Proceeding from the first base, built upon party faction and civic reaction in Chicago, they have moved out into the state, organizing alliances with predatory forces of state politics and reviving old and discredited veterans of past evil days.

Municipal politics and state politics have written some black chapters in American history, but there has never been raised a more evil structure of plunder and corruption than that which is now tottering to its fall.

But the end approaches. Chicago and Illinois are returning to normalcy. The civic reaction has ended and the tide of civic energy which represents the abiding intelligence and high character of our citizenship has turned from ebb to flood.

All that was needed was the exposure of the facts of Tammany misgovernment, and the facts can no longer be hid. Day by day they thrust their ugly heads into the light, and the people recognize them and what they signify.

We have been passing through an expensive and humiliating experience. Let us make it count for better government in the future, for a more alert guard against plunderer and demagogue, for a permanently higher level of politics and public service.

"RACE EQUALITY."

Japan, it is reported, will raise the so-called "race equality" issue if she enters the new peace conference. That is virtually certain. It served her well at Paris. It will be a useful piece on the board in the new conference.

It is well therefore for Americans to consider in advance just what this issue comes to in order that American opinion and American representation may have a policy to meet it and will not waver in its defense.

America wishes to meet Japanese claims in the best spirit and to recognize readily those which are well founded. Japan has important claims which are legitimate and just. But the "race equality" issue is not one of them and should not be permitted to darken counsel or confuse settlement of real issues.

"Race equality" does not mean race equality. It means race domination. It means, so far as we are concerned, that an alien people shall be granted the privilege of entering this country, contrary to our sovereign right to control our own population, and contrary, according to our conviction, to the peace and well being of our own people.

Japan herself does not concede "race equality." She bars Chinese and Koreans for economic if not for race reasons. She does not allow ownership of land by foreigners. These are legitimate acts of sovereignty and sound policy which America does not challenge.

"Race equality" is a misnomer, a phrase invented to give a moral sanction which the issue does not involve. Our exclusion policy is not founded on a conception of Japanese inferiority. It is founded on two considerations. One is economic. The other social and political. One is based on the fact that our people cannot compete with the Japanese immigrant without lowering their standard of living, which it is American policy to maintain or if possible raise. The other is based on the fact that the Japanese immigrant does not assimilate and, as we believe, cannot assimilate, and therefore must remain always an alien body in our population. We shall discuss the Japanese in America another day.

Meanwhile, let us get rid of the fallacy and confusion of thought involved in the Japanese issue of "race equality." We grant the Japanese equality and at the same time demand equal rights of equality with the Japanese. We demand and shall maintain our basic right of sovereignty, which means that we shall exclude from our citizenship and our country any people whatsoever whose entrance we believe is not compatible with our peace, progress and safety. This implies no claim of superiority. It is a question merely of difference and of assimilation.

We have no idea that Japanese statesmen raise the equality issue in good faith, but are using it only as a factor in the chess game of international politics.

A PACIFIST PROPOSAL.

There are ardent pacifists in this country who urge that the United States shall "set an example" to the world by immediate and complete disarmament. "Call upon all nations to disarm," cry these zealots, "but if they refuse, show them the better way by disarming ourselves."

We are confident this proposal does not appeal to the mass of the American people, whose common sense and respect for the law of self-preservation are not obscured by a preoccupation with any one idea, even the idea of the evils of war. The notion of "setting an example" by disarmament is sufficiently disposed of for most Americans by a consideration of the plight of China, which has set an example of disarmament to the Christian world for many years. The results are well enough known to teach any one outside of a pacifist assembly what the price of setting an example in defenselessness would be, and America is not willing to pay that price.

Or take France, for example. She is now maintaining an army of 800,000, although her financial situation is on the brink of collapse, her industries in need of every franc they can beg, borrow, or lay their hands on.

Does France carry this enormous burden of armament because America has a navy or an army congress now proposes to reduce to a hundred thousand? Do we threaten France? If not, why should our disarmament affect her policy?

Take Great Britain. Does she maintain a navy or an army because she fears a war with us? Or soviet Russia. Is Trotzky at the head of the second greatest army in the world because he fears Gen. Pershing will soon be entering Petrograd at the head of the First division?

Take Japan. We are told she fears our aggression, but if we disarmed, would the Japanese consider that all danger of war had disappeared and that her traffic with Asia and her appetite for China's or Siberia's rich resources and her control of Corea and Formosa required no support from navy or army?

These questions answer themselves in any mind not obsessed by a sentiment.

But pacifists are more vociferous than numerous and at their gatherings impress the timid politician with an authority they do not possess. They are given to calling themselves the people, like the three tailors of Tooley street, while the people themselves are going about their private affairs and trusting to their government to act with sanity and competency.

This is not a satisfactory arrangement, for while we are not likely to commit the folly demanded of us by pacifist emotion, an undue influence reaches our defense policy and obstructs adequate measures. If we are to be protected from this evil, there should be a prompt and emphatic protest whenever pacifists like Bryan or pacifist organizations put forth their proposal.

STYLES IN GIRLS.

[From the Ohio State Journal.]

Chicago business men, according to entertainingly written reports, are carrying on a campaign against fluffy-ruffles and the baby stare in business offices. They want—that is, they say they want, and we presume they think they want—a more sensible type of woman as stenographer or other assistant in their offices; and they have adopted the slogan: "The dolls must go."

We can imagine all the pretty blondined stenographers muttering in their georgette sleeves: "Well, why didn't they say so before?"

Chicago business men, or the business men of any other town, can get the kind of girls they want in their offices if they know what they want and are willing to pay fair wages for capable help. There has been a distinct impression, well founded, we think, that business men were partial to the dollies. To meet this supposed demand of theirs many a well informed and capable young woman has cultivated the vacant baby stare and—found it most effective. It worked so well that the supply of dolls, all equipped with stare, ear puffs, baby talk, and all, miraculously increased.

Now, if the business men are sincere when they say they want the plain, tailored girl back again, she will appear, and it won't take her long. A Greenwich Village friend of ours who had bobbed hair was astute enough to add a switch to her fluffy mane and fasten it all into a neat roll at the nape of the neck before she went forth to seek a position with an advertising firm. It is well known that the business man has a prejudice against bobbed hair. This woman was smart enough to conform, and won her job, though in the evening back in Greenwich Village both switch and dignity disappeared.

Hew to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

TO A WILD CANARY.

Minstrel, with thy sun-tinged vest
And jet-enameled wing,
Charming are the rhapsodies
Which you ceaseless sing;
Chanting matin harmonies
To the rising sun,
Entoning vesper melodies
When the day is done.

Warbler, flashing tiger-bright
Amid the sylvan bowers,
Chasing sprightly elves about,
Flirting with the flowers;
Scattering gladness with the songs
From thy feathery throat—
What wonder how thy little heart
Could gush such rapturous note.

Blithesome bird, sunburst of joy,
Nesting in the heather,
Singing, singing all the day,
Forgetful of the weather;
May naught cease thy cheery song,
May it trill forever—
Thrilling weary hearts of earth,
May it silence never! J. A. W.

FROM THE CELLAR WINDOW.
(By Ursus.)

Woodrow Wilson may now have a few doctors to drop in for tiffin without the newspapers getting out extras concerning intimate, personal glands, as the prostate. The curse of fame is the gossip about one's tonsil, or adenoid, or sciatic neuritis.

My coal pile holds one, underweighed ton, and, although it is cool in my cellar, perspiration breaks out anew at the thought that the coal men are lying in wait—not laying in wait—steady, there's a pun about to be born (lying in weight! Garçon! Encore, ol' kid!) lying in wait, we'll say, for the first sharp, nippy breeze. Word has it that they fear nothing and what they intend to do to old Ult. Consumer this winter will make a gunman green with envy.

Doc. Evans has a hobby that "Death loves a fat man." If Doc. himself were fat he would argue differently. I'll never forget a dentist who chewed tobacco and said it preserved the teeth.

Things We Should Like to See.

Flesh-colored poudre that is.

TRAVELOGUES.
SAHARA.

Yellow sky, yellow sand, yellow air;
Sahara in the late afternoon,
Hot, dusty, flat, lonesome, deserted;
Our eyes ache, and we seem to see
Tall waving palms, and pools
Of cool, blue water.
Our pith helmets weigh tons
(Or so it seems),
We marvel at the camel-boys
Wrapped in their flowing robes;
They must be darned hot
Wearing turbans!
Oasis!
Can it be that we really see shade?
It will be cooler soon;
That ball of fire is fast
Nearing the horizon;
Suddenly the bright yellow vanishes.
The sky is a cool green-blue,
A soft breeze blows;
And quickly night takes possession
Of Sahara.
The brown boys set up the tents,
And make ready the evening meal;
While we thankfully stretch our legs,
And hasten away from the smelly camels.
Cool? It is almost cold, and quite dark.
The stars come out, and
We decide desert nights are the most Wonderful of all.
The minor strains of the native music-boxes
Twang, and tinkle, and thump;
We close our eyes, thanking Allah
For the wonder of a Sahara night. APPLES.

VACATION HINTS.

WHILE on a vacation drink no raw milk. There is always some hazard attached to drinking raw milk, but this is increased many fold when one is away from home base.

A glass of nice country milk just from the cow is very appealing. All right; let the other fellow drink it. You play safety first by letting it come to a boil before you take any of it.

Canned milk or milk powder would be safer still.

Drink no water unless you are certain of its purity, and the cleanest, prettiest waters are generally the worst polluted in a section frequented by campers. To make water safe to drink purify it by heating or with chloride of lime or halazone.

In most cities the health department furnishes a lime solution ready to use. They give it to any citizen going on a vacation who applies for it, or it can be bought at any drug store. Dissolve one level teaspoonful of chloride of lime in four cups of water. Put in a bottle and keep tightly corked. This solution will keep its strength two weeks. A teaspoonful of this will sterilize two gallons of water if the mixture is allowed to stand one-half hour. Chloride of lime can be had in tablet form ready to use. Halazone tablets, useful for the same purpose and effective, can be obtained at drug stores.

Boiled water is safe.

To prepare heated water that is safe, and at the same time does not taste flat, proceed as follows:

Heat four pints of water until beads form. Remove from the flame and add one pint of unheated water at once. Cool.

Eat no ice cream, the antecedents of which you do not know.

Once coming east on the Southern Pacific on a hot day our train stopped for a few minutes at Del Rio. A Mexican huckster was peddling ice cream cones. Fool-like, I ate one. Fortunately an attack of diarrhea prevented more serious trouble.

If you have been exposed to poison ivy wash the poison from the skin with soap and water. A good deal of soap will be required to cut the poison.

Laundry soap also is a pretty good agent to get rid of chiggers and ticks. When chiggers and ticks have bored in greasing with salted butter will make them turn loose.

A good mosquito repellent is as follows:

Oil of citronella	1 ounce
Spirits of camphor	1 ounce
Oil of cedar	½ ounce

A correspondent carries camphor in a bag around his wrists and his forehead and in that way repels mosquitoes during the night. Many people spoil their vacations by sunburning too rapidly. By short daily exposures the skin can be well tanned. After that exposure does not cause blistering or soreness. If one has been sunburned nothing is better than cold cream used plentifully.

DESERT WISDOM FOR FEET.

Arizona writes: "I noticed an inquiry on itching and scalded toes and also your suggestion as to treatment. I should like to give a little information which I picked up from the 'men of the desert.'

"Wash the feet thoroughly each night in a solution of borax water, say one-half teaspoonful of borax to the basin of water and after drying, grease the feet thoroughly, which you also suggested, with either plain vaseline or mentholatum, especially the latter, which has a cooling effect. The amount of grease used should be the same as one would use on the hands in case they were chapped.

"During the day change the sox whenever they get objectionable, however, the perspiration and itching can be almost stopped by dusting the inside of the shoes lightly with powdered borax each morning.

"Of course, it is assumed that one is wearing a sensible and properly fitted shoe."

FOR CHILD TRAINERS.

Mrs. T. writes: "Please publish your remedy for finger nail biting. My children will not stop this habit, so want to try your remedy."

REPLY.

Alcohol	1¼ ounces
Quinine	¼ ounce
Gum mastic	¼ ounce
Gum myrrh	1¼ ounces

Mix. Let stand forty-eight hours, shaking bottle occasionally. Apply with camel's hair brush. Can be removed with alcohol or hot water.

It merely keeps the bitter taste on the nails. Children are not fond of quinine or other bitters. Children who bite their nails are lacking in poise. Accept the habit as proof that your children need to develop good mental habits and proceed to train them accordingly.

DON'T AFFECT RHEUMATISM.

Mr. J. writes: "Are grapefruit, oranges, or lemons bad or good for a person subject to slight attacks of rheumatism?"

REPLY.

So far as we know they do not influence rheumatism either for good or for ill.

CONSULT AN EXPERT.

Mrs. P. J. W. writes: 1. Will you kindly send me or recommend something of a dietary for diabetes?

2. Why are sugar and salt forbidden?

3. Can slightly salted bread and vegetables be injurious?

4. Are fruits permissible?"

REPLY.

1. In a general way all foods are permissible, except those which contain considerable starch or sugar. But dieting in diabetes is all important. It must be carried out in minute detail. Go to a sanitarium or hospital for instruction in carrying out this detail.

2. Sugar is forbidden because the outstanding symptom of diabetes is inability to handle sugar. Salt is not forbidden unless there is nephritis as well as diabetes.

3. As a rule bread is injurious. The vegetables which contain less than 10 per cent starch are not.

4. Those low in sugar are.

RAISINS vs. MEATS.

P. E. L. writes: "Will dried raisins give the body more blood? Are they as beneficial to the body as meat?"

REPLY.

Dried raisins is a good food rich in calories because of the sugar and rich in necessary minerals. However they do not repair tissue as meat does. If you are a lazy old duffer and never move your muscles except to breathe and smoke you do not need meat and I should say raisins is the better of the two foods. If you work like an ox meat is the better. Probably you are in between and should eat a proper amount of each without getting "riled" over which is the better.

ROTTING FRUITS.

Chicago, July 18.—[Friend of the People.]—I wish to call your attention to the condition of the basement under the fruit and vegetable store on West Cottage Grove avenue. It has been reported to the authorities several times, but they clean up only when notified to do so, either by the health or fire departments. It should be kept clean at all times. D. W. K.

An inspector from this department investigated the complaint and has served a notice on the tenant to remove the obstruction from the drain pipe for icebox, remove an accumulation of rubbish and boxes from the cellar floor, maintain the floor of the cellar in a clean and sanitary condition.
JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

PROSPECTS OF BONUS.

Tulsa, Okla., July 18.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I saw a piece of news about a bonus to be paid to soldiers who enlisted in Illinois. Can you give me any information as to whom I must write and how much the bonus is? F. W. A.

A bill has been passed by the general assembly and approved by the governor authorizing the state of Illinois to pay a bonus of 50 cents a day for each day's service between April 6, 1917, and Nov. 11, 1918, not to exceed a maximum payment of $300. This is contingent upon the passing of a bond issue of $55,000,000 by the citizens of Illinois at the next general election.

CANNOT MEET PAYMENTS.

Chicago, July 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—About one year ago I bought some stock in an automobile corporation and made my first payment. Shortly after, I was put out of work and could not make my monthly payments. Now the concern threatens to cancel my contract as I cannot make any payments on it. Do you think I can make them refund part of my money? W. L. S.

Not unless you can show violation of the blue sky law or other grounds not stated.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

THE PASSING OF THE RABBITS.

Chicago, July 18.—[Friend of the People.]—Across the alley from us the people have rabbits, and these rabbits are out most all the time and especially at night. They have been asked to keep them shut up, but so far they have not done so.

There are many gardens in the neighborhood and these rabbits have been eating the vegetables.

Is there no way to stop this? It is becoming quite a nuisance to the neighbors, including myself, as I have young lettuce and cabbage. E. B. G.

The tenant has been notified by this department to remove the rabbits from the premises and to disinfect the rabbitry.
JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

GIVE MORE FACTS.

Chicago, July 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Has the general clerk of the Circuit court a right to use money belonging to an estate and keep heirs waiting over three years for their division? Am I not at least entitled to interest on that money? What action is to be taken on this? M. W.

Ordinarily such money does not come into his possession. We cannot advise to advantage without knowing the facts.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

REFERRED TO PROF. EINSTEIN AND THE HOTEL MEN.

Chicago, July 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Apparently we are going to be driven to providing a scrapbook for the boob editorials which appear in the W. G. N.

Two weeks ago it was talking about women who "usurped men's prerogatives" by attending prize fights. I do not want to go to a man fight, any more than I do to a bull fight. But I should like to know how and when men acquired a corner on any activity or amusement.

In today's issue it is championing a picked green statement about women's duties. Where did the idea originate that a woman who does not wish to spend sixteen hours a day scrubbing and cooking is lazy? Has anyone suggested applying that adjective to the men because they do not janitor the apartment, clean the sidewalk, and keep the flivver in repair? Is a woman supposed to be a substitute for an engine, a vacuum cleaner, and an electric power plant? Hasn't she the same right to choose the kind of work she shall do?

So long as women are women, I suppose they will inevitably take delight in doing some scrubbing and some cooking. But any woman with brains and ambition who is satisfied to spend all her time to the exclusion of everything else at routine work, which can be done mechanically, immediately, and automatically, proves that she is not fitted to rear children, lead much needed reform, nor do her share in helping solve the great world problems, and make this truly a decent place for all the people—women as well as men.

SUPPLEMENTING THE INQUIRING REPORTER.

Chicago, July 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Betty Moore, who talks to the Inquiring Reporter, must have some stand-in with the McLean stores if she gets good sodas at reduced prices. I paid 40 cents, with 4 cents war tax, for two chocolate sodas there yesterday—just the good, old fashioned kind that sold once upon a time for 5 cents and for years at 10 cents.

The ice cream manufacturers spent a lot of money advertising ice cream as a food; now that they've got us educated up to that idea they must get back the cost of their advertising, eh, what?
H. McLEOD.

RAILROAD COMMISSARIES.

South Holland, Ill., July 10.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Under caption "Extortion" of Sunday issue appears an articles reflecting on the present day commissary companies.

A great railway president once said: "It is a simple matter to run a great railroad but the eating departments drive me wild."

A commissary company has big overhead expenses and specialize in their intricate line of work.

The railway companies at different times have experimented with feeding their employés but a great financial loss has always resulted.

It might be well here to mention the fact that while Uncle Sam has made a great success of the postal service yet the government fell down woefully hard on running the railroads.

Any conservative person knows why many railroad men want the government to operate the railways principally on account of its colossal lack of knowledge of said business.

In other words the government was sure "pickings" while running our railroads and in a short time it would be hard to handle the average railway crowd if same continued.
GEORGE HARLOW.

ANOTHER SIDE OF THE RACE PROBLEM.

Chicago, July 17.—[Editor of the Tribune.]—L. B. R.'s contribution entitled "Two Sides to the Race Problem" presents a striking one sided view in reality. He is making the same mistake that is causing so much distrust and feeling against the Negro. He comes in contact with one of the more common, ignorant type with whom he has an unpleasant experience. Immediately he raises the cry, "Negroes are getting more and more obstreperous."

I have occasion to use the public conveyances quite often and come in contact with both white and colored. Now, I can honestly say that many times I have seen a colored boy or man yield his seat to a lady or an old man while a white man held his seat. Let L. B. R. travel over lines where he will come in contact with the lower more common class of white people and let him find what courtesy he will receive from them. He will excuse them by saying that they are not representative of the white race. True enough! But why hold them Negroes as representative of their race?
A. G. Y.

"VERBOTEN."

Chicago, July 15.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial in yesterday's paper on medicinal beer seems to me extremely timely. What an insult it must be to the intelligence of physicians to regulate by law what they may or may not prescribe.

Woodrow was not so far wrong, was he, when he told the world we were too proud to fight? For we allow a well paid minority to tell us where to head in and hardly let out a peep.

Germany, in the hey-day of Kaiserism, with her autocratic "verboten" system, certainly had nothing on us.

What piece of legislation can we look for next in the way of regulating the health and habits of us spineless Americans?
L. M. HAMBURGER.

IGNORANCE MAY PROVE AS UNPLEASANT AS VICIOUSNESS.

Chicago, July 18.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As THE TRIBUNE seems always anxious to print something about Negroes that is detrimental to them, I want to see if you will print this. In answering the copperhead that signed his name L. B. R. July 10, I will admit that some Negroes are careless, just like some of his kind, but they should be looked on as ignorant. He claims his ancestors fought for the Negro's liberty. That may be true, but he isn't fighting for them, I am sure. I doubt whether he ever met a first class white man or Negro. His kind generally never come in contact with anything first class. He thinks the mob, the rope, and the stake will solve the Negro problem, but it will not. You can read any paper and always the very worst things are printed about Negroes, but not one item of good. It isn't justice, but the Negro is not to blame. The white man wants a law for the Negro that eliminates himself, and this copperhead is a good example of the careless Negro, for he knows only what the white man taught him. I know that you will not print this. It is too much truth, but I will have one consolation, the editor will read it. Be as fair as you are white and you will not find so many Negro brutes.

"PIN MONEY" CROWDING OUT FOOD AND RENT MONEY.

Chicago, July 15.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—While dining last week at one of the cafeterias I happened to overhear the following conversation between a couple of the venders behind the salads: "Do you know, Molly, I don't have to work for a living. My husband is earning good money and I only do this to get a little pin money."

The above is almost laughable, but I wonder who the joke is on?

The remedy: Girls, we know you like your work, but be a good sport and remember that there are other girls who are not quite as fortunate as you to have a "meal ticket" at home, and who are walking the streets looking for some sort of a job while you are unintentionally, unnecessarily occupying one.

This does not only apply to cafeterias alone but also to other industries too numerous to mention. Come on, you Married Independent Folk! Where is your conscience?
HARRY LEWIS.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

"ONE TOUCH OF NATURE."

By William Shakespeare.
(From "Troilus and Cressida.")

For time is like a fashionable host
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand,
And with his arms outstretched, as he would fly,
Grasps-in the comer; welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was;
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigor of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin—
That all with one consent, praise newborn gauds,
Though they are made and molded of things past,
And give to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt o'erdusted.

Last week's six best circulators at the public library were:

"Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis.
"Alice Adams," by Booth Tarkington.
"Kingdom Around the Corner," by Coningsby Dawson.
"Queen Victoria," by Lytton Strachey.
"Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"Mystic Isles of the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.

"LILIOM," by Franz Molnar, has taken New York by storm theatrically. Groups of young men about town go along the street singing arm in arm, "Look out, here comes the damn police, the damn police, the damn police," with an engaging vehemence on the damn. It has been staged so effectively by the Theater guild that New York declares Franz Molnar to be the greatest of all living dramatists, a phenomenon not unusual when a good play gets into the hands of a good producer.

For years George Jean Nathan has been telling America that Molnar is a great popular dramatist, that he has done better things than "The Devil," which was very popular in its day here. Now Mr. Nathan finds himself in the position of having introduced an old college friend as a jolly fine fellow and seeing him about to be married to his sister. "Liliom" has walked away with the theatrical laurels and the very shy box office receipts.

It's a most amusing and moving play to read, which we can do who cannot see it. "Liliom" is Hungarian slang for lily, which means a tough. Liliom lives up to his nickname all through his career on earth and in heaven. The play opens in an amusement park, where Liliom is barker for a merry go round. There he meets a servant girl, with whom he falls in love with an exceeding quaintness.

They marry—as the saying goes—and Liliom leaves the carrousel because the reader feels, he is so much in love that the old life is unthinkable. (That sounds exactly like a prospectus for a moralistic novel.) He does not, however, ever tell his Julie so. Instead he beats her because—just because. He hasn't work. He is a loafer, a good for nothing, and an artist without tools. He is a barker supreme. Without his background he can do nothing. When Julie tells him that she is going to have a baby he naïvely goes to the window and proudly shrieks to the carrousel, "I'm going to be a father." To provide for the baby he promises to undertake an affair of the road with a friend. They hold up a cashier, but instead of killing him and getting his bag of gold Liliom kills himself to escape capture.

Upon his arrival in heaven he finds that he is to be tried at a celestial police court. He won't even have the privilege of stating his case to God. Among the other criminals is a man who didn't tell his son good-by before he killed himself because the child was asleep. He is allowed to go back to earth to kiss the boy good-by. Liliom waives his right to return to earth and goes directly into a trial time of sixteen years. When that time has passed he goes back to earth to see Julie and his child. His eternity depends upon his doing one good deed while he is on earth.

As the most bounteous gift he could give his child he presents her with a star which he has stolen from the sky. She is afraid of him and is pettish, and he slaps her—and the heavenly policemen come to take him to eternal punishment.

It is a quaint fantasy, at times poignantly beautiful and sad and at others extremely amusing. Julie has a friend, Marie, who is beyond all dreams innocent and bucolic. If occasional scraps of "language" aren't too much for mixed company it is a jaunty play to read aloud.

Alfred A. Knopf is to publish Dorothy Richardson's new novel, "Deadlock," in an edition of 750 numbered copies. If her admirers subscribe to these there will be a popular edition of the novel. The total American sale of her five books is less than 5,000 copies. And yet Dorothy Richardson is talked about in England by every one of the cognoscenti. She is doing for the novel form what the free versifiers—or, as I have always enjoyed hearing them called, the vers libertines—are doing to, I mean for, poetry. Her novels are—to me—like some of the old Italian operas. There is no reason why they should ever stop. She could go on forever stumbling up little lanes of thoughts, finding her way back through hedges of words to the highroad, following a firefly into the forest of thought.

The only thing that need ever finish the story of Miriam which Miss Richardson has been writing all through "Pilgrimage" is Miss Richardson's own boredom with her subject. Miriam is so pleased with her own self-analysis that she will go on "eating and eating and eating," as Anatol says of Mimi, satisfying her craving for the food of introspection while crises pass.

Miss Richardson's small audience in America reminds me of something I heard the other day about C. A. Dawson Scott, an Englishwoman who writes very good novels which are somewhat popular in this country. She has an agreement with her English publishers that she doesn't receive any royalty until a certain number of her books have been sold—I don't remember the number, but it is probably about 1,500 copies. She has written fourteen books so far, and as yet she has never received one cent of royalty in England. Year after year she writes her novel for the sheer pleasure of writing it. Of course she has American royalties, but it has only been within the last few years that her books have been published here. Her latest is "The Headland," a novel which takes place in three days with a background of the leaden sky and the roar of the sea that beats on the narrow neck of land that joins England and the Headland.

Gossip. I was told the other day a charming story about Rockwell Kent and Dorothy Canfield. Rockwell Kent is the artist, you know, who recorded his trip to Alaska in "The Wilderness," a book which the Atheaneum (I think it was) said was the most important book to come out of America since "Leaves of Grass." Dorothy Canfield you know.

Mr. Kent made $3,000 some way—from the sale of his pictures, the story goes—and he decided to buy a farm with it. Quite by chance he and his wife hit upon Vermont as a good place to cache their funds. He decided to get on a train, go as far as it went, and then get on anything that happened to be handy and at the end of that line—train, or bus, or whatever—to buy $3,000 worth of farm.

On the train up from Boston he got to talking to a charming woman who said that she lived in Arlington, Vt., and who described the beauteous advantages of her neighborhood. It is said that upon the exchange of their names neither of them had heard of the other—though that does seem a little incongruous. Anyway, when they parted at the end of the line Mrs. Fisher said that she hoped the Kents would be neighbors, and Mr. Kent said that he hoped so, too. He looked around for a few days and found an ideal farm, which, however, cost five instead of three thousand dollars. Since the three thousand was practically manna from heaven, the extra two thousand was as inaccessible as a hundred thousand might have been.

Mr. Kent started back to New York, and on the train he again met Dorothy Canfield Fisher, who, they say, is as impetuously generous as the sun on a summer's day. Mr. Kent regretted that the Fisher and Kent ménages would not be near one another, and explained the matter of the extra two thousand dollars. "O, if that's it," Mrs. Fisher said with relief, "why, I'll lend you the money."

Joseph C. Lincoln is like the song about the man who has plenty of nice, rich, ripe, red strawberry shortcake. He goes on and on, adding to his adjectives, and all the time the strawberry shortcake is just the same. He writes one book after another, all alike, only a little different, and yet they're always—to those who like his particular brand of domestic sweetened dough—completely charming. His latest is "Galusha the Magnificent," who, metaphorically, stirs up a cake and then licks the cake bowl.

"Trail's End" is the title of a little book of poems of New Mexico which John Curtis Underwood has written. You remember his "War Flames," no doubt. He is now a member of the Santa Fe colony which includes that other laureate of New Mexico, Alice Corbin. "Trail's End" is a collection of verse—most of it unrhymed—about the everyday things one sees in Santa Fe—"The Flivvers," "The Tea Room," "The Hat Shop," "Coyote," even the "High School Tennis Court." It is almost a rhymed guide book to Santa Fe, so Mr. Underwood says. He is, by the way, one of us just now, a picture of baked sunshine, all browns and yellows and tans from his hair to his shoe tips. He is so passionate a press agent for New Mexico that he makes one regret—almost—one's decision to seek other mountain heights. "Here is solace in sunrises," he says.

Those who had the rare pleasure of reading William Beebe's "Jungle Peace" will consider it good news that a new book called "Jungle Lore" will be published by Holt this fall. By the way, Mr. Beebe is said to be, by one who knows him, the American version of Apollo, a gorgeous and quite unrivaled dancer and all of the and so forths.

"HE IS A FAILURE"

BY EDWARD GOLDBECK

HOW often have we all heard the words: "O, he is a failure!" spoken with an intonation of mingled pity and contempt, and, as it were, burying one of our fellow men! And, much more rarely but sometimes, we heard that a man's career was summed up in the spontaneous ejaculation, "Yes, he is a success!" What an undertone of envy and admiration in this short but weighty sentence!

What do we mean by delivering the verdict that a "brother" of ours is a failure? Do we intend to say that he is a sinner, a reprobate, a criminal? Not at all. He may be harmless and honest, a devoted husband, a fond father, a kind neighbor, a conscientious citizen, a glowing patriot. All this we may know and in spite of all this condemn him. Well, then, what is the poor fellow guilty of?

The answer is simple: He has no money. Perhaps he did not know how to make money, perhaps he did not know how to keep it. The latter task is the more difficult of the two. Lots of people died in poverty because they did never learn the gentle are of saying "No!" This is the most important educational item, and a boy ought to be thoroughly conversant with this practical science before he even thinks of studying Mr. Edison's questionnaire. For what good will it do him to know how Cleopatra died and what copra is made of if he has not the moral strength to refuse help to a friend in need?

"He is a failure!" That is definite. It closes the lid of the coffin. The corpse disappears. "This man has no money nor will he ever be able to make money! We should be only too glad to give him the benefit of the doubt, but it is not in him. He is without value for human society."

One . . . two . . . three! The clods are falling down. This is the end.

When we look back on human history we shall find quite a few men who were considered failures when they died and are regarded as successes now. Christ is the paradigmatical instance. Most of his contemporaries thought him an impostor, some a maniac. Anatole France, the learned jester, has written an instructive and amusing short story, "The Procurator of Judaea." A few years after Christ's death Pontius Pilatus is meeting in southern Italy an old friend who had paid him a visit while Pilatus was ruling the Jews as the representative of mighty Rome. They converse endlessly about trifles, and at last Lamia, the Roman nobleman, remembers voluptuously a most fascinating Jewish girl, a dancer with a beautiful red mane, who suddenly disappeared and joined the group of sectarians who followed—what was his name? O yes, Jesus of Nazareth. "Do you remember the fellow, my dear Pontius?"

Pontius Pilatus frowned and passed his hand over his brow like somebody who tries to reëvoke a long forgotten thing of the past. Then, after a few moments of silence, he murmured:

"Jesus of Nazareth? No, I don't remember him."

The Unforgivable Sin.

SOCRATES, the wisest man of Greek antiquity, was a failure. His fellow citizens condemned him to death. To most of them he seemed a "red." He was known as an idler, wont to bother friends and strangers with impertinent questions. As a sculptor he did not amount to much. Money he had none; he did not care for politics; he did not take anything for granted; he drank a good deal; he was not even decently dressed. In short, he was different. To be different is the unforgivable sin, especially in a democracy.

In modern times the psychological constellation is the same. Let us look at the different domains of human activity and their laurel crowned representatives.

There is Benedict Spinoza, the philosopher who was "intoxicated with God." He gave his whole life to the clarifying of his own thought. He lived as a hermit, excommunicated by his Jewish brethren. He was poor and made his meager living by cutting lenses. Poor, misguided man, he did not even care to be a "Dr." or a "professor." He died, known by few, loved by none. He had sacrificed himself to the pursuit of truth. And more than a century later Goethe found an old picture of the saint philosopher which showed an intentionally distorted face, with the legend: "Signum reprobationis in voltu gerens," bearing the sign of reprobation on his figure.

His contemporary, Rembrandt van Rhyn, the greatest Germanic painter who ever lived, was a failure, too. He made lots of money and squandered it. He spent the money of his son Titus, which he had in trust only, on foolish purposes, i. e., in the service of his art. He went into bankruptcy. He lived with a "bad girl," Hendrikje, who was indeed a very good girl, but not married to her friend and master. He was a drunkard. He died in a garret and his estate was minus. What a failure! He is immortal as a creator of beauty, but his poor creditors were fooled. Of course, they took away from him everything he had, and we may hope that they covered themselves out of the interest he had paid them and the sale of his artistic treasures, but it was certainly a sad experience for all these benevolent usurers!

The Price of Success.

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN was dying when he received a small amount from an English musical society. He cried with joy while his emaciated fingers tremulously fondled the bills. O, the broken Titan! The superman who had said: "Strength is the morality of all extraordinary beings, and so it is mine!" What a punishment, what a pitiful sight! How different, how much more edifying are the last moments of a respectable profiteer!

Another superman, Napoleon I., the greatest general, statesman, and administrator of his time, died at St. Helena. He was so poor that he could not even afford a new uniform.

"This is the chastisement of sin!" I hear one of the readers say. Is it really? If Lincoln had not become President he would have died a failure too, for his partner in law said of him: "Poor Abe had no sense of money."

All these men, great teachers of truth, conjurors of beauty, instruments of destiny, perpetrators of divine intentions, were failures. Why? Because they did not think of taking, but of giving; not of acquiring, but of spending; not of money, but of work. They followed their inner visions which they wanted to realize; they scorned the command of the world and its fictitious reality. And here we have reached the core of the problem, we are touching the origin of the evil.

Success is derivated from the Latin. The Latin verb succedere means to follow. Cedere means to give in. If you want to be a success in the worldly sense of the term, you must follow, give in, conform. You must give up your own personality, submit to ready made standards. Those who do will always achieve a moderate amount of success. Those who do not will risk all that is precious to human beings: life, liberty, property. But maybe they will gain their soul.

The Divine Gift of Personality.

WELL, how shall we judge a fellow if we discard material success as a standard? Money is the only powerable, measurable thing which shows approximately the degree of his achievement. This question will be answered if we probe a little more deeply into the nature of money. What is money? Money is power. The power to make other people do our bidding. Here reappears, in modernized, legalized forms, the mediæval spirit of club law, "Faustrecht." The most powerful man is the greatest man: this is the conception of our allegedly enlightened times.

In a more advanced, more spiritual, more fraternal, and less stupid epoch we shall call the greatest man him who has rendered the greatest service. The difference seems fundamental to me. Nowadays, when a well known man dies, after the funeral you will see in the papers the eloquent headline: "Mr. Miller's estate worth $10,000 only." And Mr. Miller, who may have been an inventor, a statesman, a scientist, a man who, as Agassiz said, "would not waste his time in making money," becomes posthumously discredited like "poor Abe."

Civilization can only advance, expand, endure as long as we acknowledge the divine gift of personality. In our democracy especially we need men who have the courage not to conform, to contradict, to resist, to criticize, to be unpopular. We need less successes and more failures—men who may bestow on our nation imperishable gifts and the faculty to enjoy them and value them.

GRAHAM BANK ROW ENDS; WILL AID DEPOSITORS

Trustee Gets Mattress Company Stock.

Depositors of the defunct Graham & Sons bank, cherishing a long standing promise of 100 cents on the dollar, were heartened yesterday by developments that may end the controversy that has long impeded settlement of the bank's affairs.

Under a compromise agreement submitted to Federal Judge George T. Page by attorneys for the depositors, the question as to the ownership of 998 shares of stock of the Marshall Ventilated Mattress company, heretofore a mooted point, is satisfactorily disposed of.

This stock was at one time said to be worth $1,000,000. The heirs of the late Andrew J. Graham claimed it, but certain depositors contended it should be listed as among the assets of the defunct bank, alleging Mr. Graham had acquired it through financing the mattress company in its infancy with bank money.

Gave Stock for Aid.

The heirs said Samuel I. Ginsburg had given Mr. Graham the stock for no consideration other than friendship. Ginsburg, however, did not support this statement. He said, in consideration of financial aid, half the 998 shares were given Graham, but the other half belong to Fred Genge, an official of the mattress company.

Since the stock ownership dispute arose the Ginsburg-Genge interests have organized two other companies.

The Grahams finally turned the stock over to the Chicago Title & Trust company. They agreed it should be sold, providing the returns, taken with other assets of the bank, would discharge all obligations of the institution.

Merger to Repay Depositors.

The compromise agreement provides for the merger of the three Ginsburg-Genge corporations, and the employment of Ralph Graham in a managerial capacity for five years. Fifty per cent of the stock of the new organization is to go to Ginsburg and Genge, 25 per cent to the Chicago Title & Trust company as trustee under the composition plan for liquidating the bank, and the remaining 25 per cent to eastern stockholders of the three companies.

Judge Page indicated he would approve the compromise when it is o. k.'d by attorneys representing various other interests involved.

A news dispatch from Germany reports that Hugo Stinnes, the industrial baron, suffered concussion of the brain when his automobile overturned near Wilsbaden. His condition was said not to be grave.

WRECK OF AUTO TRAPS 1 ROBBER; 2 MORE HUNTED

A wrecked automobile found in a ditch near Crawford and Fullerton avenues Friday night resulted yesterday in the arrest of one holdup man and revealed the names of two more for whom the police are searching.

Early Friday night, while he was driving on Addison street near the St. Paul tracks, three thieves jumped on the running board of the machine of Alex Wnostek, 3858 North Irving avenue, and commanded him and his companion, Miss Catherine Costello, 2965 Fletcher street, to throw up their hands. One thief menaced the girl and the other two relieved Wnostek of $18 and drove off in his car.

Later the robbers stopped Fred Powers, 2514 North Spaulding avenue, and a young woman, robbing them of a small sum.

Sergt. John Ryan and his squad found the stolen car wrecked and ditched. They arrested Thomas Morley, alias Smalley, 3029 North Kilpatrick avenue, who was cited for bravery in the Argonne. Yesterday Morley confessed he was one of the holdup men and gave the names of the other two. He said he was broke and out of work.

securities Spurgin removed, he is said to have left other securities of doubtful or no actual value.

For instance, out of a fund of securities left with the bank for real estate loans, he took $165,000, according to the state bank examiner.

"Mr. Spurgin left a trust receipt for these mortgages, and it is possible that they may be found somewhere in the bank," Mr. Savage said. "The books, so far as we can tell now, balance. Mr. Spurgin left securities for everything he took.

"There is something to show for everything, but it is a question of values. We won't be able to determine the exact loss until we put these securities on the market."

According to James J. Kelly, 29 West Washington street, one of the directors of the bank, the directors had no knowledge of the loans which Spurgin made.

Minister Not Surprised.

The Rev. Johnston Myers, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church, East 23d street and South Michigan avenue, said his church was one of the depositors. He was not surprised at the disappearance of Spurgin.

"I stepped into the bank about three months ago while Spurgin was conversing over the telephone. He appeared very nervous. He was repeating everything the parties on the other end were saying. 'So you mean to say we are going to be wiped out if we don't put up more money? I can't do that—I'm almost broke now.' Then Spurgin saw me and calmed somewhat."

Mr. Myers said he will devote his morning sermon today to the bank swindle, urging depositors to coöperate with those who are trying to save the institution.

RIVAL LOSES $140 RING TO WIFE WHO SHOT HUSBAND

Mrs. Rose Hartig was yesterday given $140 which her husband, Nicholas Hartig, former secretary of the Chicago Motor Liverymen's association, had paid to Loftis Bros.' company for a diamond ring, purchased for his "intended wife."

Judge Harry M. Fisher in the Circuit court awarded the money to Mrs. Hartig together with $12 a week temporary alimony, pending the litigation of her suit for separate maintenance.

The "intended wife" is said to be Mrs. Mae Roth, who is named in the bill. Mrs. Hartig shot her husband through the chest in May, 1917, after finding a letter from Mrs. Roth under his pillow.

QUAKER RELIEF WINS GRATITUDE OF THE GERMANS

Senator France Sees War's Blight on Young.

BY JOSEPH IRWIN FRANCE.
[United States Senator from Maryland.]
[Copyright: 1921: By the Baltimore Sun.]

BERLIN, June 26.—[By Mail.]—The principal objection to a rapid run through a large country is that one sees only a few high spots. In Berlin, until today, I had seen principally government officials, publicists, bankers, manufacturers, merchants—and Americans, once more swarming about this end of Unter den Linden and reviving the venerable jest of the American who sees a German dining in the luxurious Adlon and cries: "What! Do they let foreigners into this hotel?"

Today, however, I devoted largely to talking with local agents of the American Friends' Service committee, and seeing the work which the "Kwaeker" are doing for the next generation in Germany. My interest was manifold. I wished to see just what is the service to which Germans refer in such grateful terms, extremely pleasant to the ears of an American; I wished to see the other extreme from the groaning tables along the boulevards; I wished to observe whether the poor of 1921 are poorer than those of 1914; finally, aware that the American Friends have already started distributing medical supplies from Moscow, I wished to examine the efficiency of the Friends' large scale work in Germany.

Suffering of Children.

Nowhere is reconstruction work more engrossing than in the actual reconstruction of the coming generation, caught in the important years of development by a war which deprived them of all fats, of all milk, and of the proper amount of almost everything else. The men at the front got the best. That helps to explain the sound appearance of the adult males you see; also to explain the frailty of a great part of the children. Those who looked to be 6 I found to be 10 or 12; a boy apparently under 10 proved to be 17. Growth seems almost to have stopped in the seven lean years of war.

There were many cases of rickets and arthritis and malnutrition in the babies' hospital I visited today. By patient nursing, inestimably aided by the Quaker food supply, the German government is attempting to give health to children who never had it: mothers who were underfed had given their offspring a dismal start in a dismal world.

Nearly 1,000,000 Fed.

So much for the babies. The Friends' principal work, perhaps, is the large scale distribution of one good meal a day to children of school age and apprentice age, the latter group, of course, having been 10 or 12 when the famine period started. When one learns that 950,000 are being fed in Germany by this American organization, he grasps the immensity of the task. I do not mean wholly fed; this would be far from exact. But the single daily meal so provided is of fats which could not otherwise be obtained and is, of all things, the sorest need of these children and the nursing or expectant mothers included in the rationing.

Save for milk, which only this month became available outside the hospitals, there has been for several months ability to get food of every sort—for money. "Starvation" talk does not mean that food is non-existent. But an apprentice getting 21 marks a week is not likely to get all his stomach craves when milk alone costs 3 marks a liter, or 4 marks without a sick-ration card. Even the skilled workman getting 40 marks a day (a fabulous wage if the mark were still worth 24 cents American, but not so princely when the mark is worth only one and a half cents) must mind his step.

Meets Baltimore Woman.

Of Miss Caroline Norment of Baltimore, who, with Alfred Scattergood of Philadelphia (a name so appropriate that I at first thought it was a sort of slogan), took us about, I asked an opinion as to the children's future. She was extremely grave.

"Probably it won't be necessary for the society to carry on for more than another year," she said. "The Germans will surely take over the work by that time, and as food prices fall the job of nourishing the new generation will become easier.

Particularly am I impressed by the financial distress of the middle class, whose pay has not risen as rapidly as the pay of common labor, and who had no outside income as had the well to do. This distress is even greater here, I should say, than in America, because of demoralization of currency and the dismaying depreciation in the buying power of the, say 3,000 marks, which the middle class citizen received and on which ($750 a year) he formerly got along. Today he still gets 3,000 marks, but they are worth only $45 at present exchange.

"LIVE AND LET LIVE DRIVE" IN LOOP TOMORROW

Chicago's unemployed war veterans will invade the loop tomorrow with their "Live and Let Live" advertising campaign. Every department store, office and commercial house will be canvassed and the funds shared by the disabled and unemployed veterans. Business houses identified with the campaign are provided with the poster bearing the "Live and Let Live" slogan. Forty motion picture theaters are using the campaign slides and urging patrons to rally to the relief of the veterans. The campaign "went over big" in the outlying districts.

In First Cost and After Cost, the World's Greatest Motor Car Value

CADILLAC
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

The Cadillac has always stood, and stands now, the world over, in a class all its own.

In Europe—England especially—no other American car is ever mentioned, or even considered, in comparison with the Cadillac.

And in America, you know the overwhelming preference in which it is held by owner and non-owner alike.

And yet, strangely enough, those cars which strive for comparison with the Cadillac have always been, and are now, higher in price.

So there is a double sense—a greater and a lesser sense—in which the Cadillac is clearly the most notable motor car value in the world today.

The greater value of the Cadillac—on which its reputation rests—is its superior performance, and that immunity from the need of constant tinkering, adjustment, overhauling and repair which renders it unique among motor cars in economy.

This is the true value-test beside which the lower first price the Cadillac owner enjoys is of little or no consequence.

Nevertheless, it is pleasant for the Cadillac owner to know that in first cost, as well as after cost, he enjoys the greatest motor car value in the world today.

"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

What other good restaurant or hotel invites and encourages the sharing of portions? NONE. On the contrary they discourage it by charging 10 or 15c or more extra for each portion served for two. Most food portions at the North American are ample for two for the very reason that we are glad to have them shared by two.

Save the High Cost of "Service"

Prices like these for big portions of the highest grade food have made the North American the most popular restaurant in Chicago.

Whole Baby Lobster, hot or cold, with melted butter, or Chili sauce	65c
Breast of Chicken, with Bacon	65c
Chicken, dark meat, with Bacon	55c
Broiled Halibut and Peas	35c
Pork Tenderloin	35c
Fresh Shrimps (one dozen) with Chili Sauce	30c

and a big variety of splendid salads (17 of them)—cold meats—and real French pastry.

Breakfast

The air is fresh, pure and cool. You can have breakfast, read your paper and enjoy your morning cigar in real comfort.

Red Raspberries—a big dish and plenty of real cream	25c
Honey Waffle, with three strips of bacon, butter, pure maple sap or honey	25c
2 fried Eggs, 4 strips of bacon (and the eggs are fried in butter)	30c
Calves Liver and Bacon	35c
Fresh Toast and Butter	5c
2-cup Pot of Coffee	10c

One advantage of dining at the North American Restaurant is that you serve yourself and save the cost of service, which is not a small item these days.

As a matter of fact the saving is about 40 to 50 per cent of what other good restaurants and hotels must charge to include service. If we were to restore "service" we would have to charge about that much more for the same food and the size of portions we are giving now at our present reasonable prices.

But there is no danger of our doing so. People who love good food are "making a beaten path to our door." We know we are providing food which can't be better anywhere, at the lowest possible prices. And we are content.

It is an easy matter to satisfy yourself regarding the truth of our published statements regarding food and prices. Try one meal here. Your taste will tell you about the quality of the food—and taste can't be fooled. Your eyes will tell you about the big portions—and when you glance over our prices you will realize how well you can dine here for a small amount of money.

And the beauty of it all is that you not only dine well and for a small cost but you will undoubtedly enjoy serving yourself. Instead of trying to guess what you want to eat by looking at a printed bill of fare you make your selections from the food itself. This is a great advantage. If you happen to be in a hurry you can serve yourself much quicker than you could be served in the conventional way. And after you have finished you are at perfect liberty to linger at your table for conversation or your cigar. And you can stay just as long as you wish. There is no one trying to "shoo-you-out" so a new customer may be served.

Without a doubt, if you don't dine here you are overlooking something well worth while.

No matter how hot the weather —it is always cool here

ORTHCLIFFE, IN Y,, SAYS BRITISH ARE DISARMING

eat Warships Rotting for Lack of Funds.

New York, July 23.—[Special.]—sed in a pongee suit with a fedora ped Panama hat, brown Oxford tie, the large horn-rimmed glasses he worn for the last two years, Lord rthcliffe, owner of the London es, Daily Mail, Evening News, and merous other newspapers and peri- dicals, arrived here today on the Cun- der Aquitania on his trip around the rld via Vancouver and Australia.

Bronzed by the sun and apparently good health, he told his friends on pier that he had enjoyed the voy- from Southampton in spite of the t that he had received 260 wireless sages from all parts of the world king him to call on his tour.

Silent on Jap Problem.

He was accompanied by H. Wickam ed, editor of the London Times, who l go as far as Vancouver, and three iets. In an interview Lord North- ffe declined to commit himself on the panese question or the policy of the lies in the far east.

He was equally reticent concerning s controversy with Lloyd George and id that he already had made known s views upon that subject.

"What do you think of the Irish uestion?" he was asked.

"It is a great problem, unsettled for 00 years, and it is rather too much to xpect to settle it in seven days. I wonder if the American people know," Lord Northcliffe asked, "that Ireland as been offered a form of government y which it can tax England? Can you magine a situation arising in which ong Island would have the power to x New York City?"

How Erin Can Tax Britain.

He explained that his remark re- rred to the customs duties, because nder the form of government offered reland would have her own internal evenue and could place import taxes ainst England.

He expressed surprise that it was not own in the United States for a long me that Lloyd George would have elcomed a conference with De Valera the government could have been as- red that there would be a truce in eland and that De Valera would ing it about.

"What are your views on disarma- ent?"

"I am in favor of it," he replied, nd so is every sane person I have et. In my opinion the President's ove was a wise one."

May Visit the President.

"Will you see President Harding?"

"That is for the President to de- de. I am going to Washington on ednesday morning and shall spend a w days there visiting friends, includ- g the British ambassador, Sir Auck- nd Geddes, before proceeding to the acific coast."

Britain already was doing her part ward disarmament by cutting down r navy, reducing the personnel by ,000 men from pre-war days and inging the army to 350,000 men, hich included British territories, he id. Many great battleships, he said, e rotting at the docks for lack of nds for their upkeep.

He also made known that he was king considerable interest in com- ercial aviation and was anxious to ave the British government further s development. There were numbers f discarded planes suitable for that urpose, he said.

He had proposed an air line from ngland to Australia, and believed that he trip could be made in ten days on non-stop flight.

Generally speaking, he was optimis- c on the business and financial out- ok in England.

Tribute to N. Y. Daily News.

"I am very glad to see that since my ast visit to America pictorial journal- sm has established itself so firmly here," Lord Northcliffe declared. "As ou know, I was the pioneer, with the London Daily Mirror, of newspapers ke the New York Daily News and the New York Sunday News.

"Of course, I no longer control that ublication, but I hope you will not ind if, from my long experience of ictorial news, I tell you that I don't hink your paper is as good as its Lon- on prototype. On the whole, I think he London Mirror is a neater produc- ion, but naturally you must conform ith local practice in that matter.

"I am glad to see that you cultivate he amusing human piece of news. The ondon Daily Mail and Daily Mirror ave always done so.

"In the matter of news, of course, ou are very different from the Mirror, hich tries to cover for its readers he news of the whole world, to the eglect possibly of local events. Owing o the great area of this country, and or other reasons, American newspa- ers are more local."

Widow of German Manufacturer Has Her Children Restored to Her; Parted by War.

MRS. EMMY OHL.
JIESEL OHL. ISLE OHL.

MRS. EMMY OHL, a teacher at the Bush conservatory of music, saw her two little daughters for the first time in eight years yesterday. The wife of a wealthy German sausage maker, she came here to visit friends and was marooned when the war began in 1914. Then her husband died and she took out citizenships papers here. It was not until two months ago that her children—Jiesel, 14, and Ilse, 11—came to America. They stayed with an uncle in the east and were not reunited with their mother until last week.

In the interval, by way of celebrating their emancipation from meatless Germany, Jiesel gained fifteen pounds and learned to say "watermelon." Ilse is eighteen pounds heavier and has learned approximately four English words, towit: "I like ice cream."

YANKEE EFFORT TO SAVE CHINESE PASSES ITS PEAK

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TIENTSIN, July 22.—The effort of the American Red Cross in the Chinese famine area to carry out the greatest rescue of human life in the history of the world just has passed its peak and the mighty machineries of organization and administration soon are expected to show up their momentum, the task accomplished.

The work of the Americans increased steadily as the last winter wore into spring and the intensity of the famine continued. In May the number of persons employed on road building and in other useful work, receiving rations in return therefor, totalled 74,040 and represented 611,120. This was the maximum number succored. In June 20,000 workers were employed in Shantung province alone building a highway reaching from Yuchang on the Tientsin-Pukow railway to tidewater at Haifeng, which makes possible a direct supply of grain to the western end of the province in the event of future famine.

In March 143,000 persons were succored through the employment of 28,000 workers and in April there were 50,000 workers, representing 272,000 hungry mouths.

GREEK SLAIN BY HOBOES IN BOX CAR HOLDUP

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 23.—[Special.]—Tom Mannanes, 22, Chicagoan, member of a prominent Greek family, was murdered and ground beneath the wheels of a freight train as the result of a holdup staged by hoboes in a Northwestern railroad box car east bound near Clyman Junction, Wis., late Friday. Police throughout the state are on the lookout for a white and a Negro who committed the crime and threw other Greeks of the party out of the box car. The Negro did the shooting.

QUIT SIBERIA AT ONCE, JAP COUNT ADVISES TOKIO

'Let's Go to U. S. with Clean Hands,' Kato Says

TOKIO, July 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—"Let us go to Washington with clean hands; let us get out of Siberia as soon as possible," declared Count Tsunetada Kato, former high commisisoner in Siberia, in a statement to the press today.

It was certain, he continued, that the question of Russia would be taken up at the Washington conference, and it was to be regretted that the matter of evacuation was still unsettled. The Japanese were excessively fearful of bolshevism, he declared, and should adopt a policy of rapprochement towards the soviet.

Foreign View of Japan.

Count Kato, who has been traveling in China and India, said that Japan was popularly regarded in those countries as aggressive, in proof of which the critics pointed to her policy in Siberia and Shantung. Withdrawal from Siberia and Shantung was imperative in order to remove misunderstandings.

With reference to armaments, the Yomi-Uri Shimbun, in addition to the limitation or abolition of fortifications in the islands in the Pacific, demands delimitation of the areas in the Pacific to be guarded by the various navies. It says in this demand it has official support.

PACIFIC PLANS SOON.

Washington, D. C., July 23.—[Special.]—With the view of the United States concerning the forthcoming far Pacific conference fully explained to the principal allied and associated powers, the next few days should see a determination of the several pending questions involved in the preliminaries to this world gathering.

Japan's views as to matters that, in her opinion, should be excluded from consideration, are expected, and it is likely that the date of the opening of the conference, which is a subject of considerable importance, will be decided. Nothing has occurred to indicate that there will be serious objection to President Harding's desire to have the conference assemble in Washington on Armistice day.

Is Opposed to Delay.

No formal proposal that the conference be postponed until spring has been received at the state department from the British government, but the United States has been kept informed of the wishes of the British government and the British overseas prime ministers, and has expressed its views concerning them. The suggestion that the conference be held without delay is agreeable to the United States, provided it is held in Washington. The suggestion that the conference be postponed until spring is not agreeable to the United States, which would prefer that the first meeting be not later than November.

There seems to be a strong belief in Europe, as there is in the United States, that the conference owes it to the world to endeavor to remove all the cause sof irritation in the Pacific and the far east that might eventually lead to international disturbance.

UNITED VOICE NEEDED

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 23.—"It is important to safeguard the countries of the Pacific against possible attack. The opening of the Panama canal made a great difference to these countries. I wish I could think wars were at an end, but such is not the case, and we have got to make preparations to defend ourselves."

This statement formed the keynote of a speech by Premier Massey of New Zealand at Bath this afternoon, where he and Premier Hughes of Australia were given the freedom of the city.

He urges that the delegates of the British empire at the Washington disarmament conference speak with a united voice as they did during the war.

MEET TO FRAME REPLY.

LONDON, July 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—It was learned today that the hurried conference of the dominion premiers called yesterday afternoon was for the purpose of considering a reply from Washington to queries from the British dominions regarding representation of the dominions at the proposed conference in Washington on the limitation of armaments and far eastern questions. The premiers, it is stated, considered the American answer satisfactory.

Wife Recognizes Shirt She Made for Her Husband on Another Man's Back; Causes His Arrest as Thief.

Mrs. Lillian Mazurkiewicz.

WIFE KNOWS HER SPOUSE'S SHIRT; TRAPS A BURGLAR

Garment's Cut Leads Her to $10,000 Loot Cache.

Mrs. Lillian Mazurkiewicz, 1401 North Ashland avenue, besides being a skillful seamstress, is a detective of no mean ability. She proved it yesterday when the West Chicago avenue police arrested Joseph Wilinski, 28 years old, in his home at 1747 McReynolds street, and found stolen property valued at more than $10,000 in his house.

Included in the loot were three silk shirts which Mrs. Mazurkiewicz had made for her husband, and which were stolen from her home June 21, 1920, with a quantity of other clothing and jewelry. Wilinski was traced to his home last Tuesday, when Mrs. Mazurkiewicz, looking from her window, recognized the shirt Wilinski was wearing as one she had made for her husband.

Knows Jaunty Cut of Shirt.

There was a jaunty cut to the shirt that Mrs. Mazurkiewicz recognized. The stripes in the silk cloth caught her eye as the pattern which she had selected because of her husband's taste. She put on her hat and followed Wilinski to his home.

Then she told Detective Sergeants Etchingham and Herman Larson of the West Chicago avenue station. They went to the house in McReynolds street and found the rooms stored with clothing and jewelry.

Confesses Twenty-one Burglaries.

Already, the police say, Wilinski has confessed to twenty-one burglaries and property found in his house has been identified by a number of persons whose homes were robbed. He is alleged to have committed three burglaries in Cicero, one in the Marquette police district, three in the Shakespeare avenue district, and fourteen in the West Chicago avenue district. When the detectives went to the house they found Mrs. Martha Wilinski wearing jewels and a silk waist police said have been stolen. She was not arrested.

Mrs. Mazurkiewicz accepted with joy the congratulations of the detectives and the three shirts she had made for her husband.

"John had been after me to make him some more," she said, "but now maybe he will be satisfied with these old ones."

CAR LIFTED OFF TRACKS TO SAVE LIFE OF GIRL, 4

A surface car was lifted off the tracks by volunteer civilians last night in an attempt to save the life of a 4 year old girl.

About 6:30 o'clock Agnes Grant, 668 Milwaukee avenue, attempted to cross the street to her home. A car struck her and she fell beneath the wheels. The car was stopped as quickly as possible, but she was pinned beneath the trucks.

Capt. George Thompson and members of engine company No. 3, who were nearby, called on civilians to help them. The car was lifted clear of the tracks and Agnes was rushed to the county hospital. She may not live, physicians say.

INSANE, SAYS ONE JUDGE; SANE, SAYS ANOTHER; WHICH?

Whether John J. Knecht, 4339 North Whipple street, is insane will be for the Supreme court to decide. Judge Frank S. Righeimer of the County court found he was insane. Later Judge Michael McKinley of the Superior court decided he was not insane.

Knecht, said to be worth $50,000, was taken to the County court by his wife, who said he had been drinking heavily. He was committed to Kankakee. Later the wife, Mrs. Minnie Knecht, relented and wanted her husband home. Following the decision of Judge McKinley a certified copy of his order was presented to Judge Righeimer yesterday, asking that the insanity record be set aside. This Judge Righeimer refused to do, contending Judge McKinley's finding is illegal.

Attorney B. J. Juron, representing Knecht, asserted he would take the case to the Supreme court.

CITY GETS NEW POSTMASTER IN NEXT FEW WEEKS

Announcement of the identity of Chicago's new postmaster is expected within two weeks, according to the commission that has been examining applicants for the position. J. G. Yaden, chief examiner of the civil service commission; Miss L. L. Tracy, assistant, and George F. Birdseye, postoffice inspector of Cincinnati, who comprised the commission, left yesterday for Washington, where they will present the result of their work to an expert committee of examiners. The examiners will grade the papers and present the names of the three highest applicants to Postmaster Will Hays for the selection of one as the new Chicago postmaster.

U. S. WARSHIPS ARRIVE IN PERU FOR CENTENNIAL

Lima Welcomes Foreign Missions.

BY J. W. WHITE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LIMA, Peru, May 23.—The United States battleships Oklahoma and Arizona have arrived at Callao harbor, bringing a special embassy from America to attend the Peruvian centennial celebration of its independence. Italy, Spain, and France also sent battleships, while eighteen nations sent special embassies and thirteen others sent special missions.

Honor Argentine Liberator.

The big event of the celebration will be the unveiling of a monument to the Argentine liberator, San Martin, who led the Peruvians in their struggle for independence. The ceremony will occur upon the arrival of two battleships from Argentina, bringing an embassy and a regiment of grenadiers, the traditional descendents of the troops which accompanied San Martin.

The French embassy, which arrived yesterday morning, included Gen. Mangin, the defender of Verdun, who was given an enthusiastic welcome, the citizens showering him with flowers from their windows.

Ban on Profiteering.

President Legnin has issued a decree fixing the maximum prices for all articles of prime necessity, from matches to beef, and providing large fines for any one charging more. This action was designed to prevent profiteering during the celebration. He also fixed the rate which hotels and boarding houses may charge during July and August.

THE TWEED RING: HOW NEW YORK ENDED ITS GRIP

Caught Robbing City; Boss Died in Cell.

found that they had fallen on evil times.

"On the other hand, 'men with claims against the city—ring favorites, most of them—were told to multiply the amount of each bill by five, or ten, or a hundred, after which, with Mayor Hall's "o. k." and Connolly's indorsement, it was paid without question. The money was not handed to the claimant direct, but paid through a go-between, who cashed the check, settled the original bill, and divided the remainder (usually 65, sometimes 95 per cent of the whole) between Tweed, Sweeney, Connolly, and Hall—Tweed and Connolly getting 25 per cent each and Sweeney, Hall, and the underlings the residue.'

Nast, Young David, Fights Goliath.

"It was in the face of such conditions that the young David of journalistic art, Thomas Nast, went forth to battle against the Goliath of greed and graft, backed as was the giant power by the governor of the state, the New York state Democracy, the entire city government of the metropolis, the judiciary of the city, most of the daily papers, Jay Gould, Jim Fisk, and the Erie contingent, to say nothing of eminent respectables, and finally rendered doubly secure in its position by the complete control of an election machinery that has probably never been approached in an American city for the manipulation of majorities.

"At first the members were amused. They felt secure, but later amusement gave place to indignation not unmixed with terror, which finally found expression in Tweed's coarse and uncouth exclamation: 'Let's stop them d——d pictures. I don't care so much what the papers write about me—my constituents can't read—but, d——n it, they can see pictures!'

Cast Eyes on Presidency.

"The idea of getting to Washington was a dear dream to the members of the ring. The ring and the Erie contingent planned to secure the nomination of Gov. Hoffman for the Presidency, feeling sure that if once elected this pliant tool would virtually turn all offices over to them and their friends.

"Mr. James O'Brien was the sheriff under the ring, and it was through Mr. O'Brien that the proofs were secured that precipitated the overthrow of Tweed and his associates. One morning O'Brien repaired to Controller Connolly's office and stated that he had a friend, one William Copeland, whom he wished given a bookkeeper's position in the controller's office.

"The controller hesitated. He had grave misgivings. He knew nothing of Copeland. O'Brien, however, insisted that he knew Copeland, that he was all right and could be trusted; so finally Connolly consented and the Trojan horse entered the controller's office.

Copies Fraudulent Expenditures.

"No sooner was Copeland at the books than 'he began to make a transcript of the items of the ring's frightful and fraudulent disbursements, mainly charged as expenditures on the courthouse, then building. He worked fast and overtime to get these, and within a brief period the evidence of a guilt so vast as to be almost incredible was in O'Brien's hands. Another man, one Matthew O'Rourke, in a similar manner had been installed as county bookkeeper, and in this position had also fortified himself with proofs of enormous frauds, chiefly in connection with armory rents and repairs.'"

O'Brien carried the copies of the books to the New York Times, and Mr. Flower continues:

"When it came to the ears of the master spirits of the ring that the New York Times had obtained the transcript of the controller's books which would substantiate the criminal charges made by the Times, there was consternation in Tammany hall until Connolly hit upon a plan of buying off Jones, the proprietor. Did not every man have his price? Connolly repaired to the office of a lawyer in the Times building. Later Jones was sent for. Here Connolly offered the proprietor five million dollars if he would not publish the damning evidence.

Turns Down $5,000,000 Bribe.

"As Connolly waited for the answer Mr. Jones said: 'I don't think the devil will ever make a higher bid for me than that.'

"Connolly began to plead and drew a graphic picture of what one could do with five million dollars. He ended by saying: 'Why, with that sum you can go to Europe and live like a prince.'

"'Yes,' said Mr. Jones, 'but I should know that I was a rascal. I cannot consider your offer or any offer not to publish the facts in my possession.'

"In this connection we will mention the tempting offer made at a later date to Thomas Nast ($500,000 in gold 'to drop this ring business and get out of the country.')

"Connolly returned to his companions, terrified and despairing, and 'on July 8 was published the first installment of those terrible figures that, having once been made to lie, now turned to cry out the damning truth in bold black type. The sensation was immediate. The figures showed that an enormous outlay had been charged as "armory rents and repairs" which never could have been legitimately expended.

How the City Was Milked Dry.

"'Ten lofts, mostly over old stables, had been rented at a cost of $85,000, and though these lofts had not been used, an additional $463,064 had been charged for keeping them in repair. Ten other armories had been kept in repair for nine months at the trifling cost of $941,453.86. The upper floor of Tammany hall, worth at that time about $4,000 a year, was charged in the list at nine times that sum.'

"On July 22, 1871, the Times exploded its second bomb by publishing Copeland's transcript of Connolly's accounts. They showed at a glance how the city had been robbed of millions upon millions of dollars.

"'Many of the great sums had been charged as repairs or furnishings for the new courthouse, and most of them had been distributed through such "contractors" as J. H. Ingersoll & Co., Andrew J. Garvey, Keyser & Co., and others, who had "arranged" whatever small part was really due for goods and labor and deposited the huge balance to the credit of the various members and associates of the ring.

$3,000,000 Building Costs $11,000,000.

"'The new courthouse was still far from complete and miserably furnished, yet it had already resulted in the neat outlay of $11,000,000, when the most liberal estimate placed its value, finished and luxuriously furnished, at less than $3,000,000. A few items will be sufficient to show the scale upon which the ring conducted its financial policy:

"'Forty old chairs and three tables had a record value of $179,729.60.

"'A charge for repairing fixtures through J. H. Keyser & Co. was $1,149,874.50.

"'Thermometers, $7,500.

"'Then there were carpets, shades, and curtains, also supplied by that marvelous firm, Ingersoll & Co., at the fairly comfortable sum of $675,534.44. Why always those odd cents? And one cannot help admiring the two liverymen who in a few brief days earned nearly $50,000 by supplying the aldermen with carriages, mostly for funerals. That must have been a busy season for aldermen, keeping up with all those obsequies.

Plasterer Makes Record for All Time.

"'Nor must we overlook one G. S. Miller, a carpenter, who was set down as having received $360,747.61 for one month's work.

"'But Garvey, Andrew J. Garvey, the plasterer! Generations of plasterers yet unborn will take off their hats to his memory! Two million eight hundred and seventy thousand four hundred and sixty-four dollars and six cents he earned at his humble trade in the brief period of nine months. Fifty thousand dollars a day was his record for an entire month! Surely never was a month so well plastered as that long-ago June!

"'As heretofore stated, during thirty months of ring rule, thirty millions of dollars had been stolen out of hand. The city debt had increased more than fifty millions and was doubling every two years. No wonder the shores of Long Island sound were lined with the elegant homes of the city contractors and financiers.

"'Matthew J. O'Rourke, who since that time has made a careful study of the city's finances, states that counting the issues of fraudulent bonds, the swindling of the city by wealthy tax-dodgers, by franchises and favors granted, by blackmail and extortion—the total amount of the city's loss through the Tweed ring stands at not less than $200,000,000.'"

And Then Comes the Waterloo.

Mr. Flower paints the election in November, 1871, that proved the Waterloo of the ring, and the disintergration of the inner circle, whose members "began to accuse one another and to join in the general clamor."

"All the city was now aroused. Men who had remained silent or who had worked hand and glove with the ring now experienced a sudden spasm of virtue. On every side the smaller rogues and the eminently respectable gentlemen who had long been beneficiaries of the ring were breaking for cover."

The Booth committee was ready with its report. Figures from the Broadway bank "'showed just how an account against the city—a sum of $6,312,641.37—had netted a clear profit of $6,095,309.17 to Tweed and his friends.'"

"'The report of the Booth committee removed the last breath of doubt. On that day William Tweed was arrested, and, though released on a million dollar bond, supplied by Jay Gould and others, that first arrest marked the beginning of the end.'

"Tweed escaped to Spain, where he was apprehended and returned to America, to die in disgrace.

"'Of all the fortunes acquired by the ring and its adherents, scarcely the remnants of a single one exist today. Less than a million of the loss was recovered by the city, but the men who had sold themselves for plunder had not the ability to preserve their ill gotten price. Some of them died in exile, others in prison. Some were allowed to return and testify against their fellows, and all, or nearly all, have perished from the sight of men and left only dishonored names behind.'"

Bryce Tells of Ignoble End.

The end that befell the members of the ring is narrated in greater detail by James Bryce in "The American Commonwealth."

"The respectable citizens," he says, "who had for once been aroused from their lethargy, and who added their votes to those of the better sort of Democrats and of the Republican party, overwhelmed the machine, notwithstanding the usual election frauds undertaken on its behalf. Few of the ring candidates survived, and the ring itself was irretrievably ruined.

"Sweeney forthwith announced his withdrawal from public life, and returned to Canada. The wretched Connolly was indicted and found so few friends that he remained in jail for six weeks before he could procure bail. Tweed, though dispirited by the murder of his boon companion, the notorious Fisk (who had been carrying through the scandalous Erie railroad frauds by the help of the ring judges), stood his ground with characteristic courage, and refused to resign the office to which the mayor had appointed him. However, in December he was arrested, but presently released on insignificant bail by Judge Barnard.

"Reformers" Get Legislature.

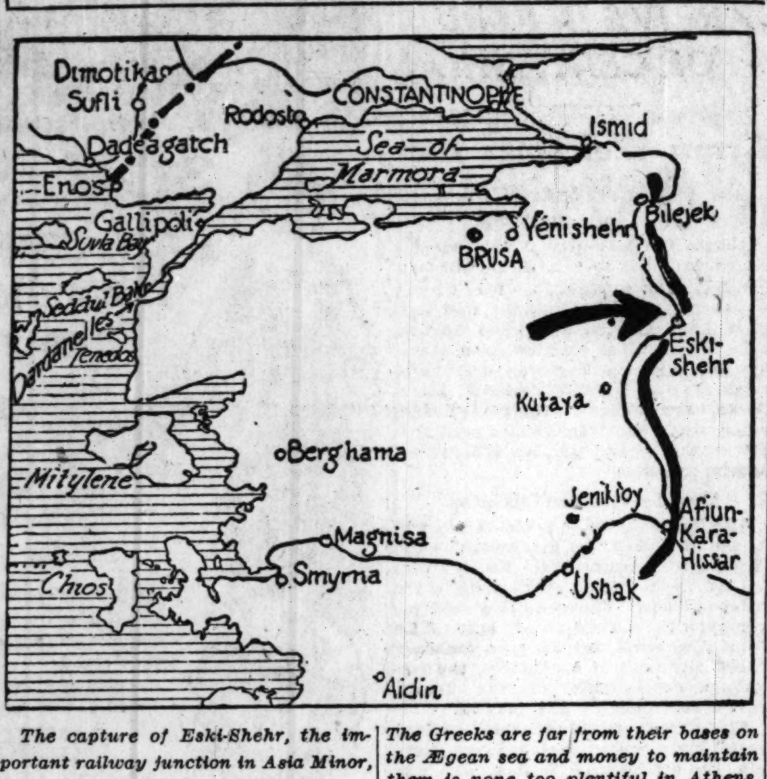
"The state assembly, in which the reformers had now a majority, soon afterwards took steps to impeach Barnard, McCunn, and Cardozo [three ring judges]. Cardozo resigned; the other two were convicted and removed from the bench. The endless delays and minute technicalities of the courts of New York protracted Tweed's trial till January, 1873, when, after a long hearing, the jury was discharged because unable to agree. He was thereupon rearrested and upon his second trial in November, when special efforts had been made to secure a trustworthy jury, was found guilty and sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment.

"After a while the Court of Appeals released him, holding the sentence irregular, because cumulative; he was then rearrested in a civil suit by the city, escaped, was caught in Spain, identified by a caricature, and brought back to prison, where he died in 1876.

"Hall was thrice tried. On the first occasion the death of a juryman interrupted the proceedings; on the second the jury disagreed; on the third he obtained a favorable verdict. Connolly fled the country and died in exile. None of the group, nor of Tweed's other satellites, ever again held office.

"This was the end of the Tweed ring."

GREEKS HOLD RAILWAY



The capture of Eski-Shehr, the important railway junction in Asia Minor, by the Greek army was celebrated enthusiastically in Athens. The Greeks are now firmly astride the Anatolian railway, but military critics point out that the victory may be an empty one. The Greeks are far from their bases on the Ægean sea and money to maintain them is none too plentiful in Athens. Nevertheless the Greeks assert that they consider the Turks beaten, and the press of Athens has made demands that the Greeks "march on Constantinople."

TURKS TURN ON GREEKS, BUT ARE PUT TO FLIGHT

LONDON, July 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Turkish nationalists on Thursday vigorously counter-attacked the Greek center in Asia Minor with fourteen infantry and two cavalry divisions, but seven Greek divisions repulsed the attack, says an official statement from Athens.

The Greeks immediately launched a counter-attack, defeated the Turks and pursued them along the whole front, the statement says, the Turks retreating in disorder to the east and northeast. Greek cavalry cut down 300 men and captured many prisoners and guns.

Another communique says that after the capture of Eski-Shehr a pitched battle occurred northwest and southeast of that city, in which the Turks were crushed and routed, the Greeks taking a very large number of prisoners and much booty.

Gen. Ishmet Pasha, the Turkish commander of Eski-Shehr, the statement says, was among the wounded and his chief of staff was killed.

Bavarian Leader Averts Disgrace Through Suicide

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, July 23.—Bavarian Minister of Transportation von Frauendorfer, one of the world's greatest authorities on numismatics, walked into the river today and shot himself dead rather than plead guilty to forging copies of one of the rarest ancient Roman coins. The suicide of the Bavarian minister created a sensation throughout Germany, as he was known as a leading statesman.

Paige Six-66 Beats All Cars Climbing Hills Slowly in High Gear

The most terrific test of power you can apply to any motor car is slow hill-climbing in high gear. It is the one thing very few cars can do.

Famous twelves, famous eights, famous sixes and even fours have tried to show off side by side with the Paige Six-66. In 100 cities all have been beaten.

You may argue that a 12 cylinder motor, or an 8 cylinder motor, has steadier pulling power than a 6 cylinder motor.

But as a matter of cold fact the Paige Six-66 motor has proved itself superior in this greatest test of steady pulling—slow hill-climbing in high gear.

15% and 20% grades at 5 miles an hour—as long as 500 yards at a stretch—this is a performance which everyone wants in his car and which you can get in a Paige Six-66.

But this Paige does more than climb hills slowly. It has beaten all other cars in 100 cities at fast hill-climbing. It runs away from the so-called "best" of them.

Our own Hubbard Hill out on Sheridan Road isn't much of a test, but few cars can equal the Paige on this. Here's what it does:

From a standing start at the bottom in high gear you can slip in the clutch, put your foot on the throttle and with 7 passengers aboard go over the top at 30 miles an hour.

All this means that the Paige Six-66 is active, eager, alive—a delight to handle. You never sat behind the wheel of any car which minded you so willingly or which seemed so limitless in its ability.

If we should ask $4,000 or $5,000 for this Paige Six-66 many would willingly pay it. It has style and comfort which go with such a price. But when you learn that the price is only $2,875 you cease to ask why the Paige Six-66 is the largest selling fine car today.

"NOTIONS" STORE OF KIDDIES NETS ICE FUND $9.10

Dolls' Clothes Draw Rushing Trade.

BY REV. G. A. MAC WHORTER.

"Line forms to the right! Don't crowd! One at a time, please, and we can serve you all!"

Thus sang out "Bob" Hicks, special guard in charge of the crowd that flocked in front of the "MacKechnie-Hicks-Bowling" refreshments and notions counter Wednesday and Thursday, out on the MacKechnie front lawn at 7217 Merrill avenue.

"Bob" made a good floor walker, too, for he knew just which of the four "salesladies" handled the different varieties of goods offered. Catherine MacKechnie ladled out fresh hot chocolate fudge and the other candies so temptingly displayed; Grace Bowling displayed the latest styles in paper doll clothes; Mary Hicks served the refreshing lemonade, while Hester MacKechnie poured—all for THE TRIBUNE Free Ice Fund.

The first day's business netted a profit of $9.10 and the check is now in the hands of THE TRIBUNE cashier.

More than a ton of ice will be distributed to the poor mothers who sadly lack proper refrigeration facilities to keep baby's milk sweet and cold during the hot weather, as a result of but one day's business of the enterprising young south side merchants, and it is hoped their efforts will be successful as long as they can keep the firm of "MacKechnie-Hicks and Bowling" going.

CALLS FOX LAKE MOST MALIGNED TOWN IN ILLINOIS

"Fox Lake is not the hell hole it has been painted but a law abiding community of good citizens," a party of Chicago officials learned from Mayor Hummell of the Lake county town at a two-day house party given last week by Ald. George M. Maypole of Chicago at his Fox Lake summer home.

"Fox Lake is the most maligned town in the state," the mayor continued at the banquet which wound up the house party. "It gets the blame for the orgies and law violations of all other Lake county resorts."

To prove his contentions the mayor chartered a boat and took the Chicagoans, who included in their number nine aldermen, for a trip around Fox and connecting lakes, pointing out the homes of more than forty Chicagoans who are prominent in business and politics.

POLICE NAME 2 GANGSTERS AS "GIANT'S" KILLERS

Evidence that "Big Steve" Wisniewski, the "blue eyed giant," whose bullet riddled body was found in a Libertyville pasture, was murdered by Frank Lake, 1821 South Peoria street, and Terry Druggan, 1057 West 14th place, has been uncovered, the police declare.

Lake and Druggan were first mentioned in the case in an anonymous letter received by THE TRIBUNE, and turned over to Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes.

The police declare the killing to have been inspired by a "moonshine feud." Lake and Druggan disappeared the day after the body was found. Both are prominent in the "valley gang," and recently were arrested and released after the shooting of a policeman in the Little Bohemia cafe.

Detectives who investigated a report that the car used by the killers carried a license number assigned to Lee W. Popp, 20 West Jackson boulevard, found the report untrue. Mr. Popp was out of the city when the murder occurred, it was learned. His car was found by detectives in his private garage.

SAYS HE'S NOT DEAD.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 23.—John Fleming wired the war department today that reports of his death were untrue. The war department asked John to verify records of his death in a German prison camp so government officials would know whether to include his name in the list of those engraved on a war memorial to the dead of the First division.

Dr. Leo Steiner, for six years chief medical examiner of the city civil service commission, has been appointed superintendent of the Illinois Charitable Eye and Ear infirmary, 904 West Adams street, by Gov. Small, to succeed Dr. Hiram J. Smith, a Lowden appointee, who was forced out soon after Gov. Small took office. Dr. Steiner is a protégé of Health Commissioner Robertson. He was an instructor in the old Bennett Medical college under Dr. Robertson.

THRILLING FIGHT TO SAVE BURNING WELLS IN MEXICO

Mexico City, July 23.—Fire in the Amatlan oil fields which started Wednesday and caused property damage estimated at several million dollars has been reduced to two wells, which still are burning fiercely. Reports from Tampico say the conflagration is unlikely to spread further.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 23.—Four thousand men, working at top speed in six hour relays, are striving to prevent further spread of the oil fire which since last Wednesday has caused damage amounting to several million dollars in the Amatlan oil field of Mexico, according to advices received by Pittsburgh oil companies. "The consensus is that the fire will not spread beyond the confines of lot No. 162, where it started," one message said.

Big Oil Fire Near Beaumont.

Beaumont, Tex., July 23.—More than $1,000,000 in oil is reported lost in a fire, and four huge tanks still burning at Lucas, seven miles from Beaumont. The fire started Friday night when lightning struck one of the huge wooden tanks containing 300,000 barrels of crude oil.

GREAT PAGEANT ALL SET FOR OPENING DAY

All Lines of Business Represented.

Chicago's Pageant of Progress exposition will throw open its doors at 10 o'clock next Saturday morning, presenting what is said to be the greatest collection of business and industrial exhibits this city has seen since the World's Columbian exposition of 1893.

Nine hundred and eighty-four firms, corporations, or individuals have exhibits in the exposition. Practically every line of business is included, and the exhibits have been arranged with an educational aim in mind, to show the public the manifold processes that intervene between the raw materials and the finished products as they are displayed for saie.

President to Open Pageant.

President Harding has been invited officially to open the exposition by pressing a button in the White House, and other fitting ceremonies are being arranged for the opening day.

Many new and interesting exhibits have been added to the exposition during the last week. A feature of the automotive exhibit, which will occupy two and one-half sections, will be the historic De Witt Clinton engine, the first locomotive used on American railroads, which is being sent here by the New York Central lines. The old engine and several cars such as were used on the first railroads left Harmon, N. Y., last Wednesday on a special train of flat cars for a triumphal tour and will arrive in Chicago at 2:25 next Friday afternoon.

Varied Amusement Program.

Dr. C. St. Clair Darke, educational director of the exposition, said yesterday that the exhibitors have caught the spirit of the exposition and are vying with one another to produce the best exhibit.

An amusement program has been arranged in conection with ehe exposition. The naval militia of the Great Lakes station will hold its annual summer maneuvers off the pier. A thousand sailors from the naval training station will camp at the pier during the exposition. The fastest speedboats in America will stage a four days' racing program, in which the fastest time ever made through the water is expected to be beaten.

SODA MEN BOUND BY PRICE PACT, POOLE CHARGES

Refuse Even to Discuss Sky High Rates.

Gentlemen's agreements among soft drink and ice cream dealers were blamed yesterday by Russell J. Poole, city food expert, for high soda prices in certain neighborhoods.

Investigators visited stores along Cottage Grove avenue, between 47th and 57th streets, during the day. Prices in the drug stores and soft drink parlors were found to be uniformly high. When the proprietors were asked to come to Mr. Poole's office for a conference on prices, they flatly refused.

"Not How Fair, but How Much."

"In this and other neighborhoods," Mr. Poole reported to Ald. S. W. Govier, chairman of the living costs committe, "prices have no relation to the cost of goods nor to fair prices. It is simply a question of how much the traffic will stand.

"It is apparent there is a gentleman's agreement among these men to charge an exorbitant price and to refuse all information to public officials."

The report on the stores visited follows in part:

"In the O. W. Sission store, 5034 Cottage Grove avenue, the small sized No. 16 dipper is used for sodas and sundaes. From $1.30 to $1.40 is the wholesale price paid for ice cream, and by charging the public 65 and 75 cents a quart for it this store gets back $2.60 and $3 on the investment of $1.30 and $1.40.

Refuse to Explain Prices.

"Kidder & Lewis, 5058 Cottage Grove avenue, were charging 60 cents a quart and 30 cents a pint for ice cream on July 11. A day later an investigator was charged 75 cents a quart and 40 cents a pint. The owners have refused to come to this office to explain their prices.

"At Leonard Aehle's drug store, 57th street and Cottage Grove avenue, ice cream is 75 cents a quart and 40 cents a pint and soft drinks, such as coca cola, which should sell for 5 cents, are a dime.

"At Ortenstein drug store, 4701 Cottage Grove avenue, ice cream sells for 70, 80, and 90 cents a quart and bricks are as high as 70 cents each.

DRAFTSMAN HELD ON COMPLAINT OF GIRL; HIS TALE DIFFERENT

MISS ESSILY MARKMAN.

LOUIS BERG.

Rudolph Berg, 7353 Ingleside avenue, married, was arrested yesterday on complaint of Miss Essily Markman, 18, 1539 South Lawndale avenue. The arrest was made in the Monadnock block, at 53 West Jackson boulevard. Berg, a mechanical draftsman, is employed on the fifteenth floor, Miss Markman on the sixteenth.

"I had gone up to the sixteenth floor for a drink of cold water," Berg said. "I happened by the offices in which Miss Markman is employed. I noticed some gasoline pumps displayed, and, as I was interested, I stopped and asked the young woman for a catalogue.

"When we were about to leave the office she said she was going to faint, and screamed: 'Don't touch me!' I called the elevator man."

The young woman's story did not agree with that told by Berg, and the police decided to hold him.

Pair Who Robbed Leland Held in $50,000 Bonds

Two men identified as those who last Saturday robbed W. H. Leland, 4750 South Michigan avenue, former vice president of the Consumers' company, were held to the grand jury yesterday in bonds of $50,000 by Judge John F. Haas. They are Harold Foster and George Kelly. A companion identified simply as "Slim" was drowned at Kenosha Thursday.

LANDIS BRINGS SHOWDOWN IN BUILDER DISPUTE

Gets Draft of Compacts; Decision Nears.

Judge K. M. Landis, arbitrator of the building trades wage and working rules controversy, finally succeeded yesterday in bringing the dispute to a "showdown." His decision may be announced early this week.

There now remain only a few points of disagreement, and, in accordance with the peremptory demand he made on Friday, Judge Landis yesterday received briefs on these from the three principal factions involved—the Chicago Building Trades council, the Building Construction Employers' association, and the Associated Builders.

Biggest Obstacle Removed.

The conference at which the arbitrator received these reports developed the fact that the most important point of difference has been disposed of. This concerned the use of nonunion made materials. It has been agreed, it was said, that there is to be no ban on these.

There is no announcement as to the matters still in dispute, but it was reported Judge Landis' suggested clause providing that contractors should be permitted to work on their own jobs is giving trouble.

Schlake Makes Own Report.

Prospect of another bar to final settlement of the building trades dispute, which has been dragging since May 1, loomed early in the day, when William Schlake, business manager of the Associated Builders, announced he would not comply with Judge Landis' order for a consolidated report on points of disagreement by parties to the controversy.

Judge Landis, however, accepted a separate report from him.

Judge Landis will meet the building trades disputants in his chambers again tomorrow.

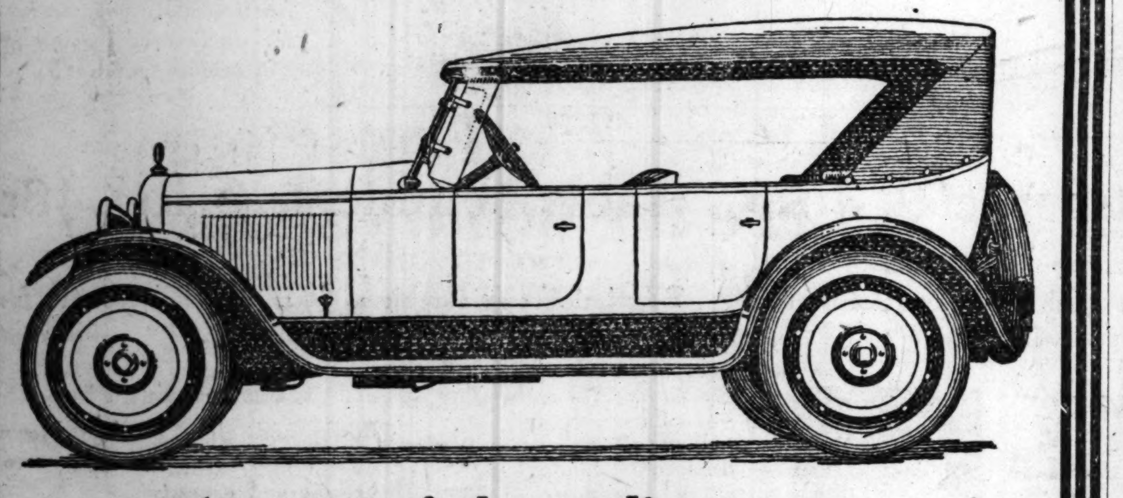
Saxon-Duplex



An out of the ordinary car at an unheard of price

What is all America looking for in an automobile?
Value!
What else?
Character!
Certainly, if you can get more car—more character in that car and have the price come considerably below the conventional cost, you are certainly going to take a look.
All that being granted, we want to tell you something about the new Saxon-Duplex.
Many people know nothing about it.
Do you, for example?
Then why pass by a real value and possibly cheat yourself before making a real investigation.
The new Saxon-Duplex is really astonishing some of the oldest automobile fans in the business. Already it is being referred to as one of the smartest designs of the year. There's character built into every line. Not "just another car" but one of the really distinctive cars.
Then it has a motor that's a whale for work. Smooth, fast, mighty economical, and all in all a perfect pleasure to drive.
Then there is the Romon chassis lubricating system. This is an exclusive feature. By just flipping a little lever, oil is instantly spread to 28 chassis bearings.
Then there is a frame twice as deep as those usually found on cars of this class.
Rear springs that smooth out any road!
Numerous other features! But come in and see for yourself.
And after you have seen the new Saxon-Duplex—then after you have driven it, you, too, will say, "Here is an out of the ordinary car at an unheard of price."

For the price is not $2000—nor $1800—nor $1600. It is only $1495.

SCIENTISTS TRY TO EXPLAIN WHY EUROPE SIZZLES

Views Differ, but Some Blame Sun Spots.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 22.—Sun spots are generally believed to be responsible for the sustained torrid wave which has been scorching Europe for the last month.

Several European scientists assert that gigantic bolides, weighing millions of tons, fell into the sun, and were incinerated, and that the heat of the burning bodies is felt on the earth.

Prof. Branley, a member of the French institute and prominent in the development of wireless telegraphy, believes the hot spell is due to the "new" spots which astronomers have reported recently on the sun's surface.

Absolves U. S. from Blame.

"When the European heat wave began many people attributed it to American origin," said the professor. "This obviously is absurd, for no heat wave is capable of crossing the Atlantic. Winds from the United States are refreshing, as they are cooled in traversing the ocean. The present crisis is caused by the special activity of sun spots, which exert great influence on the meteorological conditions of the globe.

"A fact which has been noticed often is that the years when sun spots are abundant are also the hottest years on the earth. Sun spots apparently are immense cavities in the solarian atmosphere, sometimes being 200,000 kilometers (125,000 miles) in diameter. They appear only to disappear, and never are permanent. Every eleven years they are more abundant than usual."

Flammarion Blames Old Sol.

Prof. Camille Flammarion, director of the observatory at Juvisy and the most eminent and most daring of French scientists, declared:

"The sun is responsible for the exaggerated heat. Although the earth is 91,000,000 miles from the sun, the magnetic influence of the latter is considerably stronger than was formerly believed.

"The spots are huge flames with diverse manifestations of radiance. The slightest perturbations occuring on the sun are felt on the earth immediately. The earth is bound to the sun not only by gravitation and light, but also by magnetism—an unknown and inexplicable force uniting all the different worlds."

Sun Spots Find Champion.

Prof. Luigi Palazzo, director of the Italian government's meteorological department, said: "The sun spots do not affect the heat of Europe. If so, the solar causes would affect Italy as well as France, whereas Italy's temperature has been, on the average, below normal this summer.

"The cause is probably due to a fine dust haze in the atmosphere. Owing to the dryness of the season, dust has arisen into the air, then a humidity wave has made it like an invisible enduring sky cap, which works like a heat intensifying reflector. The dust cap also prevents free ventilation and the revival of the earth's freshness during the nights."

Sir Frank Watson Dyson, in charge of the royal observatory at Greenwich and one of the world's foremost scientists, was mystified as to the cause of the heat wave.

Dyson Gives It Up.

"THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE knows as much about the heat wave as I do," he said. "You know it is here and so do I, but I cannot give any scientific explanation and doubt if any scientific man can give satisfactory reasons.

"There is nothing abnormal in the sun's condition which justifies the present world wide heat and drought."

Premature melting of the ocean's ice fields and the sun spots are believed by Prof. F. Archebold, Berlin's foremost astronomer, to share responsibility for the heat wave.

Old Time Printers Host at Graphic Arts Show

The Old Time Printers' Association of Chicago is acting as host to America's printing experts at the Graphic Arts exposition, which opens in the Coliseum tomorrow. The Chicago Club of Printing House Craftsmen, the organization staging the show, tendered the old-timers a booth and President William J. Hack promises to keep open house there during the exposition.

Clara Jane Shepard, publisher of the Inland Printer, the only woman ever admitted to membership in the Old Time Printers' association, is hostess at the veterans' rest room. Former President Samuel King Parker is in charge.

BACKING WORDS WITH DEEDS

Edward J. Tobin, county superintendent of schools, awarded forty-eight "achievement pins" to pupils yesterday for carrying into practice the lessons learned in their classrooms. Sewing, cooking, farming, and music were some of the means used by the students to express their ingenuity. Among the winners were Dorothy Wunnecke (upper left) and Johanna Kryger (upper right) and (below from left to right) Emoline James, Martha Gangler, and Gertrude Hockstra.

FAIRY GARDEN OF GIRL, 12, GROWS DOLLARS, GLORY

Sells Queens, Princes, Nets $168 and Pin.

The high cost of living was given another severe jolt yesterday by fairyland, assisted by 12 year old Mildred Wilke of Morton Grove, one of the forty-eight winners of achievement pins awarded to pupils of the Cook county schools by Supt. E. J. Tobin for proficiency in sewing, cooking, farming and music. Mildred's efforts won her $198.

She has a little patch of ground near her home in which she raises flowers, vegetables and a pet pig while attending school. She likes her music best, she says, but finds a pet pig is a valuable thing to have, as she sold hers at a profit of $30.

Her Fairies Bring Money.

"My flower garden is just like a wonderful romance," she said yesterday. "I call them my fairies and have given names to many of them. They look like little sprites when they play about in the wind.

"But the most wonderful thing is the money they bring in and the small amount of trouble they are to take care of if you love them. The seed for them cost little and after they had grown into beautiful fairy queens and princes I took them to market and sold them. In this way I earned $168.

"My vegetable garden produced enough to supply our family over winter, so what more could one want?"

The graduates were taken to the Brevoort hotel for luncheon by the county superintendent and later to see a play.

DROPS 15,000 FEET INTO 1,000 FOOT HOLE AND FLIES BACK OUT

San Francisco, Cal., July 23.—When his engine suddenly stopped 15,000 feet in the air above remote Crater Lake, Ore., Thursday, Raymond G. Fisher, forest service pilot, was forced to land on a tiny island in the lake, which is in the pit of an extinct volcano with walls 1,000 feet high surrounding it, forestry officials announced here today. The lake is credited with having greater depth than any body of water in America.

Of equal importance was Fisher's success in winging his way off the island and out of the crater. The plane was not damaged in the descent and Fisher upon examination found four of the spark plugs of the engine broken.

Using the wireless set with which the machine was equipped, he succeeded in getting in touch with another forest service plane on duty in the vicinity.

Arriving at the lake, the rescue pilot found it impossible for another plane to land on the island or apparently to get the plugs to Fisher. Other forest service planes came up and sets of spark plugs were sent to earth by means of parachutes. Hunting with a torch Thursday night Fisher found one of the parachutes and yesterday morning repaired his machine and "took off" from the island, reaching the forest service airplane base at Medford safely.

ELWOOD HAYNES SEEKS OWNER OF PURSE AND $4.80

The man had found a pocketbook containing $4.80 and a commutation ticket to La Grange. It evidently belonged to a woman who couldn't afford to lose it. The man wrote out a long ad for the lost and found department of THE TRIBUNE.

"That'll come to $5," the ad-taker told him, "more than the value of the purse and the money."

So the ad was cut to two lines, the charge being $1, and the advertiser paid it. He wished all letters sent to him at Kokomo, Ind.

"What name?"

"Haynes, Elwood Haynes, care of the Haynes Motor Car company."

Mr. Haynes is president of the automobile company, and credited with inventing the first automobile in the United States.

Farwell Asks Mayor, Who Gets Cabaret Money?

"Who gets the big money?"

Arthur Burrage Farwell, secretary of the Hyde Park Protective association, asks the question in open letters to Mayor Thompson and Chief of Police Fitzmorris, mailed yesterday. He charges "big money" is being paid by cabaret proprietors for permission to operate.

"You have about 5,000 policemen at your command whose duty it is to enforce the laws and ordinances. Why is the Eighteenth amendment not enforced by you?" Mr. Farwell asks of the mayor.

OBITUARY.

ACTOR OF CITY'S EARLIER DAYS DIES SUDDENLY

FRANK K. WALLACE.
[Walinger Photo.]

Frank K. Wallace, prominently identified with Chicago's early theatrical history, well known among politicians, and a civil war veteran, is dead from heart failure at his home. Mr. Wallace made his Chicago debut at the Old Winter Garden, on Monroe and Clark streets, previous to the Chicago fire, and later starred at the Adelphi. He was a member of the first stock company at McVicker's theater in 1879.

Mr. Wallace was a member of American council, K. C., and vice president of Chicago's Veteran association. Three sons, Nicholas of Chicago, Frank K. of Oakland, Cal., and George of Baltimore, Md., and two daughters, Mrs. Lillian Gillespie and Mrs. L. Cashman, both of Chicago, survive. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning from Our Lady of Sorrows church, Jackson boulevard and Albany avenue.

FUNERAL OF J. M. HUBBARD MAY BE HELD WEDNESDAY

The funeral of John M. Hubbard, Chicago's official Santa Claus, and assistant postmaster for thirty-one years, will probably be held Wednesday.

Mr. Hubbard's son, John M. Hubbard Jr., and Ray Du Plissus, son-in-law of Mrs. Fred A. Paddleford, a daughter, left yesterday morning for Saxton's River, Vt., to bring the remains to Chicago for burial. The funeral arrangements will be completed as soon as it is learned when the body will reach Chicago.

Postmaster P. H. Harty of Saxton's River, wired THE TRIBUNE yesterday to extend the sympathies of the people of his community to the family of John M. Hubbard.

FLEX-A-TILE HOUSE TOPS

Flex-a-Tile Housetops are the beauty spots of the community

Small homes become more attractive when roofed with Flex-a-Tile asphalt shingles or rolls. Mansions have added beauty when crowned with Flex-a-Tiles. All buildings, new or old, are given long-time protection and the increased value of good appearance when Flex-a-Tiled. The initial cost is moderate, and durability makes economy certain.

ONE SOURCE—
ONE PROCESS—
ONE QUALITY—

Flex-a-Tiles are for roofing new buildings, re-roofing old buildings, or for application over the old shingles.

Over half a century of felt and roofing manufacturing experience is back of Flex-a-Tile Housetops. Materials and process are so controlled that the quality is always right. Felt, asphalt, saturation, weight and thickness are so carefully tested that the quality cannot vary.

The well-known Richardson felt from our own mills is saturated and coated with Flex-a-Tile natural asphalt scientifically processed in our refineries, and then the slate chips from our own quarries are rolled into the hot asphalt. This really enamels the surface with a natural colored green slate—or red if you prefer.

CONSULT YOUR DEALER

about Flex-a-Tiles, whether you intend to build or re-roof. See how uniform and beautiful they are—how easily applied—how reasonable in price.

Visit our mills and we will show you how quality is put into Flex-a-Tile Housetops for your service and satisfaction.

GEORGES HOME: TERMS DEMPSEY MIGHTY BOXER

"Has Colossal Strength," Explains to Parisians.

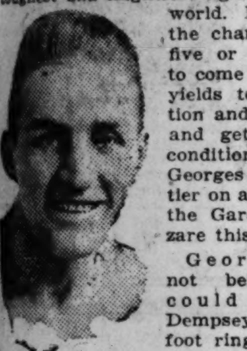
COSTLY TO DEMPSEY

NEW YORK, July 23.—Following the announcement of a few days ago that Jack Dempsey by affidavit swore he was a resident of New York, the state is taking steps to collect the $12,000 income tax from the champion. This follows the declaration that such steps were contemplated.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 23.—"Dempsey is the toughest and mightiest fighter in the world. He will be the champion for five or six years to come unless he yields to temptation and high life and gets out of condition," said Georges Carpentier on arriving at the Gare St. Lazare this noon.



GEORGES CARPENTIER

Georges does not believe he could defeat Dempsey in a 24 foot ring or with four ounce gloves. "He is too powerful," explained Georges. "When we clinched in the first round I realized the colossal strength of the champion. When I reached his jaw twice in the second round and Dempsey kept his feet I realized I could never beat him.

Given Wonderful Reception.

"I believe it will be a long time, ten years at least, before another such fight, drawing almost 100,000 spectators, could be arranged."

The crowd broke the police barrier and streamed on to the paltform to meet Georges' train. The boxer sighted his aged father and mother and leaned out of the window shaking their hands as the train came to a stop.

Harry Pilcer, Maurice, the dancer; Mlle. Mistinguette, Maurice Chevalier, and other theatrical and sporting stars who were in the station, carried the French champion on their shoulders until he was rescued by the police and passed through a secret doorway to a taxicab while the crowd waited around his motor car.

Will Train at Dieppe.

Carpentier is proceeding next week to Dieppe for the summer, where he will train for his bout with Tommy Gibbons next autumn.

KILBANE TO BOX FRUSH SEPT. 15 AT CLEVELAND

Cleveland, O., July 23.—[Special.]—Johnny Kilbane, Cleveland, featherweight champion of the world, and Danny Frush, Baltimore, will box fifteen rounds to a decision at Dunn field, Sept. 15, for the largest purse ever hung up for a featherweight battle. Kilbane is to receive $50,000 for his share of the receipts. Frush, challenger, is to receive only $2,500 as training expenses.

A Cleveland syndicate with Sam Deutsch as matchmaker is promoting the show. While the articles will not be signed until Monday, Kilbane has accepted the terms and Sammy Harris, manager of Frush, has declared the agreement suits him.

Johnny McGuire of Cleveland has been agreed upon as referee. Each boxer will deposit with Deutsch a certified check for $10,000 guaranteeing he will be down to weight and in condition to fight the night of Sept. 15.

ALL 'FOTOGS' AT BIG BOUT LIABLE TO ARREST BY U. S.

New York, July 23.—Every one of the thousands of spectators who snapped a picture of Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier in action and brought them across the New Jersey line into New York is liable to a fine of $1,000 and two years' in prison, United States District Attorney Hayward said here today. Newspapers and picture agencies that brought pictures across the line also are liable.

Hayward gave an opinion that the transportation of "still" pictures across state lines is just as much a violation of the federal laws as the transportation of motion picture film.

Hayward declined to state if he would take action against any of the newspapers, photographers, or individuals who took pictures and brought them back to New York or took them into other states.

Report Wills, Johnson Are Matched for Labor Day Go

New York, July 25.—Jack Johnson and Harry Wills will meet for the colored heavyweight championship on Labor day in Denver, it was reported here today. Announcement of the bout is not being made until the promoters are sure it cannot be held in the east.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

THE DOUBLE CROSS IN SPORT.

WE are accustomed to regard the double-crosser as a despicable person. He is. Yet there are times when he seems to mete out a poetic justice (as the phrase goes, though why it is called poetic we never knew), as in the world's series of 1919, where the ball players accused of crookedness are said to have crossed the gamblers who were crossing them on payments by winning the third game of the series, thereby causing said gamblers to drop their previous winnings on a "sure thing."

Fear of the double cross has done much to keep professional sport clean among a certain class to whom no other argument would appeal. There may be honor among thieves, but they notoriously are afraid of the "squawker" and the "crosser."

Frequently we hear of boxers agreeing to do a "brother act," and then one of the conspirators "sneaks one over." That's the chance a crook always takes. It is so on the racetrack. It is so in wrestling. It was so in the world's series, if the facts prove as stated.

We don't like crooks and we don't like double crossers, but we do think there would be more crookedness if it were not for fear of the double cross.

Pink and Yellow.

What do you think of Larry Sin Jin,
Who invited from Chi his friends to call in?
"Just look for the cottage painted yellow and pink,
And, ho, ye that thirsteth, you're sure of a drink."

O, a satirical rogue is your Larry Sin Jin,
To fool his good friends is the worst kind of sin.
Hungry and thirsty I tramped the old Pike,
Divil a house with his colors did strike.

As far as the cemetery, back to the ferry,
No yellow and pink, no sign of old Larry.
Tired and weary, I hiked to my inn,
Resolved to forget false Larry Sin Jin.

Stop! Look! Listen!

Friend Harvey: A local auto salesman after endeavoring for several days to teach a lady to drive hit upon the idea of showing her how to stop by telling her to push down with both feet, thus synchronizing the brake and clutch. Rounding a corner and seeing a large truck ahead, he said: "Push down with both feet." She replied, "I can't; they're asleep." Smashed fenders, etc. Clinton.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 23.—[Special.]—Eleven innings of terrific fighting were required for the Cubs to lick the fallen Phils today, and thus wind up the series with three victories out of the five games. Nine rounds would have been plenty if there hadn't been a pair of slips in the last of the ninth, with two out, that let in a couple of runs and tied the count. The Cubs copped, 6 to 2, by staging a rampant rally in the eleventh.

GROVER ALEXANDER.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

It was Grover Alexander and Lee Meadows who did the dueling, and for eight innings it was even up and each man for himself. In the first of the ninth Meadows broke down and the Cubs knocked in two lovely and well earned runs, that looked big as a mountain.

Aleck Slips a Little.

But as has been the case often this year, something happened. Aleck didn't break down, however, but he did slip a little in that last half. Possibly he was in a hurry to get it over with and hop the train for the west. Anyway, after retiring one man he permitted King to slam a double to the wall. That didn't matter, but it did matter when he lost control on the next man, Lebourveau, and walked him to first base.

However, no trouble should have resulted, for Koney died on a fly and only one more out was needed. Cy Williams was the intended victim, and he bounded one down to Grimes that ought to have made the out, but Cy is fast and Aleck was a bit slow in going to cover. Then Grimes made a toss that was low and Aleck had to stoop down while on the run, and he let the ball get away.

An Awful Throw.

King was home with his harmless run, Lebourveau was legging it toward third with his tying run, and all was confusion. Aleck scrambled after the ball, recovered it, and drew back as if to fling it to third, then switched and decided to shoot at second, for Cy Williams was on his way there.

Aleck fired it and fired it awful. The ball got away from Hollocher, and Lebourveau, who by this time had rounded third, began racing for the plate with his tying run. Holly recovered and made a frantic shot to the plate, but Lebourveau slid in safe and the score was tied.

It looked like the boys had "blowed" another ball game, but Aleck went right on with his sturdy pitching, and in the eleventh the Cubs got a cluster of four runs for him, when Terry, Barber, and Deal came through with regular hits, which, bunched with a couple of class D errors, produced four tallies.

DULUTH CREWS WIN BIG REGATTA

Duluth, Minn., July 23.—Duluth Boat club by winning nine firsts, one second, and one third in ten starts made a clean sweep of the Northwestern International Rowing regatta.

With perfect rowing weather favoring the oarsmen, fast time was made in all the events. The work boat four race, won by Duluth, featured a time of 7:02 for the mile and a quarter. The world's record of 6:40 is held by the Harlem Rowing association, New York city.

The only event Duluth did not enter was won by Winnipeg. H. S. Turnbull easily defeaetd A. Briggs, representing the Minnesota Boat club, St. Paul.

The feature was the senior eight between Duluth and Winnipeg. The Duluth crew was doped to be an easy winner, but had to row every inch of the way to win. The time was given as 6:24.

Here's a Wealthy Team; Winner on Diamond, Too

Alamota, Kas., July 23.—The Alamota baseball team is probably the most unique combination playing on any diamond. Eight of the nine men are prosperous property owners, wheat growers, and cattle raisers.

They play two games a week and receive $5 for each game. The "millionaire nine" has won more than half of its games this season.

SOX NOTES

PHILADELPHIA again today. The Gleasons conclude their home series with today's game and depart for the east tonight.

Fred Bratchi, the hard hitting outfielder of the Joplin club of the Western league, has been added to the White Sox roster.

Eddie Mulligan was absent from the lineup on account of the death of his wife's mother in St. Louis. He will rejoin the Sox in time to play in the series at Washington, beginning Tuesday.

The Mackmen pulled an odd double play in the sixth. Mostil was on first with one gone. Sheely hit sharply to J. Walker, who pegged to second forcing Mostil. Galloway fired the pill back and both Walker and Dykes tried to cover first. In spite of the collision Dykes caught the ball and tagged the bag before Sheely did.

CUB NOTES

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 23.—[Special.]—The Cubs departed soon after the game for Cincinnati, where they are scheduled to play tomorrow. On Tuesday they will be back at the north side.

"Irish" Meusel, hard hitting outfielder of the Phils, has been laid off by his boss for indifferent playing.

Aleck was shipped direct to Chicago, where he will have a couple of days' rest and be ready for some hot toil when Brooklyn invades the north side next week.

It was the tenth victory of the season for Aleck, and judging from his work in the last four or five games he'll pick up another ten easily before the year's up.

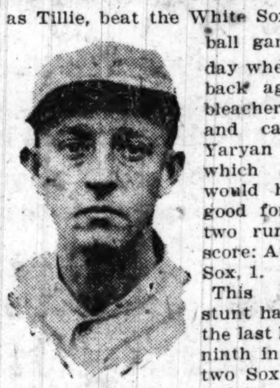
BY I. E. SANBORN.

Clarence Walker, generally known as Tillie, beat the White Sox out of a ball game yesterday when he went back against the bleacher screen and captured a Yaryan drive which otherwise would have been good for at least two runs. Final score: Athletics, 3; Sox, 1.



CLARENCE WALKER.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

This Walker stunt happened in the last half of the ninth inning with two Sox on bases and two men out. Yaryan was sent to bat for McClellan, who changed from an outfielder to an infielder overnight, and Yam caught one on the nose. It looked as if it were going to clear the screen for a home run, but Walker didn't think so and raced back, finally capturing the pill with only a few feet of room between him and a head on collision with the barrier.

Sox Big Chance to Win.

Preceding that feat Sheely had opened the Sox last half with a scratch hit. Schalk flied out, but Kerr tried to win his own game with a clean single. Johnson flied to C. Walker, then a wild pitch let the two runners to third and second, only to be stranded there.

Hasty and Kerr were the opposing slabmen and it was a case of a reversal of the old story of David and Goliath. The little fellow won the ancient battle, but the giant copped yesterday because he was better in the pinches and did not permit the Gleasons to group their hits on him.

Chicago was first to score. One down in the second, Mostil singled and went to third on Sheely's single to right. Schalk flied to Welch far enough to let Mostil register the lone home tally.

The A's made only one hit off Kerr in three innings, but in the fourth they ganged on him. Dykes led with a single. Welch sacrificed and C. Walker singled, scoring Dykes with the tying run. J. Walker's out advanced his namesake and Perkins drove a single to left on which C. Walker taxied to the plate.

Falk gave the Sox every chance in the world to tie the score in the fourth by leading off with a triple to center, but the next three pals failed to bring him in.

Athletics Score Two.

The "fortunate seventh" was all in Philadelphia's favor. Two were out in the first half when Dugan peeled off a triple to left which hit the screen and bounded back half way to second base. Galloway followed with a drive to almost the same spot, but Mostil headed it off on the rebound and held it to a two bagger. It scored the winning run.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

What suggestion would you make to big league baseball magnates for the comfort or understanding of the fans in their parks?

Where Asked.

Darborn and Monroe streets.

The Answers.

Frank Fargo, Lake Mills, Wis., student—If I had any suggesting to do I would first go to the men who have the concessions and ask them to keep the peanut venders out of the aisles during the most important innings of the games. Every time there is a close play the view is obstructed by one of these birds.

Maude Adams, 5516 West Chicago avenue, stenographer—Well, there are a lot of things one might suggest for more comfort in a ball park but they might not be practical. I used to go to the games regularly and I think there is about as much comfort as one can expect under the circumstances.

E. J. McKone, 215 West Monroe street, credit man—I personally could make no suggestions for more comfort in the ball parks of today. I find it very comfortable. As for the understanding of the games, I think most every full blooded American should be able to understand the national pastime without any assistance.

Mae Gray, 3214 Lexington street, stenographer—As far as comfort is concerned I suppose they did the best they could when they built the parks. They couldn't very well upholster the benches in a place like that and have them last any time. I think it would be great, though, if they had some means of explaining some of the close plays to the fans.

M. J. Mannelly, 4727 Ravenswood avenue, silk buyer—The only thing I can suggest for more comfort of the fans [and my suggestion won't do much good] would be for them to get a permit to serve high-balls to the hot and excited fans. They might put a cover on the bleachers in the parks in which Babe Ruth plays. That would make it more comfortable out there, I expect.

BOLDEN, FIRST IN TEN MILE SWIM, IS DISQUALIFIED

Riverton, N. J., July 23.—Eugene T. Bolden of the Illinois Athletic club, Chicago, twice winner of the National A. A. U. ten mile swimming championship in the Delaware river, finished first in that event again today, but was disqualified for not wearing a regulation suit, as called for by the rules. James W. Hall Jr., Central Y. M. C. A., Brooklyn, who finished second, was awarded the race.

When Bolden entered the water he wore the regulation suit, but when he emerged he wore only an elastic supporter. Bolden explained that the suit bothered him shortly after taking the water and with the consent of his trainer he discarded it.

Twenty-six contestants entered the water and nineteen finished. Bolden led practically all the way. His time for the ten miles was 2 hours 7 minutes 45 seconds. Hall's time was 2:12:25.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 23.—Failure of numerous out of town entrants to arrive proved a disappointment to officials of the thirty-first annual northwestern tennis tournament, which opened on the courts at Deep Haven today. Moose Jaw, Sask., July 22.—Elmer Leifer, center fielder and manager of the Moose Jaw club of the Western Canada league, has been purchased by the Chicago White Sox for $1,200, it was announced today. Leifer will remain with Mose Jaw for the remainder of the season.

GOURDIN LEAPS TO WORLD MARK IN BROAD JUMP

Americans Take Eight of Ten Events.

EDGE FOR AMERICANS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 23.—[Special.]—Today's meet between the combined Harvard-Yale and Cambridge-Oxford track teams was the fifth since the four universities started such international relations in 1899, and gives the Americans the edge.

In 1899 at the Queens club, London, the English won, 5 firsts to 4. In 1901 in New York, Harvard and Yale won, 6 to 3. The next two events, in 1904 and 1911, were held in London, the Yankees taking the former, 6 to 3, but losing the next, 5 to 4.

Cambridge, Mass., July 23.—[Special.]—Showing a pronounced superiority by winning everything but the quarter and one mile runs or eight of the ten events, the combined track team of Yale and Harvard this afternoon vanquished the Oxford-Cambridge combination in the international meet between these universities.

TOM CAMPBELL.

According to the rules governing the event only first places counted, although had there been a tie, second places would have decided the issue.

The world's broad jump record was submerged by "Ned" Gourdin, Harvard's Negro athlete, who shared honors as star of the meet with B. G. D. Rudd, the Oxford captain. The full-muscled dusky warrior hurled himself through the air for a distance of 25 feet 3 inches, breaking the record of 24 feet 11¾ inches.

Six records for these joint international games were bettered and one equaled.

Rudd of Oxford a Star.

Rudd of Oxford carried off the 440 yard dash in the splendid time of :49, clipping two-fifths of a second off the previous best time, made by Davidson of Cambridge in 1899.

The British captain was thwarted when almost in touch with victory in the 880 yard event by Tommy Campbell of Yale, who capped an erratic college season by his feat today. Campbell swept up to even with Rudd in the srtetch, then gathered his efforts for a final burst and sped ahead by about five feet at the tape. It was the best race of the day.

In the mile, in which H. B. Stallard of Cambridge was victor, the runners had gone half way and were on the back stretch of the third lap with Hilles of Yale in front. Tatham of Cambridge second, Captain D. F. O'Connell of Harvard third and Stallard fourth, when the latter, trying to pass O'Connell accidentally kicked his right leg and O'Connell was disabled.

Oxford Miler Collapses.

The Harvard captain said that a nerve in his leg had gone bad before, and that it probably was a recurrence. After winning, Stallard reported the accident, but officials said there was no consideration of a foul.

In the two mile run, the Englishmen lost their chances when Noel McInnis, the Oxford long distance star, collapsed, and M. K. Douglas, a Yale freshman, won impressively.

In the hammer throw after a great display J. F. Brown of Harvard set a mark of 159 feet 3¾ inches. It was his last throw, and beat M. C. Nokes of Oxford out of an apparent first place and a record. Summaries:

INDIANS RETAIN LEAD BY BEATING YANKEES, 3 TO 0

Cleveland, O., July 23.—Cleveland spilled New York's hopes of taking first place in the American league again today when it defeated the Yankees, 3 to 0, in a game featured by the brilliant pitching of Allan Sothoron. He held New York to three hits, one in the first inning, one in the fifth, and one in the eighth. Only five Yanks reached first and only one reached second.

Cleveland hit Hoyt freely, but had many runners caught by reckless base running, while New York made three double plays on fly balls. As a result the champions scored in only one inning, the third, when hits by O'Neill, Jamieson, Wambsganss, and Gardner and a sacrifice fly by Speaker produced three runs.

Much bitterness was displayed by the contending teams and two fist fights were threatened. Score:

SISLER IN FIRST FIGHT OF CAREER STRIKES UMPIRE

St. Louis, Mo., July 23.—St. Louis defeated Boston this afternoon, 5 to 4, taking the contest in the tenth for the eighth consecutive victory. Sisler was put out of the game in the fourth inning when he disputed a decision at first base.

Sisler, who always has been regarded as one of the most peaceful of players, had the first fistic encounter of his major league career. When ordered off the field by Umpire Hildebrand at the beginning of the fifth Sisler struck him on the jaw. Other players interfered and led Sisler away from the arbiter. Score:

FIGHT FOR THE TITLE AGAIN

PETE HERMAN, Contender.

[TRIBUNE Photos.]

JOE LYNCH, Bantam Champion.

NEW YORK, July 23.—[Special.]—Joe Lynch, bantamweight champion, and Pete Herman will battle on Monday night at Ebbets field for fifteen rounds, with the title involved. Lynch won the championship from Herman after fifteen bristling rounds at Madison Square garden last winter. Since that time Herman has been aching for another chance to regain his lost laurels.

The two boys will weigh in at 118 pounds at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and, according to a ruling of the athletic commission, will have to be in the ring at 10 p. m. to start the contest.

Lynch has been training faithfully for the contest, and is reported in excellent condition. The champion is not underrating his opponent in the least, but is confident that he will repeat his victory over the little southern Italian.

SIMMONS BEATS OUT SQUARES AT FINISH, 6 TO 4

The Simmons company team, by bringing up its heavy artillery in the eighth and ninth, pulled a game out of the fire and nosed out the Logan Squares, 6 to 4, yesterday at the latter's park. In the ninth, Conlon, twirling for Logan Square, weakened and two hits with a base on balls put the bedmakers another game to the good in their Chicago Mid-West league championship series. Score:

Low Price Does Not Mean Low Cost

True economy comes only through long life, low maintenance cost and satisfactory performance.

Car prices have been lowered—Auburn prices included. But low price does not always mean low cost.

There are cars, at lower prices, that are comparable in size to the Auburn. But have you ever heard of anyone incurring any considerable expense on an Auburn after purchase?

Compare Auburn construction. Compare Auburn performance. Then you will know the REAL economy of the Auburn—in last cost as well as first.

DODGERS PLAY MANOR NINE IN FEATURE TODAY

The Dodger Trainings, who last year won the local traveling championship, will be the opponents of the Marquette Manors at St. Rita field this afternoon. The visitors have as strong a team as last season and have been going at a rapid clip this year. They will have Rube Ehrhardt and Elmer Olson for a battery, while the home club will depend upon Gob Buckeye and Rudy Rehor to look after their battery interests.

Logans Play Simmons.

At Logan Square park the home club will play the second game of the Midwest series with the Simmons of Kenosha. The visitors have one of the best semi-pro teams in the west. They will have Kinney, formerly of the Athletics, on the firing line, with Dobbins back of the plate. Buck Freeman and Ernie Dennis will be in the points for the Squaws.

A doubleheader is scheduled at Pyott field. The Romeos will play the Whitman & Barnes team in the opener and the winner will play the Pyotts. Jimmy Ryan will use Sid Stewart as his hurler, and the Whitmans, Elmer Maager. Eddie Miller will pitch for Bill Niesen in the second game.

Barrys at Oak Park.

Eddie Stack and his Barrys are the attraction at Oak Park, where they will clash with the West Ends. Stack and Joe Delaney will do the heavy work for the visitors, while the home team will pin their faith in Long Tom Hughes and Eddie Sweeney.

Other good games on the schedule are the Roseland Eclipse at Normal Park and the Ragens at White Giants' park. The Eclipse have Larson and Jacobs as a battery to pit against Holford and Fleming.

BUDA, 6; AUSTIN 3.

$16,404,800 SET AS SUM IT COST TO SEE BIG BOUT

BY RAY PEARSON.

RAY C. PEARSON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

When Tex Rickard built his gigantic arena in Jersey City to entertain that world's record crowd on the afternoon of July 2, he undoubtedly did not realize how much money was to be pulled out of the pockets of the fistic fans. We grant that the New York promoter, who seems gifted with greater foresight than any man we ever have known, did anticipate just what happened—a crowd that paid something like $1,650,000 to watch World's Champion Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, the European champion, perform.

But that outlay of coin for tickets to watch the scrap was a relatively small amount when the necessary expenses of a trip to the Jersey City arena are considered.

Just think of the railroad fares, the sleeping berths, and the hotel bills. Then add on to that the price of "feed" in New York, and we might add that the business of wearing the feed bag in Gotham isn't anything small.

Figures Awe Inspiring.

Only yesterday I was fanning with a Chicago man who made the trip to Jersey City to see the "battle of the century," and, comparing notes, we hit figures which are awe inspiring. In the first place, we set the average price of tickets for the bout at $27.50.

Next let's take up railroad fares. It is a moral cinch that New York provided only a small minority of those attending. It is estimated that Chicago alone furnished close to 10,000 of that ringside attendance. Now, the railroad fare from Chi to Gotham, berth included, is something like $51.78. That's only one way; and doubled it meant a lot of coin.

$6 a Day Just to Eat.

Now, let's eat a bite and find out where we get off on this jaunt eastward. "Eating regular" means three meals a day, and sometimes a fistic fan will gobble four just to show that he is in good health. Three meals a day means at least $6, if a person punishes the food on a dining car or at a New York hotel.

A place to sleep in New York during the hectic days immediately before and after the day of the international battle probably cost an average of $7 per day. Then to add to that for a period of say four days—for it required that to make the trip in comfort—there were incidental expenses which must not be overlooked.

Some Bill to Pay.

Now, making out a little tab on the price it cost a Chicago fan to see Dempsey knock out Carpentier, these figures result:

Cost of ticket to fight (average)	$ 27.50
Cost of transportation, Chicago-New York and return	105.56
Cost of hotel, New York (four days)	28.00
Cost of food, New York (four days)	24.00
Incidentals	20.00
Total	$205.06

The next thing to do is to multiply that $205.06 by 80,000, the total paid attendance, and we arrive at these huge figures—$16,404,800. Nearly sixteen and one-half million dollars. That surely is some money. And just to think it was expended for the pleasure of seeing ten minutes and sixteen seconds of actual milling between Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier. Roll that over in your mind, Mr. Fan.

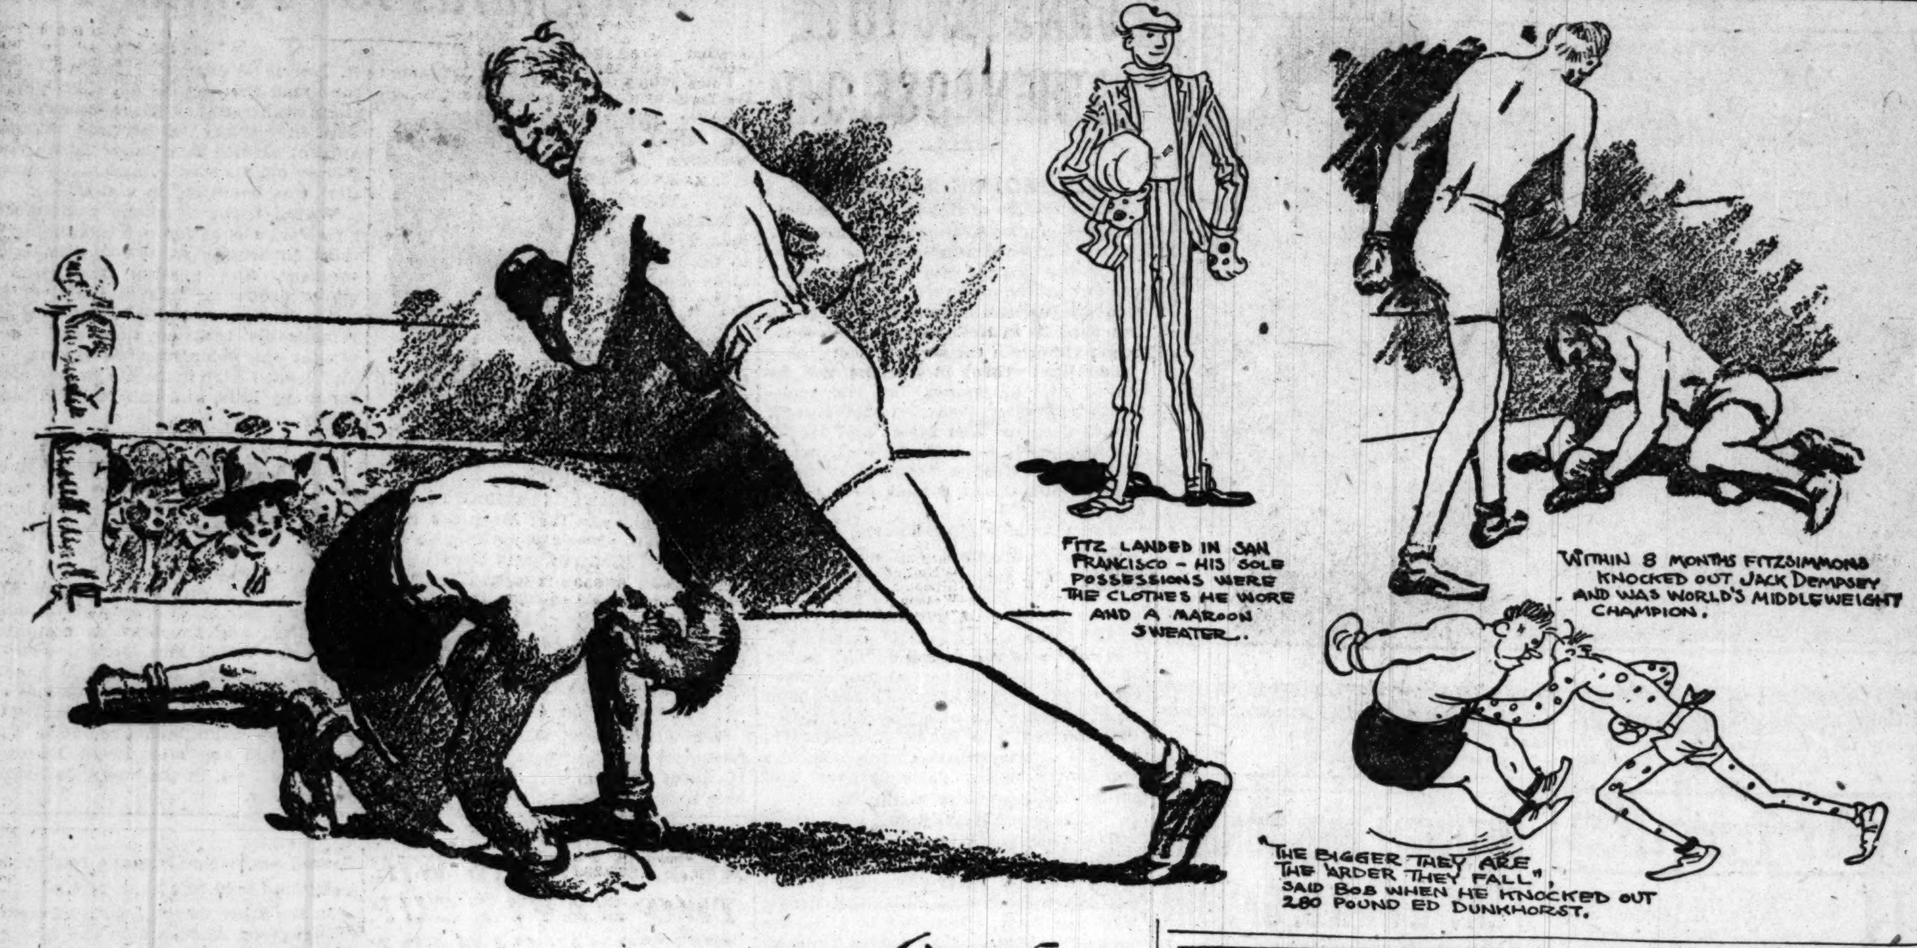
BOB FITZSIMMONS LEARNED BOXING FROM ANIMALS



FITZ LANDED IN SAN FRANCISCO – HIS SOLE POSSESSIONS WERE THE CLOTHES HE WORE AND A MAROON SWEATER.
WITHIN 8 MONTHS FITZSIMMONS KNOCKED OUT JACK DEMPSEY AND WAS WORLD'S MIDDLEWEIGHT CHAMPION.
"THE BIGGER THEY ARE THE 'ARDER THEY FALL", SAID BOB WHEN HE KNOCKED OUT 280 POUND ED DUNKHORST.

MIDDLEWEIGHT CHAMPION AND WEIGHING ONLY 158 POUNDS BOB FITZSIMMONS KNOCKED OUT JIM CORBETT FOR THE HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE WORLD.

R. Edgren
from sketch at ringside. Carson. MAR. 17, 1897.

BY ROBERT EDGREN

IN all the history of the modern ring there have been just three boxers who perfected a swaying, shifting style, and each was a great world's champion.

The first was Robert Fitzsimmons, middleweight, light heavyweight and heavyweight champion. The second was Stanley Ketchel, middleweight champion and on one occasion contender for the heavyweight crown. The third is Jack Dempsey.

I think that all the oldtimers will agree with me when I say Bob Fitzsimmons was the greatest fighter ever seen in the American ring, at any weight. He appeared in America in 1890, when Sullivan was champion and such great heavyweights as Jim Corbett, Peter Maher, Tom Sharkey, Joe Choynski, Peter Jackson, Frank Slavin, and Joe Goddard were either in their prime or coming into fame.

Has Fighting Knack.

At that time Bob was a tall, lanky fellow, with a round, smiling face and a manner mild enough to suit any clergyman, a heart full of benevolence, friendship and rugged virtue, and an amazing knack for fighting.

Born in Helston, Cornwall, May 26, 1863, he was of Irish parents and his father was a horseman and a fencing master. They went to New Zealand when Bob was a baby. As he grew up he played football and other games while in school, and by the time he became a horseshoer's apprentice he had a well developed love for sport.

Probably there wasn't much money in fighting in Australia in those days, and Fitzsimmons heard of the "fabulous purses" offered in America—purses that sometimes netted a winner several thousand dollars. He came over on a sailing ship as cook's helper. At the old California Athletic club he asked for a tryout.

In a day or two the freckled New Zealander attracted some attention and the gentlemen amateur sportsmen who ran the club gave him a trial against a heavyweight, Billy McCarthy, who was being groomed to challenge the great John L.

Pads Skinny Legs.

Often when Fitz told me about this first American fight he chucklingly described how he tried to conceal his light weight by wearing full length tights with padded calves, so the spectators wouldn't notice his skinny legs.

Fitz knocked McCarthy out in nine rounds, giving him a most workmanlike trimming. The fight he put up was the marvel of the sporting pages, and his reputation was made. Within a month he knocked out Arthur Upham, and in his next fight, Jan. 14, 1891, became world's middleweight champion by knocking out the great Nonpareil, Jack Dempsey, in thirteen rounds at New Orleans.

In that fight Fitzsimmons, with his height, great reach, and original fighting style, outclassed the Nonpareil, beat him down at will, and before knocking him out begged him to give in. Dempsey refused, and Fitzsimmons was forced to finish him. A true sportsman, he admired Dempsey and was a close friend afterward.

Dempsey Friend of Fitz.

What Dempsey thought of Fitz was shown by his dying advice to his wife. He told her to have a bet on Fitzsimmons every time Fitz fought.

Fitzsimmons' weight was only 152 pounds when he beat Dempsey, who, by the way, was several pounds lighter than that. As a middleweight with no opponents he began fighting the best heavies, knocking out Peter Maher, Joe Godfrey, Jim Hall, Dan Creedon, and many others, usually winning in one or two rounds. Fitz made quite a bit of money, for those days, but in the one fight that promised a fortune, with Jim Hall at New Orleans for a $40,000 purse, all he got was expense money and a worthless check.

The men knocked out by Fitzsimmons never questioned the decision, but Peter Maher offered one original "alibi." Peter was a great knockout artist himself, and Jim Corbett had "retired" and "given" the heavyweight title to Maher. Fitz fought Maher just across the Mexican line near Langtry, Tex., knocking Peter for a goal in the first round after Peter had nearly finished Fitz with a terrific hook on the chin.

"Not Human," Says Maher.

"He's isn't human," mourned Peter. "He's the divil himself in disguise."

Fitzsimmons, weighing 158 pounds, knocked out Heavyweight Champion Jim Corbett at Carson, Nev., March 17, 1897, in fourteen rounds. Corbett led easily for six rounds, but from the seventh to the knockout Fitzsimmons forced the fighting, and all of Corbett's dancing and smooth skill could not save him.

Fitz finished Corbett with his favorite punch, shifting his right foot in as Corbett jabbed and shooting a terrific left hook into Corbett's body. The doctor who attended Corbett after the fight told me Fitz had "hit him on the solar plexus," and the "solar plexus punch" became famous from that day on.

Jim Jeffries, a young giant, knocked Fitzsimmons out in eleven rounds. The old warrior made a gallant fight, hurling himself against Jeff's impenetrable defense and mixing it all the way. Working for a return match with Jeffries, Fitzsimmons did some wonderful fighting, knocking out Jeff Thorne, Jim Daly, Ed Dunkhorst, Gus Ruhlin, and Tom Sharkey—five men in twelve rounds of fighting.

Jeffries beat him next time in eight rounds. And after that Fitzsimmons won the light heavyweight title from George Gardner in twenty rounds—the only fight in his whole career that went over fourteen rounds.

Fitzsimmons fought more than 400 ring battles, losing to only six men—five of these when he was far past his prime. He fought in the ring for thirty-four years! His last battle was a six round bout with K. O. Sweeney in 1914, when he was 51 years of age.

Learns Boxing from Animals.

Outside the ring Fitz was a character. He often told me he learned boxing from animals, especially cats. One afternoon I found him in his back yard playing with a mule, which would whirl and kick at him, while Fitz sidestepped and made the flying hoofs miss by inches.

"It's great training for the eye," said Fitz to me, illustrating by making the mule miss. But as Fitz turned to laugh the mule unexpectedly kicked again and this time caught him in the stomach, doubled him like a jacknife, and broke two of his ribs. Fitz always did think that the greatest joke in the world.

We will have great fighters, but I doubt that the ring will ever see another Bob Fitzsimmons.

Johnny Wilson to Take on Greb at E. Chicago Aug. 16

BY FRANK SMITH.

Johnny Wilson vs. Harry Greb! How does that sound? Sounds to us, who, in this neck of the woods are only permitted to see a good scrap now and then, like music to the ears. Not canned music, mind you, but something along the classical order. And Harry Hyams, the East Chicago promoter, proposes to put on this program at the Twin City Athletic club arena on Aug. 16, weather permitting.

The champion and the Pittsburgh bearcat will box for the tidy sum of $30,000, and Wilson's forfeit is already in the city. The promoters are waiting to hear from Greb, but they are not worrying that his check will be missing long, for he has been clamoring for a go with the middleweight champion for lo, these many moons.

Greb a Tough Foe.

This scrap should be a regular scrap. Wilson, who for a long time after he won the title from Mike O'Dowd sidestepped some of the best boys in his division, due, he said, to illness, has proved he is the champion by licking O'Dowd and several other scrappers of no mean ability.

Greb is known to pugilistic fans as a tough customer in the ring. For a time it was thought he might get a chance at Georges Carpentier, but Tom Gibbons was selected by Tex Rickard to meet the Frenchman in October.

Chance to Show Wares Here.

This left Greb a wide open field, but with little game in sight until this East Chicago affair cropped up. Now he has a chance to show the bugs around here just what he can do, and Johnny Wilson will prove good practice for him.

Fans who missed the Midget Smith-Joe Burman clash the other night will have an opportunity to say they didn't miss this one. The promoter is giving them plenty of time to arrange to be on hand when the gong sounds.

DELAY SHOWING OF FIGHT FILMS

New York, July 23.—The advertised showing of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures at a theater tonight did not materialize. In announcing the postponement the theater management said Tex Rickard, F. C. Quimby, and others interested in the films would try Monday to convince the federal grand jury that there is no violation of interstate law in their exhibition outside New Jersey.

PITCHER TONEY NOT IMPLICATED

New York, July 23.[—Special.]—Joseph J. O'Brien, secretary of the Giants, today handed out the following telegram which President Heydler of the National league sent to Charles Stoneham, the Giant owner, in connection with the mention of Fred Toney's name in the White Sox world's series scandal:

On my personal inquiry, I am advised by both Assistant State's Attorneys Gorman and Terrell that Toney was in no way connected with the plotters. This in justice to the player. Particulars by mail."

WOODS and WATERS by LARRY ST. JOHN

MIDSUMMER BASS.

LONG periods of very hot, dry weather are likely to bring many surprises to the black bass fisherman. In the ordinary hot spell of midsummer the bass generally retire to the deeper parts of lake or stream and loaf there until the weather changes. They are able to do this because the same conditions drive the minnows into the same places, and getting enough feed for ordinary requirements takes but little energy.

When the hot weather is protracted, however, the minnows become impatient and restless, the schools break up and scatter, and the bass are finally driven by hunger to get out and hustle. This is where the surprise comes in for the angler. He may have been fishing for days without making any appreciable inroads in the bass supply, when, all of a sudden, the bass "go crazy and strike their fool heads off," to use the vernacular.

It has happened this season in lakes and streams that ordinarily are poor fishing waters. It is less likely to occur in waters of uniformly moderate depth, or where there is a diversity of feed.

"All we have to do, then," reasons the gentle reader, "is to go out and get a lot of minnows and horse these hungry bass into the boat." But there's a catch in it, m'lad; there's a catch in it. If the bass cannot find the minnows you probably will have the same trouble.

If the angler can get a bucket of minnows, or has preserved a supply, as recommended a number of times in this department, for just such an emergency, his problem is a simple one. All he has to do is to fish these minnows in the deep spots or in the vicinity of spring holes.

The caster, unless he is a confirmed surface fisherman, can get as good fishing as the angler who uses minnows. The plug caster will find that the deep traveling lures, especially those darting kinds that have pronounced "breaks," in green or scale finish, are killers if the bass are not down too deep. Single hooked pork rind lures, with plenty of lead ahead of them, will be more sporting.

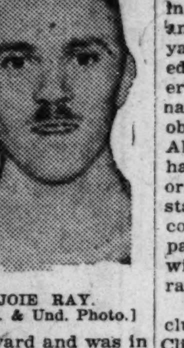
VETERAN RAY SHOWS HIS HEELS IN GRIND ON HOT BOULEVARDS

BY ALBON HOLDEN.



JOIE RAY. [Und. & Und. Photo.]

Running over hard boulevard pavements with his long loping stride, Joie Ray won the annual four mile race from Lincoln park to the Chicago Yacht club yesterday. The little veteran footed the distance, approximately four miles, in 20:14. This was four seconds slower than the winning time last year, made by Amesoli Patasoni, the midget Arizona Indian.

Ray set a fast pace from the start at Diversey boulevard and was in the lead as soon as the big field had worked out of a pack. He was never headed and had forty-eight seconds to spare over Chuck Mellor of the Logan Square A. C., who, like Ray, was a member of the United States Olympic team last summer at Antwerp.

These two leaders were the stars of the two clubs which fought for first team honors. With first, third, fifth, sixth and ninth in the finish order, the tri-color club won the team trophy, but only after a hard fight with the Logan Square A. C., which took second, fourth, eighth, eleventh, and thirteenth positions. The first twenty to finish:

YANKEE YACHTS FINISH ONE-TWO

Montreal, July 23.—The American sloop Bootlegger of St. Paul, Minn., today won the first of the series of three races for the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht club cup. It defeated the American sloop Freebooter and the defending Canadian yachts Beaver and Red Patch of Quebec in a 15 mile triangular contest on Lake St. Louis. Freebooter finished second, Beaver third, and Red Patch last.

The official times for the three laps of the course were: Bootlegger, 5:52:27; Freebooter, 5:58:33; Beaver, 5:59:23, and Red Patch, 6:01:00.

The elapsed times were: Bootlegger, 2:52:27; Freebooter, 2:58:33; Beaver, 2:59:23, and Red Patch, 3:01:00. All four boats were sloop rigged, 32 footers.

ELEVEN YACHTS START RACE TO MACKINAC ISLE

Sailing with a fair breeze that gave promise of seeing them well on their way before darkness set in, eleven boats, representing the Chicago and Jackson Park yacht clubs, started yesterday afternoon with Mackinac island as their objective point. Although only half of the boats originally entered started, the list of contenders compared favorably with previous races.

The starters included George O. Clinch's Arcadia, Joseph F. Kyle's Agawa, J. F. Corcoran's Gem, C. W. Kraft's Jackson Park II., Carlos Alling's Virginia, J. P. O'Rourke's Chaperon, J. G. Glaver's Mavourneen, Morgan L. Eastman's Dorello and Donald F. Prather's Intrepid. The last named sloop was the winner of the last Mackinac race, sailed in 1916, and is favorite in the present revival of the classic.

At 4 o'clock, when the first detachment started, the breeze was from the southwest and blew at a fair rate. Soon after starting the fleet divided, some of the skippers scenting a shore breeze and electing to stay well inside, while others pinned their hopes on favorable winds farther out in the lake.

When last sighted Intrepid had gone through the balance of the squadron and was leading, with the rest strung out astern.

The fleet was convoyed by the United States submarine chaser No. 419.

The first yacht is expected to reach Mackinac some time during tomorrow night or Tuesday forenoon. The record for the race is thirty-two hours and was made by Dr. William L. Baum's schooner yacht Amorita.

At 6 o'clock last night five cruising motor yachts started on a race of their own to Mackinac. The starters were Dr. C. H. Miller's Wyllys, T. J. E. Roberts' Maurence, A. L. Hageboeck's Pierre, J. E. Lee's Arapahoe, and F. P. Choate's Cassonia II.

MITCHELL AND DUNCAN PLAY EVANS, GAUDIN, AT SKOKIE CLUB TODAY

Local golf enthusiasts will get one of the finest treats of recent years today when Abe Mitchell and George Duncan, the touring British professionals, meet Chick Evans and Phil Gaudin at Skokie. Morning and afternoon rounds will be played at 9:30 and 1:30, with an admission charge for the public.

It will be the local debut for the two great English golfers, who competed last week in the national open golf championship at Washington and now are starting a tour of the country. Mitchell, regarded as Britain's greatest and generally conceded to have a slight edge on Ray and Vardon, who visited the United States last summer, has the reputation of being the longest driver on the continent. Duncan also is a first rank golfer, being British open champion in 1920.

The local pair is conceded an even chance against the sensational visitors. Evans, national and western amateur champion, is at the peak of his game this summer. He won the western amateur title for the sixth time at Westmoreland two weeks ago and on Friday finished fourth in the national open, topping all amateurs.

Gaudin is the club professional at Skokie, and is one of the Chicago district's leading stars. His familiarity with his own course should make him a formidable rival.

The British stars will give a second exhibition on Tuesday, meeting Chick Evans and Charles H. Mayo, the pro, on their home course at Edgewater.

The Skokie club can be reached by the Northwestern railroad or North Shore electric line to Glencoe, thence by bus to the club.

Champion Tilden Beaten by Richards for Tennis Title

Providence, R. I., July 23.—Vincent Richards, the 18 year old New Yorker, rose to the greatest height of his meteoric career today by defeating World's Champion William T. Tilden II. in the final of the state tennis singles championship, 6—2, 6—1, 2—6, and 6—0. It was Richards fifth tournament victory in succession and Tilden's first defeat in a year.

The big gallery present was so confident that Tilden would win that after the third set, when the score stood two to one in favor of Richards, bets were placed at three to one on Tilden. The New Yorker astounded the spectators, however, by outplaying the champion to such an extent in the fourth set that he never even had a chance to get started.

Youngster in Good Form.

While the loser was obviously off form and got the worst of the breaks, Richards showed the almost unbeatable brand of tennis that overwhelmed R. Norris Williams of Boston in the semi-final the day before. The youngster's well rounded game was coupled with a variety of strokes, a magnificent service that threw Tilden completely off his stroke, and a steadiness that was beautiful to watch.

Where Richards shone particularly, however, was at the net, advancing almost invariably at the phychological moment, and passing Tilden on a clever crossfire. His recovery of apparently unreturnable balls was so remarkable that he time and again caught the older man off guard. He also leaped high in the air in mid-court for many kills, and half-volleyed faultesssly.

Japanese Players Beaten.

Ichiya Kumagae and Zenza Shimidzu, the Japanese Davis cup team, were beaten in the doubles final by R. Norris Williams II. and Watson M. Washburn, after a hard fight, 6—1, 6—2, 4—6, and 8—6.

Miss Edith Sigourney helped Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup of Wilmington, Del., add the doubles trophy to the prize which Mrs. Jessup won by eliminating Mrs. Benjamin E. Cole of Boston, in the final of the women's singles Friday. Mrs. Jessup and Miss Sigourney triumphed over Miss Florence Ballin and Miss Leslie Bancroft, 6—1 and 6—4, in the women's doubles final today.

AUSTRALIANS WIN TWO DAVIS CUP TILTS IN CANADA

Toronto, July 23.—Australia defeated Canada in two singles tennis matches of their Davis cup play today. J. B. Hawkes won from Paul Bennett, 8—6, 6—4, 7—5, and J. D. Anderson outplayed F .H. La Frambois, 4—6, 7—5, 6—0, 6—2. Three more matches must be played to determine the team winner.

Hawkes displayed splendid control in winning his match, especially in the second set, when Bennett fought doggedly and held him even to 4 all.

In the other match La Frambois outmaneuvered Anderson in the first set, and although the Australian held him even to 4 all the Canadian player was not pressed. Close play marked the second set, and, with La Frambois leading, 5 to 4, the Australian ran out the set with three straight games.

La Frambois then appeared tired and despite a strong effort he was unable to fathom the splendid tennis served him by the Australian. The match was more spectacular than the first one, as the style of play was more varied and both players took many chances to gain points.

New Hinges

This is the new style 1922 fancy hinge. Over all size 12 inches long, 7 inches high, black Japan finish, with extra heavy japanned screws.

These are the new type diagonally braced doors; guaranteed not to sag. The diagonal brace is countersunk into upright brace, making it doubly strong. In addition thereto all joints are blind mortised, tenoned, glued and pinned.

New Door Jamb

This is the new extra heavy "L" shape reinforced door jamb. Strong and rigid—holds doors in place perfectly; stronger hinge surface — easier erection.

New Sill

This is the new beveled and dadoed door sill. Width has been increased to give much additional strength and ease to drive over; raises doors one inch from ground line, making it easier to open and close.

Door Holder

Here is a real boon to the garage owner — "PRESTO-UP" door holders. They hold the door open rigidly while you drive in or out. By simply pulling the chain they release and the door can be pulled shut.

Door Bolts

These are the top chain bolts, and the foot bolts. These bolts, with the cross bar, hold your main doors rigidly in place. One is worked by simply pulling the chain; the other one is controlled by stepping on it with your foot.

Erection Heretofore we have not accepted erection orders for Presto-Up Garages to be erected by us. Owing to the great demand for this service we are now in a position to undertake this work and guarantee the job.

Low prices Quantity production and big lumber purchases enable us to sell Presto-Up Garages at 50% to 75% less than it costs to build similar buildings in many localities. Investigate.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

CHICAGO TO HAVE WORLD'S LARGEST PRINTING PLANT

Cuneo-Henneberry Plans Huge Additions.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago is to have the largest printing plant in the world. Architect Alfred S. Alschuler has drawn plans and work will start at once on the first of three units which, together with the present large plant of the Cuneo-Henneberry company at 455 West 22d street, will give that concern an establishment much larger than that of the Curtis Publishing company, in Philadelphia, now said to be the biggest on this planet.

The site for the new plant is on the west side of Grove street just south of Austin, Nichols & Co.'s large building on 22d street, and is across the stret from the present plant of the Cuneo concern. It will extend back to the river.

"It was the prospect of the lakes to the gulf and the great lakes-ocean waterways that influenced us in building our new plant on the river," said President John F. Cuneo. "We use 250 tons of paper daily when we're running full, so it means a good deal to be able to have our material brought in by boat."

The first unit will contain about 165,000 square feet of floor area. As soon as it is finished work will start on the second unit. With the completion of the second the Cuneo-Henneberry plant will then be considerably larger than the Curtis establishment in Philadelphia.

And an interesting angle to this prospective situation is that printing experts predict that in time Chicago will supplant Philadelphia as the home of the Saturday Evening Post, Ladies' Home Journal, and the Country Gentleman. Already the Curtis Publishing company is saving three-quarters of a cent per copy, or $6,000 a week, which means over $300,000 annually, by having the Cuneo company print the entire western edition of the Saturday Evening Post. So if you're a S. E. P. fan you're reading a Chicago printed weekly, although it has the City of Brotherly Love date line.

Saves $150,000 Annually.

Another big eastern publisher saves $150,000 a year by having the western editions of three nationally known magazines which have editorial offices in Gotham printed here at the Cuneo plant.

"The western editions of eastern magazines are constantly growing larger," said Mr. Cuneo, "and at the same time the eastern editions are shrinking. That means only one thing—they all eventually will be printed in Chicago, and later on their editorial and publishing offices will have to follow. The western edition territory is bounded on the east by a straight line between Buffalo and Pittsburgh and on the west by the Rockies.

Business Grows at High Speed.

"Our business has grown from $450,000 in 1918 to $3,600,000 in 1920, and it will be around $4,500,000 this year. For instance, we are printing 2,000,000 catalogues annually for the Seattle and Philadephia branches of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and about 10,000,000 booklets for these two, because there are no concerns in those cities which can handle it."

A long list of eastern mail order houses and publishers do their printing with the Cuneo concern, and as figures of profit saved by using Chicago as headquarters are convincing arguments, more undoubtedly will turn westward.

Will Open Coffee Shop in La Salle Theater Building

Apparently we can't get enough loop coffee shops. Another is to be opened at 112 West Madison street, in the La Salle theater building, by Hawley & Dwyer, who have leased the 20x80 store from S. W. Strauss & Co. for ten years at a reported term rental of $140,000. The shop will be completely remodeled. E. C. Brownlee, broker in the deal, reports other recent leases. To Meyer J. Levine the store at 341 South Wabash avenue for five years at a term rental of $48,000; to Farrell Piano company, Rosenbaum Fur company, Chicago Theatrical Shoe company spaces on the upper floor of the same building for five years at a term rental of $25,000; to Hendricks & Johnson Battery company the corner store in the building at the northwest corner of Crawford avenue and Washington boulevard for five years at a term rental of $25,000.

Meadville Theological School Buys Residence

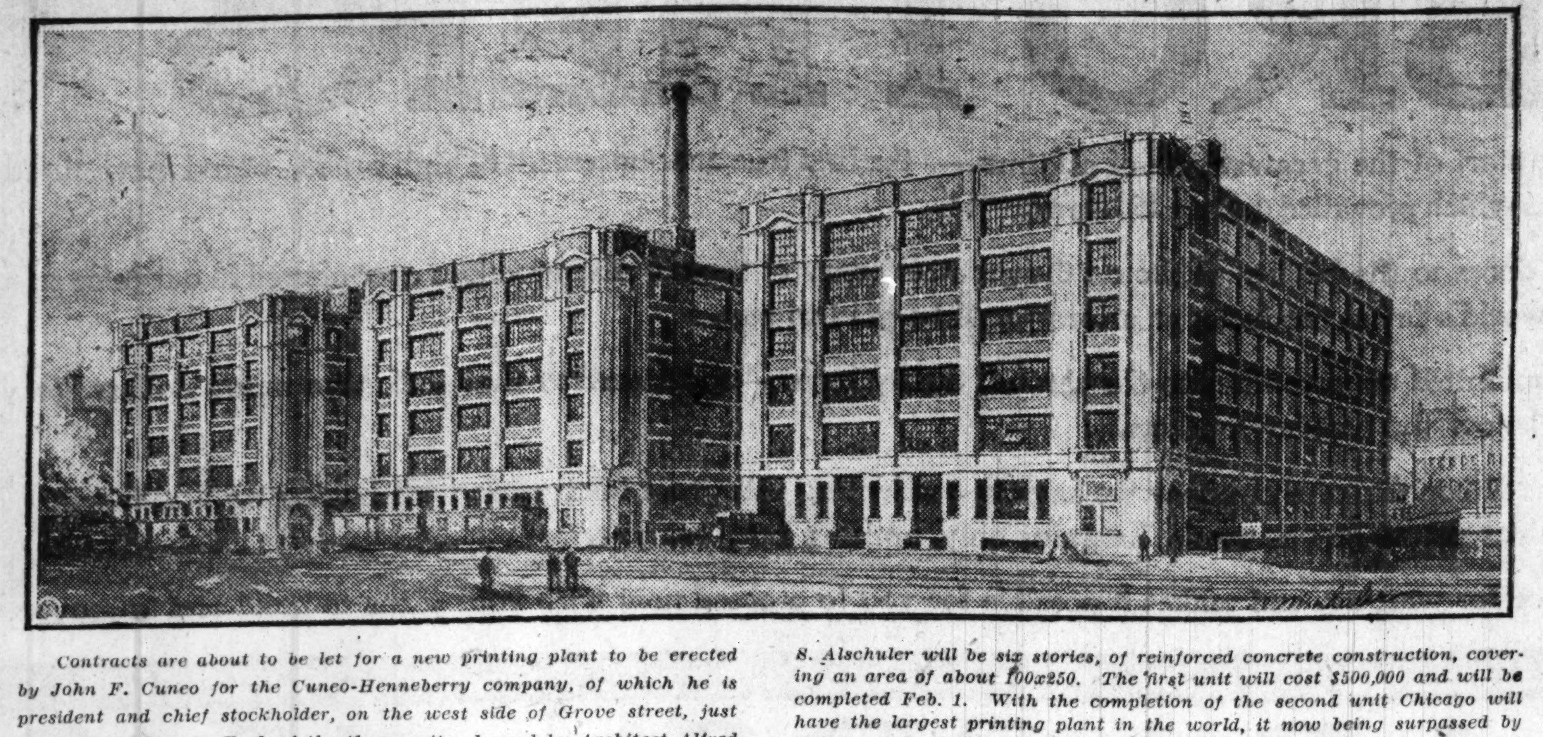
One of the finest homes in the University of Chicago residence colony, the 60x175 thirteen room house at the northeast corner of Woodlawn avenue and East 57th street, has been purchased by the Meadville Theological seminary of Meadville, Pa., for an indicated $50,000. A resident professor of the school will be in charge of Meadville students, who will use this as a dormitory while attending the University of Chicago. William Moulton, attorney, took title to the property from Mrs. Satie A. Rankin. J. Grafton Parker & Co. handled the deal.

National Guard Offices to Be Moved to North Side

Gen. Frank Dickson has leased space in the Pelouze office building, on Ohio street, east of Michigan, for the Chicago office headquarters of the Illinois national guard. The present guard headquarters are in the Edison building. The move to the north side will be made Aug. 1. The Bowes Realty company, agents of the property, handled the deal.

$500,000 6 PER CENT LOAN.

S. Birkenstein & Sons, Inc., have given a trust deed to the Foreman Brothers Banking company for $500,000, five years at 6 per cent, secured by their new plant at the northwest corner of Kingsbury street and North avenue.



Contracts are about to be let for a new printing plant to be erected by John F. Cuneo for the Cuneo-Henneberry company, of which he is president and chief stockholder, on the west side of Grove street, just south of 22d street. Each of the three units planned by Architect Alfred S. Alschuler will be six stories, of reinforced concrete construction, covering an area of about 100x250. The first unit will cost $500,000 and will be completed Feb. 1. With the completion of the second unit Chicago will have the largest printing plant in the world, it now being surpassed by the Curtis Publishing company's huge Philadelphia establishment.

BUNGALOW TWINS NEWEST ARRIVAL IN HOUSE FAMILY

Father Dearborn, who we all know has been considerably worried over his housing family the last year or so, wiped his wrinkled brow with a blue bandana handkerchief, with the words "Boost Chicago" in red letters in one corner, and shakily asked, "What is it, doc?"

"Twins," replied Architect M. L. Cable, who has been trying to help Dad Dearborn with his family troubles.

"Twins! But we've already got two sets of 'em now," gasped Father Dearborn. "There's the two flat building and the duplex house. Whaddaya mean, twins?"

"Ah, but these are bungalow twins," brand new addition to your housing family, so far as I know."

Architect Cable of 417 North Western avenue some time ago figured that one wall could be saved by making two bungalows into one structure. Other savings he estimated could be made in plumbing, roofing, etc.

His first twin bungalow has just been completed in Oak Park, on a 75x180 lot at the southeast corner of North East avenue and Division street. It is of fireproof construction, with hollow tile walls and has open fireplaces, shower baths, two hot water heaters, and is rather expensively finished.

Although its selling price is $25,000, Mr. Gable says there has been an appreciable saving by making it one building rather than erecting two separate structures. It will be sold to one person, who will rent the second bungalow and thus have a source of revenue.

Each bungalow will have five rooms: living room, dining room, two bedrooms, kitchen, and bath. There is a double garage. There is a door between the two basements in case one person takes care of both heating plants. The stucco on tile is trimmed with red brick. The roof is of red tile. Mr. Cable is owner as well as creator of the bungalow twins.

WILSON-KENMORE 198 YEAR LEASE SOLD, $125,000

J. G. Upton, real estate dealer, has bought the 198 year leasehold on the southwest corner of Wilson and Kenmore avenues, 50x125, from the Metropolitan Five to Fifty Cent Stores, Inc., for a reported $125,000. The lease, dated Feb. 1, 1915, is from Chancelor L. Jenks of Evanston to R. B. Taber of Wheaton, who assigned it to the Metropolitan stores in August, 1920.

The lease calls for a rental of $6,000 annually for the first five years and $6,500 yearly for the balance of the term. The property is improved with a two story brick building containing the 496 seat Kenmore movie theater, two stores, and offices. W. L. Lincoln of H. O. Stone & Co. represented both parties.

John B. Levezzorio has bought from T. D. Randall & Co. the leasehold estate created by a ninety-nine year lease, dated April 20, 1912, from the late Hetty H. R. Green, America's richest woman, to Harry E. Peacock, on the property at the northwest corner of West Randolph and North Ann streets. The property fronts 188 feet on Randolph and 182 feet on Ann. The ground rent is five years at $2,000 annually; five years at $2,250; five at $2,500; five at $2,750, and seventy-nine years at $3,000. The lease was later assigned to T. D. Randall & Co. and Richard J. Collins is the present owner of the fee.

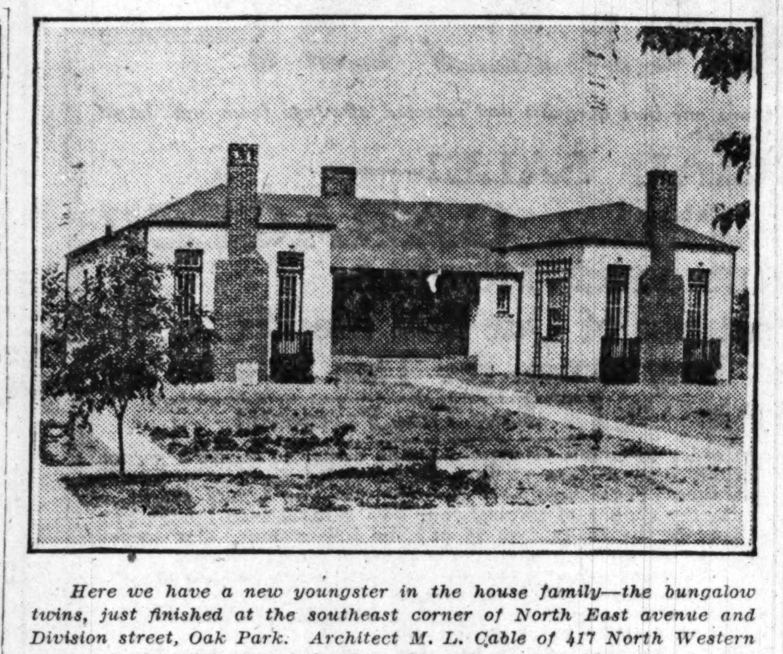
The improvements consist of a one story building on Randolph and a three story structure on Ann. Mr. Lavezzorio has large holdings on West Randolph street and bought this corner lease for investment. He intends to improve later. Clifton R. Bechtel represented the sellers and Chandler, Hildreth & Co. the buyer.

Grennan Cake Corporation Plans $300,000 Bakery

With the filing for record of a sale which took place last year of the Wilson Pound Cake company's place at 2315-17 Wilcox avenue to the Grennan Cake corporation for $82,000 subject to $18,000, comes the announcement that the Grennan concern has recently purchased 125x125 at 118-26 South Oakley boulevard, improved with old residences, and plans eventually to improve with a $300,000 four story bakery. No architect has yet been selected and no date set for building.

INVESTORS' SECTION OF ECONOMIST OUT.

The investors' Section of The Economist, an invaluable publication for investors and real estate owners, was published yesterday with the regular weekly edition of the Economist. It is now on sale separately.



Here we have a new youngster in the house family—the bungalow twins, just finished at the southeast corner of North East avenue and Division street, Oak Park. Architect M. L. Cable of 417 North Western avenue, is the originator of the idea. There is considerable saving in cost by having one common fire wall between the two dwellings; also there is a saving in roofing, plumbing, etc. Each family will have a separate hot water heating plant. The lot is 75x180.

Kickless Convention Pop Puts St. Louis Realtors in a Stew

"The convention was the biggest and finest thing of its kind the National Association of Real Estate Boards has yet had. Chicago was a splendid host. The Chicago Real Estate board deserves all the praise one can give them. Chicago's got the world beat as a convention city," commented a Philadelphia realtor on the last day of the convention.

Several thousand bottles of absolutely kickless soda pop have shattered the prestige of Chicago as a convention city so far as St. Louis is concerned. But a high city official of the Missouri metropolis also had a hand in the shattering. He came to Chicago ostensibly to attend the realty convention. He engaged an expensive suite at a loop hotel, made arrangements for liquid refreshment, and then disappeared from public view for four days.

And here's where the pop comes. The balance of the St. Louis delegation were equally thirsty, but instead of foaming steins of real beer they were offered pop. According to a column and a half story on the first page of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat on Wednesday, pop seemed the strongest drink the St. Louisans could find. Not being used to such weak liquids they bitterly and loudly voiced their disapproval on their return to St. Louis.

Another feature which annoyed the Missourians was the failure of Chicago to have reception booths at all the stations. In fact most everything about the convention peeved them. The trip to Great Lakes, the moonlight excursion, the Chicago taxi drivers, the weather and various other local idiosyncrasies were held up to scorn.

The Portland Telegram of Portland, Ore., also burst forth with a story on its first page a few days ago criticising Chicago as a convention city. Part of it reads: "A wire received this morning from a member of the Portland delegation said: 'About half of our delegation are slightly sick, probably due to a change in water, food and the sweltering heat. About twenty of us have had slight attacks of ptomaine poisoning. Everybody is willing to leave for home right now. It is God's country.'"

Plan 2 More "Donut" Shops for the Downtown District

If our great-grandmothers could come back and take a trip through the loop, probably the thing that would shock them the most would be the "donut" shops. For our good old Yankee doughnuts, made world famous by the Salvation Army at the front, have changed both in name and nature. The chocolate coated, the cocoanut and sugar frosted, and the maple covered fried cakes are the headliners in the loop shops.

Stephen L. Savich has just leased two downtown stores for the exclusive sale of "donuts." He rented one at 129 West Madison street from Chester O. Andrews, represented by R. J. Dvorak, at a term rental of $12,600, and the other at 29 North Clark street, from Harry J. Moir, represented by J. Soule Waterfield, at an annual rental of $4,200. E. J. Perlberg was broker in both deals.

Will Remodel Sheridan Road Flats Into Hotel

The six flat building at the southeast corner of Sheridan road and Crescent place has been leased by Sidney L. Stein from J. S. Heel for five years at a reported term rental of $45,000. Mr. Stein is now remodeling the property at a cost of $25,000 and will operate it as the Crescent Arms. Sidney L. Stein & Co. were brokers.

Some of the Week's Flat Sales

An indicated $155,000, subject to $57,000, was paid by Joseph A. McInerney to Adolph Santer for the thirty-six flat building, lot 133x171, at the southeast corner of Greenelaf and Greenview avenues.

F. A. Fundle of Harvey has sold to Samuel Graves the thirty flat building at 6413-25 Vernon avenue, lot 75x125, for a reported $125,000, subject to $68,000. W. P. Heyn represented both parties.

Mrs. Bertha B. Martin and her son, Arthur, have purchased from David H. Burkland of the Chicago Motor Truck Inc. the fifteen oats, known as the Beverley apartments, at North Hermitage avenue, Haskins street and Jonquil terrace, for a reported $84,050, subject to $45,750, Mr. Burkland receiving $27,000 cash and taking back a purchase money mortgage for $11,300.

BUILD AT COST OFFER BRINGS RUSH TO GET IN LUCKY HUNDRED

The offer of Anderson & Cowie, contractors, to build 100 homes at cost for bona fide homeseekers, given on this page last Sunday, already is bringing better results than expected in starting building activity. Several other contractors with time on their hands are considering seriously trying the plan themselves. Meanwhile, work is expected to start on several of the lucky hundred tomorrow morning.

Last Monday morning the offices of Anderson & Cowie were jammed with people wanting to get in the list of first 100. More than 800 applicants were received during the day. Frank Anderson, originator of the build-at-cost idea, was kept busy answering questions till late at night.

Especial care had to be taken to keep speculative builders from getting in the list of 100. One man frankly admitted he wanted ten houses built so he could sell at a profit of around $2,000 each. Another speculator was discovered who said he planned to sell at a big profit as soon as the place was built. He had no intention of living in it.

Up to last night there had been more than 1,600 persons at the Anderson & Cowie offices seeking information about the project. In addition, more than 1,000 phone calls and over 200 letters were received. THE TRIBUNE telephone wires also were kept busy with inquiries from prospective home builders.

"My Old Kentucky Home" Now Kentucky's Old Home

Louisville, Ky., July 23.—Federal Hill, the old southern mansion near Bardstown, where Stephen C. Foster wrote the song "My Old Kentucky Home," is now to all intents and purposes the property of Kentucky. The state commission, which recently appealed "to Kentuckians at home and abroad" for funds to purchase the property, today reported contributions of $60,800, which covers the purchase price of $50,000, but, according to the commission, does not provide sufficient funds for its restoration.

The margin over $50,000, the report says, will be used to care for it until the Kentucky legislature meets and determines upon methods of preservation.

Chicago Explorer Pays $450,000 for Dixie Farm

John Borden, millionaire explorer of Chicago, has paid an indicated $450,000 for Fernwood farms, at Fernwood, Miss., comprising 6,500 acres. James L. Beckwith sold it for Plotke & Grosby. In connection with this sale Mr. Borden previously had purchased the entire herd of registered cattle and hogs on the farm, reputed to be among the finest of their kind in the country. Mr. Beckwith also was broker in that deal. With the farm just bought Mr. Borden has over 13,000 acres in Mississippi alone. He is making the raising of fancy cattle a hobby.

Joseph O. Kaplan has issued a booklet called "A Brief Study of Business Property," the purpose of which, he says in a foreword, is to "portray in a measure how the age of specialization directly concerns the realty world." It is illustrated.

WORK STARTS ON 276 APARTMENT HOUSE PROJECT

Twelve Buildings to Cost $1,500,000.

One of Chicago's largest flat projects, involving twelve buildings with a total of 276 apartments—and not one of them less than four rooms—at a cost of around $1,500,000 for the improvements and $360,000 for the land, is just getting under way on the north side.

Plotke & Grosby have purchased from Baird & Warner two blocks of frontage on the east side of Pine Grove avenue, between Addison and Cornelia, and steam shovels are now at work. The property fronts 286 feet on Pine Grove between Addison and Brompton and 286 feet between Brompton and Cornelia. It fronts 300 feet on Addison, Brompton, and Cornelia.

There will be four corner apartment buildings of fifteen flats each and on the inside lots there will be eight big court buildings with twenty-seven apartments each. The flats will have four, five, six, and seven rooms each. Axel V. Teisen is architect for all. Some will be ready by November and all will be finished by Jan. 1. Huszagh, Musson & Co. and Lackner & Butz are underwriting the bond issues.

SEES CONSUMER AS GOAT UNDER NEW TARIFF BILL

Chicagoans Fight Act; "Bars Competition."

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Arguments that poor old Ultimate Consumer, the Job of modern days, would again be cast for the rôle of goat if the Fordney tariff bill is passed in its present form will be advanced by Chicago mercantile, banking, and manufacturing houses, importers, wholesalers, and retailers before the senate committee at Washington, which starts its hearing tomorrow.

The "American valuation" section is the feature on which the fight will be concentrated. Chicago experts in foreign trade declare it would turn all American tariff traditions topsy-turvey, paralyze importations, stifle competition from abroad, and leave wage earners and final customers carrying the load of higher prices.

U. S. Producer Fixes Duties.

Here are the chief arguments which will be presented before the senate committee, which now takes up the bill in the form it passed the house on Thursday:

1—Under American valuation, the American producer would determine the amount of duties to be imposed on imported goods. By shooting prices up on his own goods, the American manufacturer would atomatically increase tariff charges.

2—The cumulative tariff wall thus created would freeze out foreign competition—even on lines of goods not manufactured here—and consumers would be the victim of higher prices.

3—It would result in the highest tariff since the civil war.

Fear Higher Taxes.

4—The high walls, by keeping down imports, would mean a reduction of revenue from the tariff and this in turn would mean higher taxes.

5—As prices in local markets have wide variations it would be physically impossible to establish a uniform value on which to figure duties.

6—It would mean a multiplicity of commissions to determine American values, thus swelling bureaus and offices in the face of the administration's fight for retrenchments.

7—As importers could not know the cost of goods in advance goods could not be sold in advance of delivery.

"Protects Prices and Profits."

8—The provisions requiring entry at the custom house at the wholesale selling price in the principal markets of the United States require a physical impossibility on account of competitive price variations, and the hazard of penalties for guessing wrong would either put many importers out of business or lead them to carry the risk in the shape of higher prices, again stinging the consumer.

9—The old idea of a protective tariff was to protect the American workman and his scale of living by equalizing the cost of producing goods here and abroad. It protected on the basis of wages and cost. The "American valuation" idea, on the other hand, protects prices and profits.

How "American Valuation" Works.

An explanation of "American valuation" is of interest. The old American practice has been to fix duties upon the valuation of goods in the country of origin. This has been found easy of accomplishment.

The Fordney bill proposes to figure the customs upon the value of the imported goods as fixed by "the price on the date of exportation of the imported merchandise at which comparable and competitive products of the United States were ordinarily sold or freely offered for sale in the usual wholesale quantities."

This scheme, which has often been proposed, was tried once in the early '40s, but was soon abandoned. In opposing the idea importers charge that manufacturers could destroy their foreign competition by the simple expedient of shoving up their own prices.

Hits Foreign Exchange Argument.

The foreign exchange situation has been cited as one reason for the suggested change in method. In challenging this theory one of the largest importing houses in Chicago said yesterday:

"As the currencies of Europe declined the prices of commodities there advanced correspondingly, measured in the terms of those currencies. We find, therefore, that the cost of such commodities when reduced to United States currency at the current rate of exchange bears approximately the same relationship to the American commodities as existed when exchanges were normal. Comparison of values so ascertained in European commodities, compared with similar commodities at pre-war prices, reduced to normal rates of exchange, will show approximately the same advance in cost due to higher labor, etc., as is reflected in similar comparisons in American goods.

"We believe the plan of assessing duties upon the American value will be found unworkable and the policy dangerous in the extreme."

Farm Machines Valued at $537,000,000 Made in 1920

Washington, D. C., July 23.—[Special.]—Two hundred and three thousand gas tractors, valued at $193,000,000, more than 1,000,000 plows, worth over $40,000,000, 225,000 farm wagons, priced at $25,000,000, and 412,000 haying machines, with a value of nearly $25,000,000, were manufactured in the United States during 1920, according to reports from 583 manufacturers summarized by the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture. The total value of implements manufactured was $537,000,000.

Fire on 75 Foot Yacht Causes $4,000 Damage

Four thousand dollars' worth of damage was done to the seventy-five foot yacht Coyote, owned by Alexander Mauricau of 328 South Sangamon street, by a fire in the engine room yesterday. Spontaneous combustion is thought to have started the flames. After trying vainly to extinguish them two workmen turned in an alarm and engine company No. 1 hurried to the mooring at the river and Van Buren street.

HOUSE BODY TO HEAR COMPLAINTS ON TAX LEVYING

No Hope for Lower Income Rate.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 23.—[Special.]—With the sales tax definitely sidetracked, the hearings of the house ways and means committee on revenue legislation next week will be devoted chiefly to consideration of complaints against miscellaneous features of the present law.

The witnesses will include representatives of different industries affected by present taxes.

Among those who will appear before the committee will be Representative Mills, New York, who recently introduced a bill providing for a "spendings tax" as a substitute for present surtaxes on individual incomes. Another bill which will be urged before the committee is the measure introduced by Representative Keller, Minnesota, which proposes a land tax as a substitute for most of the present surtaxes.

Will Follow Mellon's Lead.

Members of the committee, however, appear to have made up their minds definitely to follow the recommendations of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and little consideration will be given to schemes which are advanced by others.

The hearings will begin Tuesday and end Friday. Following the conclusion of the hearings the members will confer with treasury officials on taxes for the ensuing year. It is hoped to complete the bill within two or three weeks.

None of the congress leaders are holding out hopes now of a reduction in taxes. The assurance is given, however, that there will be a readjustment which will lighten the burdens of business men and corporations. By the repeal of the excess tax and the substitution of an increased flat corporation tax it is expected that the difficulties in making tax returns will be substantially lightened.

Nothing for Small Payer.

There is no prospect that the small tax payer will be able to benefit by any reduction in his taxes. In view of the adverse action with respect to the sales tax there is no possibility of a reduction in the present normal tax on incomes.

It is planned to amend the administrative features of the law in such a way as to simplify the procedure. Recommendations of the treasury department along this line will be followed.

Among those who have asked an opportunity to be heard are E. C. Brockmeyer of the National Association of Retail Druggists; H. Archibald Harris of Chicago, who will urge exemption from taxation of donations by corporations to charitable and similar institutions, and W. V. Hill of the joint commission of National Public Utilities associations.

'GREAT MOTHER' CARES FOR SONS WHO WON WAR

More than $8,500,000 was expended by the American Red Cross for the relief of disabled ex-service men and their families during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, according to the annual report of the organization, issued yesterday.

According to the report at the end of April there were 3,402 active Red Cross chapters in the nation, with between 17,000 and 18,000 branches.

There were 997,140 visits paid to the 11,690 patients in army and navy hospitals, 1,550,580 cases of service by chapters to world war veterans and their families, 32,495 loans made to men—85 per cent of which were paid back—and 148,032 claims of various kinds handled.

During the year the Red Cross had 280 workers assigned at regular army hospitals and posts, 448 workers in public health service and similar establishments and 4,794 nurses assigned to various duties.

There are now 37,787 nurses registered. Last year 499,800 patients were nursed. About 260 Red Cross chapters have established civilian health centers, where 6,284 clinics were held last year, with 90,253 persons attending.

A total of22,000 children were enrolled in nutrition classes and there were 5,100 first aid classes.

One million six hundred thousand dollars had been spent in disaster relief this year up until June 4—a total since 1881 of $14,052,734. There were 1,317,528 surgical dressings made for use in Europe, 56,486 layettes and 551,680 garments shipped there.

DIES WHILE PAYING GAS BILL.

While standing in line to pay her gas bill at Rothschild & Co.'s department store, Mrs. Kate Finucane, 65 years old, 327 Stanley terrace, dropped dead from heart disease, yesterday.

ELMS FAVORED FOR WISCONSIN MEMORY ROADS

Stately Trees Fitting Hero Monument.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

The Wisconsin elm, one of the finest trees in the central states, has rebelled against being interspersed with other trees, in its lines along the Wisconsin highways. The hero trees, that are to proclaim the honor of 4,000,000 men, who took the oath of service in the greatest of all wars, will be planted in Wisconsin by patriotic citizens. It was Harold E. Brady, editor of the Forest Republican, at Crandon, Wis., who made the announcement about the great elms.

Pointing to three magnificent elms, 115 feet in height, Mr. Crandon said: "That courthouse square was a forest not many years ago. The people cleared and built the courthouse. The beauty of the great elms—there were about ten of them—saved them, and while hacking down the others, the ten were spared.

Women Halt Destruction.

"Then, the courthouse built, the people gave the matter a second thought, and decided they should have left more of those stately elms. They began planting young trees to fill in the space they had cleared. The county board took a look at the courtyard and decided the few magnificent trees made the little fellows look queer. So they decided to chop down the ten elms. They got ready to do it when word was passed around the town that the elms had to go. The women gathered in the streets and made a demonstration. They stopped proceedings temporarily, and then got out an injunction to save the great elms.

"Now, about our memory roads. I'm sure the people of Crandon have profited by the lesson and will plant the elms together along the roadside. They will do better. They will make a better looking road, too, and nothing can be too beautiful for a monument to the soldiers."

County Has Memory Park.

F. J. Rogers, Forest county's highway commissioner, is much interested in the memory roads, and will give advice as to the planting. Mr. Brady pointed out a memory park that already has been planted in the city for the Forest county soldiers who lost their lives.

Through northern Wisconsin the trees that seem especially fitted for carrying the soldier names upon the great highways are the pines. Across the hills that lead from Ashland, south and east to Green Bay, there are great spreading forests of baby pines, just waiting the roadside call.

Building Memory Roads.

Between Laona and Crandon, $120,000 is being spent to improve the highway, and the people in that section are much in favor of making this road into a memorial for their soldiers. W. R. Jaeger of the Rhinelander Daily News believes the people of his city will lose no time in making memory road preparations.

Verne Richards of Eagle River, and Harold Brady of the Crandon Forest Republican will carry the memory road plans to the citizens of their community and report results.

The idea of marking every soldier tree with the bronze marker selected by the American Legion—a tin hat or helmet in design—is decidedly popular. The trees marked individually, have an appeal that a monument with a long list of names never could have.

Oil Industry.

The oil industry withstood deflation so long that many people thought it would prove to be exempt from the general decline of prices. This decline began a year or more ago with a slump in the silk market so severe that it caused a panic in Japan. Then it spread to various other lines in turn. The leather trade and the packing business were deflated so quickly and so quietly last year that the general public did not know of the slump till it was all over. Nearly all lines of business had suffered severe deflation by Jan. 1 last.

When early this year the pipe line companies began announcing reductions in prices for crude oil a chorus of protests went up from small producers who thought reductions could not continue, that they were the result of unjustified action by a few big concerns. However, they did continue and events of the last few weeks have fully justified the pipe line people. Stocks of oil are increasing and storage costs money. Oil is being sold at decreasing prices to stop the expense of carrying it.

The situation presents no difficulty to strong companies that have been paying out only a small part of their wartime earnings in dividends, but concerns which have been paying out nearly all they made in the effort to attract investors to buy their stock on installments face trouble. At least two large ones have bowed to the inevitable and stopped paying dividends. This brings disappointment to all their stockholders and puts the men who only recently bought shares in a dilemma. Knowing they can buy shares in the market for less than they still owe on stock already bought, they are in doubt whether to continue payments or not. Their logical course evidently is to stop payments at once. Whether they shall buy more stock in the open market or not is another question which should be decided on its own merits.

There is, of course, no reasonable doubt that the price of oil will advance again after low prices have caused a decrease of production. Just how long that will take nobody can predict.

Great Southern Lumber.

R. N. B.—The Great Southern Lumber company earned 16.1 per cent on its outstanding stock in 1920, compared with 14 per cent in 1919. The company's 5 per cent debentures mature Feb. 1, 1928. They are a direct obligation of the company, but not a mortgage. No new liens may be created in the property unless these debentures are equally secured. As there are at present only about $78,000 of the bonds outstanding and the average available income for the last five years is $1,337,945, the security is high. These debentures are a high grade, conservative investment.

Brief Answers.

F. R. P.—The American Sales Book Company, Ltd., earned 12.1 per cent on the oustanding preferred stock in 1920, against 7 per cent in 1919 and 4.3 in 1918. The company's first 6s are well secured, the average income available, based on the income of five years, being $270,472, or about ten times the interest charges on the issue.

GRAINS CLOSE AT LOWEST OF WEEK; EXPORTERS BUY

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Big receipts, a large export demand, with more than 2,500,000 bu of wheat sold in all positions, heavy hedging sales, and general pressure carried prices for all grains down to the lowest of the week and practically closed them there, with a bearish feeling at the last. Net losses for the day were 2¼@2¾c on wheat, December leading, ⅜@⅝c on corn, the latter on July, ⅛@⅞c on oats, July leading, and 1@2¾c on rye, with July the weakest.

A large part of the advance in grains made last week was lost, net declines on wheat being 7¾@9½c, corn 1½@2¾c, oats 1⅛@2⅜, rye 7@10¾c, pork 5c lower to unchanged, lard 12½@17½c, and short ribs 52½@57½c lower than a week ago.

Primary Run Is Huge.

With more than 2,100 cars of wheat at the four markets and predictions of 2,000 cars on sale at Kansas City on Monday, combined with the surprisingly big run of wheat, 19,841,000 bu at primary markets for the week, or 13,620,000 bu more than last year, there was enough yesterday to offset all bullish consideration and create heavy general selling. An effort was made to advance prices early on reports of an export demand.

The highest prices were made at the opening, with a decline of 2@2½c later, and the finish ¼c above the low point. July wheat was exchanged even with September at times, and again at ½c discount. It finished at $1.22, with September $1.22¾@1.22½, while December was $1.25¼@1.25½. A big trade was on, with commission houses active on the selling side, while the buying was largely by the leading interests and by houses with seaboard connections, who were active in absorbing wheat against export sales. The buying, however, had no effect, and was largely on the break.

Hedging sales of wheat from all sections, particularly the southwest, were the largest of the season and were absorbed by export houses. New York sold around 2,500,000 bu and 727,000 bu were sold here, largely for the latter part of August shipment.

Corn Buying Is Limited.

Corn was sold largely because of weakness in wheat. The buying was rather limited and offset the effect of dry weather reports and higher temperatures which covered a wider territory. The crop is in a critical condition, but country traders appear indifferet. Prices declined ½@⅝c and closed around the bottom, with July 63¾c, September 61¼c and December 60¾@60⅞. There were 50,000 bu white corn sold at 3½c over September for export. The week's receipts of 1,636,000 were 323,000 bu under last year.

Oats were sold largely by Schreiner and Wagner. With lower prices for other grains and only moderate support, prices declined nearly 1c and finished easy at 40⅛ to 40¼ for September and 42⅞ to 43c for December. Threshings in Iowa suggest average yields of 20 to 30 bu per acre, with a test weight of 21 to 28 lbs per bu. Unfavorable reports, however, had no effect. The week's receipts of 1,894,000 bu were 324,000 bu over last year.

July rye is congested, but there was enough selling to depress prices 2¾c, while September lost only 1c. Export sales were made at Duluth at 1c over July, f. o. b. boat there.

Armour Buys Lard and Ribs.

Heavy sales of lard and ribs by Gregson were taken largely by Armour. Export business was said to be heavy and the week's shipments of lard and meats were more than double last year's, aggregating more than 30,000,000 lbs. Packing here since March 1 aggregates 2,447,000 hogs, or 144,000 more than last year. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN N·E·W·S

Export sales of 2,500,000 bu wheat in all positions are estimated to have been made as the result of the break in futures yesterday. England and Germany were the best buyers, but there was also a cargo of 250,000 bu No. 2 hard winter sold to Argentine interests for shipment to Brazil, the hedge being removed at Chicago. Some corn and rye business was also put through.

Chicago handlers sold 727,000 bu wheat to the seaboard for export, mainly for the latter part of August loading, and 330,000 bu corn, while charters were for 500,000 bu wheat and 1,000,000 bu corn. Included in the corn sale was 50,000 bu white at 3½c over September. Domestic shipping sales were 15,000 bu wheat, 50,000 bu corn and 100,000 bu oats. Deliveries on July contracts were 98,000 bu wheat, 159,000 bu corn, 15,000 bu oats and 10,000 bu rye.

Offerings of cash wheat were large, but sold rapidly, with cash houses big buyers, having sales to the seaboard that must be filled. No. 1 red was July price, No. 2 red July to ½c under; No. 1 hard, 1@1½c over and No. 2 hard, ½@¾c over. Premiums on spring wheats were around 5c lower, with new dark No. 1 northern 10@15c over July and No. 3 3@7c over. Receipts, 460 cars.

Demand for cash corn was less urgent and prices were ½c lower, with the basis easier at July to ¼c under for the No. 2 yellow and white and ¾c under for mixed. Receipts, 109 cars. Outside markets were weake and unchanged to 1c lower.

Shippers were after cash oats and paid September price to 1c over for old No. 2 white and 1@1¼c under for No. 3, while new No. 2 white brought 2@2¼c under and No. 3 white 4@4½c under, while No. 4 white was 5@5¼c under September. Sample values were ½c lower. Receipts, 162 cars.

WHEAT RECEIPTS HEAVY

An increase of 7,841,000 bushels in wheat receipts at primary markets last week made them 19,841,000 bu, or 13,620,000 bu in excess of last year and the largest at this time in more than five years. Total receipts of all grains were 28,499,000 bushels, an increase of 9,049,000 bu for week, 11,060,000 bu over last year and 4,800,000 bu above the five year average. Corn and oat receipts showed small increases for the week and last year.

Chicago had 5,523,000 bu of wheat, an increase of 2,189,000 bu for the week, and exceeded last year's by 5,163,000 bu. Of corn there were 1,636,000 bu or 323,000 bu less than last year, and of oats 1,894,000 bu, or 457,000 over the previous week, and 324,000 bu over last year. Total receipts of all grains were 90 per cent more than the previous week and 41 per cent above the average.

Starting in generally steady, the hog market closed 10@15c lower, with the spread between heavy packers and top light hogs at $11.15, the widest of the season, load lots of "packers" selling down to $8.50. The day's average price was $9.90. Shippers were the best buyers at the start. Four local packers were out of the trade.

Better grades of beef cattle closed strong to 25c higher than a week ago, with the general average at $8.20 and the top for the week at $9.75 for 820@1,038 lb yearlings. Exporters forwarded less than 200 from Chicago during the week, the smallest total of the season. Big losses abroad recently cut the export movement. In May 28,046 cattle were sent from the United States to England.

Lambs Close Weak.

Lambs closed weak to 25c lower than a week ago, while sheep advanced 10@20c. General depression in the mutton trade and fairly liberal receipts in sight for next week had a weakening effect in the late lamb trade.

Chicago received 149,100 hogs last week, which was the largest week's supply this month, 3,900 larger than the previous week and 32,900 larger than the ten year average. Receipts for the corresponding periods during the previous ten years range from 96,809 to 131,814.

The estimated average weight of hogs at Chicago last week at 244 lbs was the heaviest since early last September, 6 lbs heavier than the previous week, and 4 lbs heavier than the ten year average.

Hogs Highest Since March.

The average cost of hogs last week at $9.95 was the highest since the week ending March 19, 50c above the previous week, and $2.05 above the week of June 4, when the average at $7.90 was the lowest since 1916. There was a range of $15.35 from low to high average for the corresponding periods during the previous ten years, with the average two years ago at $22.20, the highest on record.

Receipts at Chicago for Monday are estimated at 16,000 cattle, 43,000 hogs, and 18,000 sheep, against 16,821 cattle, 43,260 hogs, and 32,002 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 50,000 cattle, 135,000 hogs, and 75,000 sheep.

Probable hog receipts for next Monday are estimated from 35,000 to 50,000. J. M. Waters marked 35,000, F. R. Burrows and F. W. Waddell 37,000, G. M. Nicoll 38,000, F. Gehrmann 40,000, E. R. Gentry 43,000, Charles Gross 45,000, and Edward Morris 50,000.

·WORLD'S·GRAIN·MARKET·NEWS·

Wheat traders, while disposed to look for lower prices tomorrow, were not as aggressively bearish yesterday as they were a few days ago. This is due to the lowering of prices and the large export buying that develops as prices recede. Germany and the United Kingdom were the big buyers yesterday, the wheat being easily obtained on the decline. It is not likely that the movement from the country will keep up in large volume for an indefinite period, and the exporters and cash handlers are disposed to take the wheat while it is offered freely and hedge it with sales of September. Hedging sales in the last few days have been the largest in years, the wheat going largely to exporters.

There will be a big run of wheat in all markets by Monday; also a good increase in the visible supply. How much of the effect of the big movement has been discounted puzzled the trade last night. Among the leading interests it was said that it was not wise to press the short side too strongly on declines, owing to the heavy export buying.

A feature of the trade in corn and oats was the unspreading of a large line by Joe Schreiner, who was short corn and long the oats. He has been selling oats for several days and buying corn and his purchases yesterday were unusually heavy.

High temperatures prevail in the Canadian northwest, and in the absence of rain crop conditions there appear to be going backward.

"Those who buy or sell a current delivery after the twentieh of the month and have the markets go against them should have no consideration shown them by the Board of Trade officials or by the courts," said an old trader. "They should know what the conditions are, and if they do not it is their own fault. There are always a lot of speculators who try to take advantage of conditions prevailing at the end of a current future, while a majority of traders always fight shy of a current month, especially in the last ten days."

Seven of the leading railroads have ordered out inspection crews for work Sunday, and it is expected that receipts of wheat here Monday will be around 1,000 cars.

Further rains were reported in the United Kingdom, and the drought is regarded as breaking. Excellent crop reports are coming from Germany, with yields reported as above the average on wheat and rye.

Oats have been losing friends the last few days because of a lack of interest on the part of outside trading, despite the continued reports of small yields and light weights from all sections. There are a few oats coming that test 29 to 30 lbs and grade No. 2 white.

Minneapolis messages said buyers were backing away from the cash wheat offerings, and while choice grains were unchanged, medium and lower grades were off fully 5c, with a few cars 10c lower.

There were sales of new No. 1 dark northern spring wheat here yesterday at 10@28c over July and No. 2 at 5@15c over, while No. 3 was 5@8c over.

Rye is being offered here from Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, and the northwest. There is a big short interest and a large holding by exporters who want the cash rye. Traders who sold July rye and bought July wheat, thinking it a good spread, have lost money, as July rye closed 4c over wheat.

Flour output by Kansas City mills the last week is reported at 114,000 brls, or 9,000 brls more than ever before.

STOCKS MOVE UP AS SPECULATORS HEDGE ON SALES

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

The New York Times.

New York, July 23.—Although overnight news developments which in the ordinary course of events might have an influence on market operations were meager, stocks turned upward today with a good deal of vigor and at the end of the half holiday session exhibited gains ranging from one to two points in the general run of issues, with as much as three point advance in the more volatile ones.

Back of the runup, it was easy to discern, was the anxiety of many to repurchase stocks which had been sold for the decline. The market, particularly the industrial groups, evidently had worked itself into an oversold position, and the usual week end process of evening up commitments found a considerably smaller floating supply of stocks for sale than had been anticipated. Sharp bidding for wanted securities followed.

Railway Shares Are Strong.

It was a noticeable fact that those oil, rubber, leather, and steel issues which have been under greatest pressure during the week were the strongest and recorded the widest gains, adding cumulative evidence that the movement was largely the result of the cleaning up of speculative obligations.

The rail stocks, while maintaining the firm undertone which has characterized their activities during the latter part of the week, exhibited relatively smaller gains, but at the same time lost none of the buoyant tone which has been their characteristic quality of late. The announcement by President Harding that he will go before congress on Tuesday with an appeal for the immediate refunding of some $500,000,000 by the government to the roads was, of course, a constructive factor, but one which was not new to the market and which probably to some extent had been discounted.

Foreign Exchange Is Weak.

The foreign exchanges, influenced by a weak opening and probably by a continued pressure of cotton and grain bills on the market, showed but slight rallying tendency during the morning and established moderate losses, the largest of which was in sterling, which at $3.57¾ exhibited a decline of 1⅝ cents during the session.

A decrease of $6,295,000 in the excess reserve of the clearing house banks brings the total for that item down to $6,300,000. Deposits, meanwhile, are smaller by $35,300,000, chiefly because of reductions in net demand deposits. Loans are $700,000 less. The reserve deposits at the federal reserve bank show a shrinkage of $11,400,000, and government deposits have fallen by $31,600,000, bringing the total decrease in this item in the last two weeks to $100,600,000. The figures follow:

New York Street Car Men Take Reduction in Wages

New York, July 23.—Lindley M. Garrison, receiver of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company, announced today a reduction in wages which is to become effective on Aug. 5. This reduction averages for old employés substantially 10 per cent, with a greater cut for some classes of new employés.

H. H. Porter, vice president and general manager of the Brooklyn City Railroad company, said that similar reductions in wages would be made by arrangement with the employés of that company.

A 10 per cent reduction in wages was voluntarily accepted today by 15,000 employés of the Interborough Rapid Transit company, according to a New York wire. Frank Hedley, president of the company, said the new scale would go into effect tomorrow. The present wage agreement between the employés and the company had until the end of this year to run. The new agreement will extend until July 30, 1922, and, Mr. Hedley said, will mean a saving of $2,600,000 annually.

RAILROAD NOTES

The interstate commerce commission yesterday granted authority to the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad to issue nominally $8,539,238 of series A first lien and improvement twenty year bonds in respect of expenditures made for the refunding and construction of roadway and additions and betterments. The road was authorized to pledge $6,674,000 of the bonds as collateral security for government loans, according to provisions of the transportation act.

Official announcement is made that the locomotive shops of the New York Central at Avis, Pa., which have been closed since March, will reopen tomorrow with a partial force, which will be increased gradually. An increase from twenty-four to thirty-six hours a week, affecting nearly 6,000 men employed in car, locomotive, and repair shops in western Canada by the Canadian National railways, was announced in Winnipeg.

Railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report somewhat more favorable developments. The movement on western carriers was nearly that in 1920, with increases in grain leading. Southern roads report the general traffic about the same as the previous week, and with the exception of a fair run of grain the general conditions are not much changed. Average daily car receipts for Chicago terminals during the week ended July 21 were 16,675, against 10,144 for the previous week, an increase of 543 cars. Deliveries were 10,365, compared with 11,378, a decrease of 1,013 cars.

Henry Ford says that the acquisition of the Detroit and Ironton railroad enabled the Ford company to cut down by eight days the time required for hauling raw materials to the factory and converting them into the finished product, in which process the company has continually tied up $8,000,000.

A reduction of 28 cents a ton on shipments of coal from Pennsylvania and Ohio mines to ports on Lake Erie for reshipment by water to Chicago, Detroit, and other industrial centers on the lakes was issued yesterday by the interstate commerce commission.

Freight rates on export grain from points in Illinois to New Orleans have been cut 3 cents per 100 pounds by the Illinois Central Railroad company, effective Aug. 11. The Southern railway will meet the rate, and carriers to other gulf ports are expected to establish similar reductions.

Frank L. Polk has been elected a director of the Erie in place of Francis Lynde Stetson, deceased. George Slade has been elected a director in place of Ogden Mills, resigned.

·CHICAGO·STOCK·TRANSACTIONS·

Chicago stocks were moderately active and strong in yesterday's week-end session. The packing house issues in particular were higher, Swift & Co. leading with an advance of 3¾ points. There is no doubt in La Salle street that Swift & Co. will pay off its $25,000,000 notes which mature Aug. 15, it being understood that the company already has bought in a considerable amount. The company, however, is expected to do some further financing within the near future in order to maintain adequate working capital. Libby-McNeill was most actively dealt in and made a fractional gain. On small sales Thompson advanced 2 points, Albert Pick 1⅝, Sears-Roebuck 1½, and Diamond Match 1¼. Orpheum was off a point.

Former Chicago Newsboy Heads New National Bank

From newsboy to president of a national bank was the honor attained today by Joseph Rushkiewicz, assistant city treasurer, in the organization of the Alliance National bank, Chicago's latest financial institution. The new bank will be ready for business Aug. 20 at West Chicago and North Ashland avenues. It will have a capital of $200,000 and a surplus of $20,000. The Italian Trust and Savings bank, of which Lawrence H. Whiting is president, formally opened its doors yesterday at 495 Milwaukee avenue, corner of Halsted street and Grand avenue.

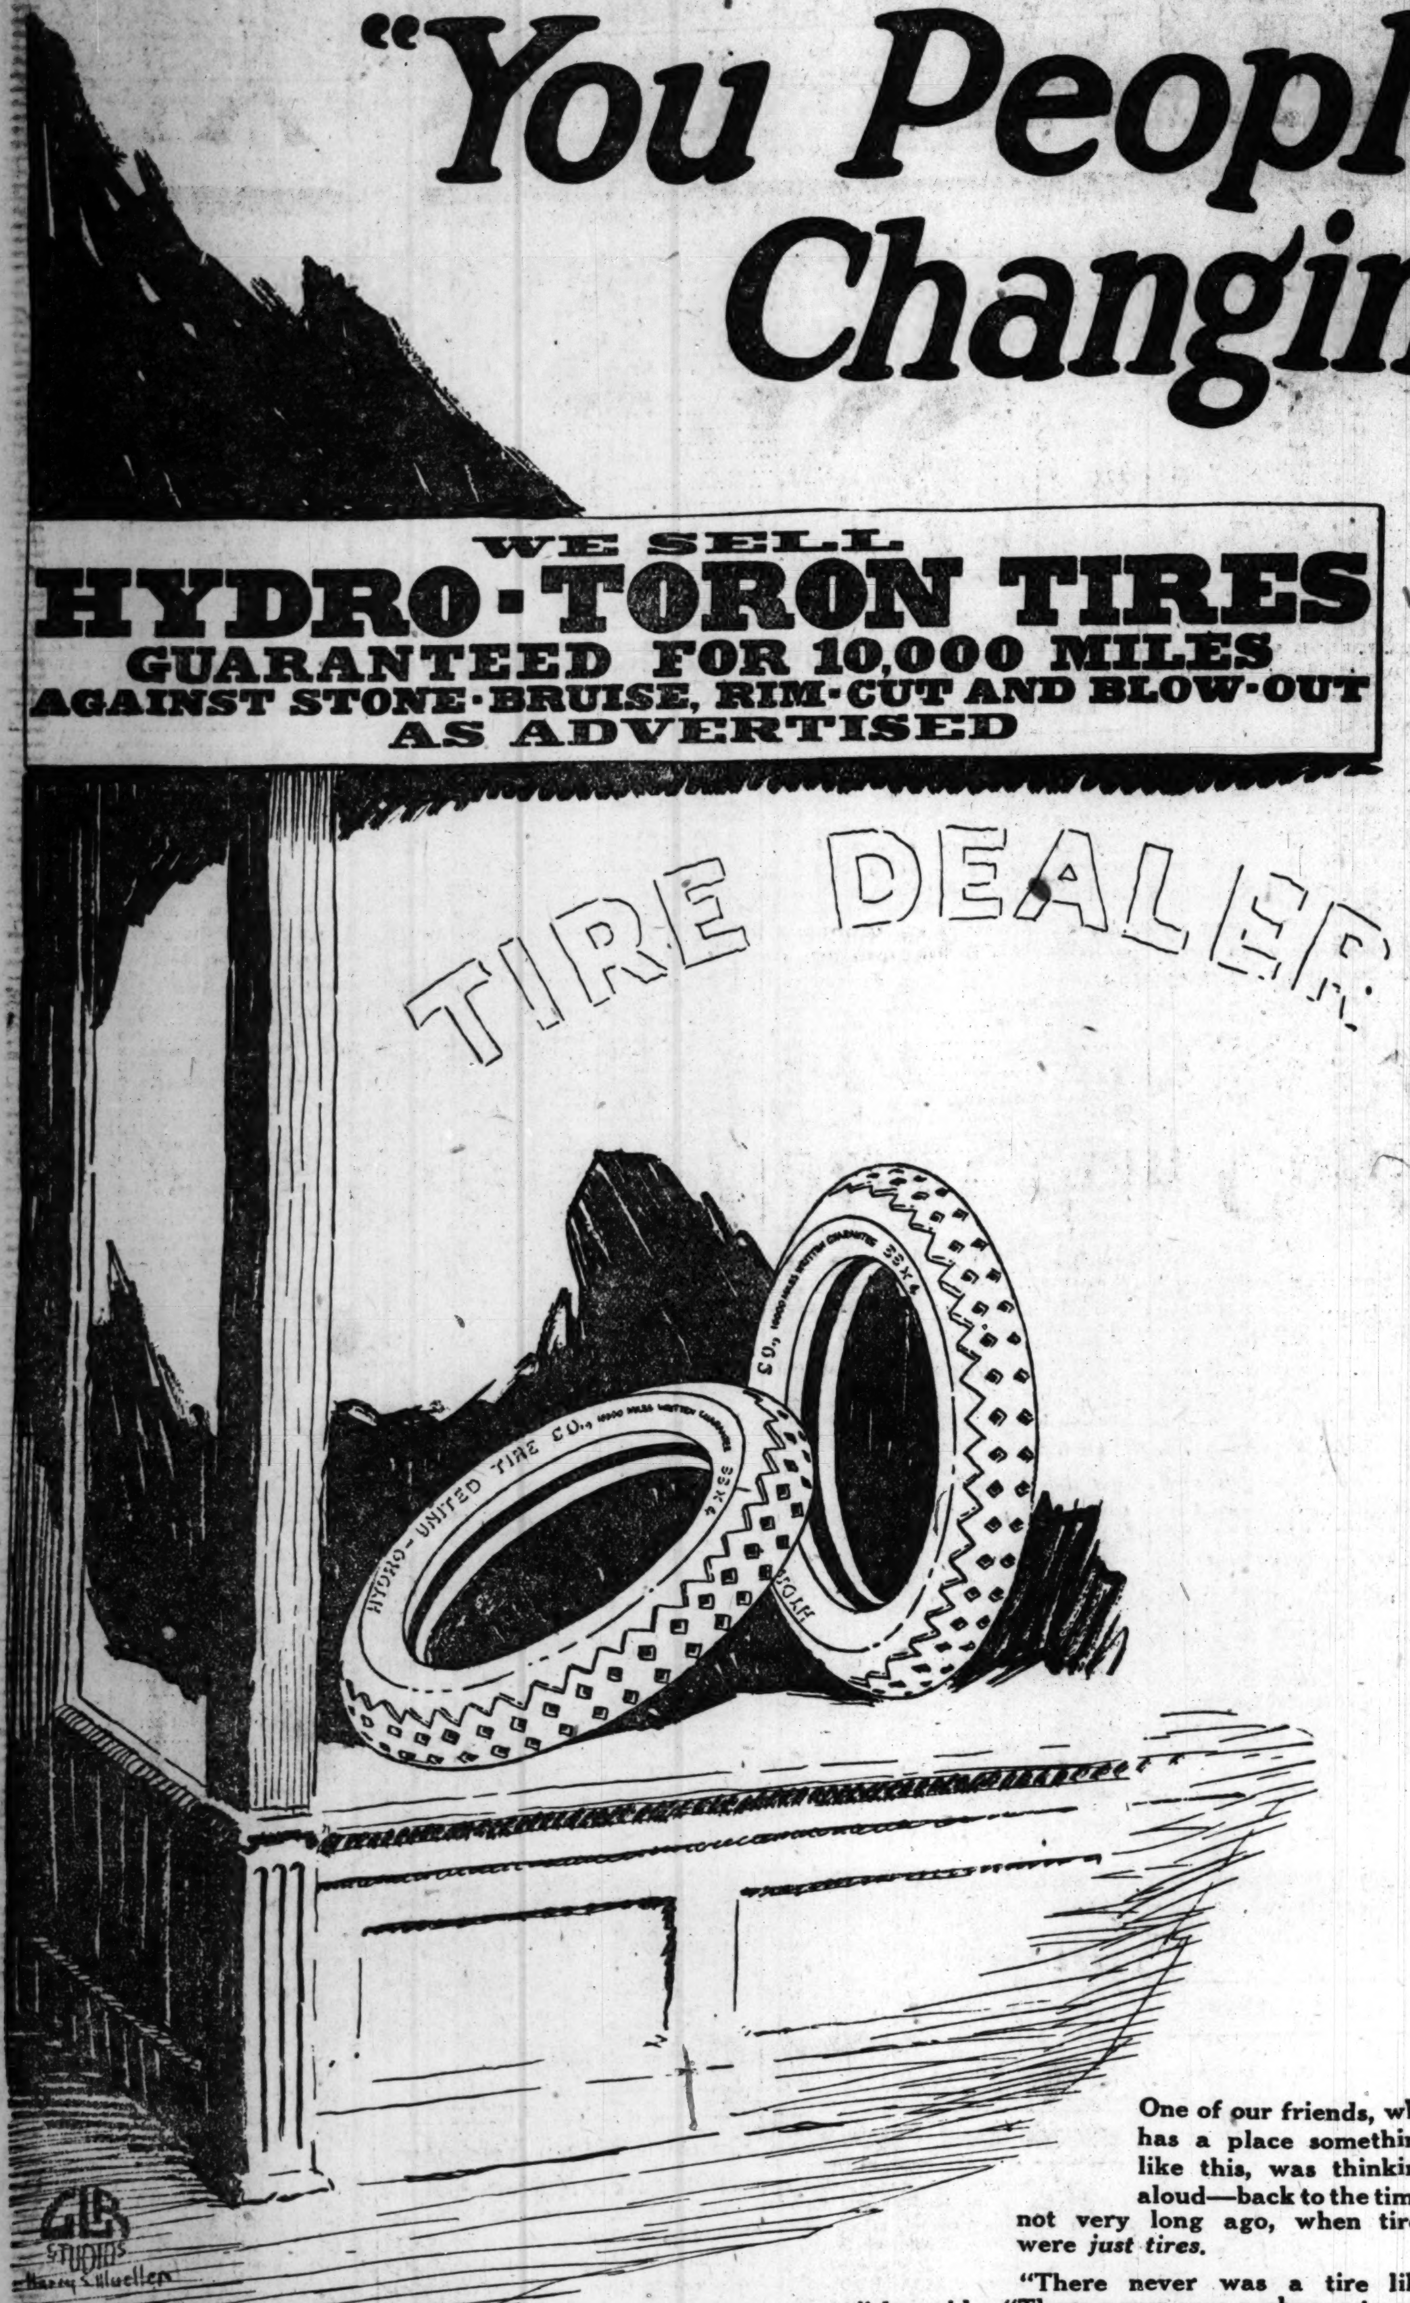
"You People Are Changing the Tire Business"



One of our friends, who has a place something like this, was thinking aloud—back to the time, not very long ago, when tires were just tires.

"There never was a tire like yours," he said. "There never was a chance to say much about a tire until you came along with your new fabric treatment and your different process of construction.

"Now you've given us reasons for selling tires, and the Hydro-Toron 10,000 mile guarantee against stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out simply settles all doubt. You people are changing the tire business, and it's fine to handle a tire that a man can actually sell."

Big as Cords—Better than Cords at Standard Fabric Prices

The response of car owners and tire dealers to this assurance of a better tire—with cord size, cord mileage and 10,000-mile guarantee against stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out—has broken all records.

The reasons for Hydro-Toron's unusual mileage—with the 10,000-mile guarantee attached to every tire—are as plain as day. First, the Internal Hydraulic Expansion Process of building this tire so completely protects the tire while it is being built, completely prevents hidden imperfections in the form of blisters, buckles, misplaced beads, etc.

Layer separations, tread separation and other common troubles are practically unknown because the tire contains a hot water bag during the vulcanizing process, the vulcanizing heat inside and outside the tire is uniform, and the molding pressure is all from within—resulting in a smooth, flawless, perfectly built tire.

Second—The Toron treatment of all fabric used in this tire absolutely insures the water-proofiing of every tiny particle of fabric; prevents rot, decay, oxidation, and all forms of deterioration; increases the holding power of the layers at least 50 per cent; increases tensile strength one-third; produces a tire that is preserved from the ordinary processes of going bad.

Buy Hydro-Toron tires today at one of the places shown here. If you cannot yet find them in your neighborhood we will ship C. O. D. And if the tires are not all that we claim, you get every penny of your money back.

ILLUSTRATED BY HERBERT MORTON STOOPS

The Story of a Man, a Girl, and an Amazing Adventure That Came on the Wings of the Storm

HAVING nothing else to do, Claire MacNorton went down to the station early, then fretted about, calm outwardly, but raging within, until the gates opened and she was permitted to take her seat in the sleeper.

Traffic was heavy at the moment and, having suddenly decided to leave, she had been able to secure only an upper, which was well in the middle of the car. This, if possible, added to her fury, which was of a particularly upsetting sort, being mingled with a really sincere grief and a tremendous disappointment.

It is always grievous to find one's self left out of an expected large inheritance, especially where this has been verbally promised. But when added to this there is an honest mourning for the deceased because of past ties of love and gratitude, the conflicting emotions are disturbing in the extreme. The mind is angry, the heart is hurt, pride is humiliated, and confidence in human nature crippled.

Claire had traveled two days and nights by rail to reach the bedside of her dying godfather, a millionaire and a past benefactor of many acts of kindness and generosity. She had hoped to arrive in time to minister comfort to his last moments, but had reached her destination too late, and she had remained to hear the reading of the will. Expecting with just cause to inherit richly, she had managed to secure the proper mourning, including a veil which, as one very close to the deceased, she had not raised. And now she was glad that she had not done so.

Later the lawyers had explained the reason of her omission as a legatee.

"When our late client learned of your engagement to marry Mr. Van Schaick he was furious," the dry little councilor had said. "It appears that Mr. Van Schaick's father was not only a business but a personal enemy, and a man by whom he considered himself to have been defrauded and vilified. He swore that the son should never profit by a penny of his, and he therefore caused your name to be stricken immediately from the will."

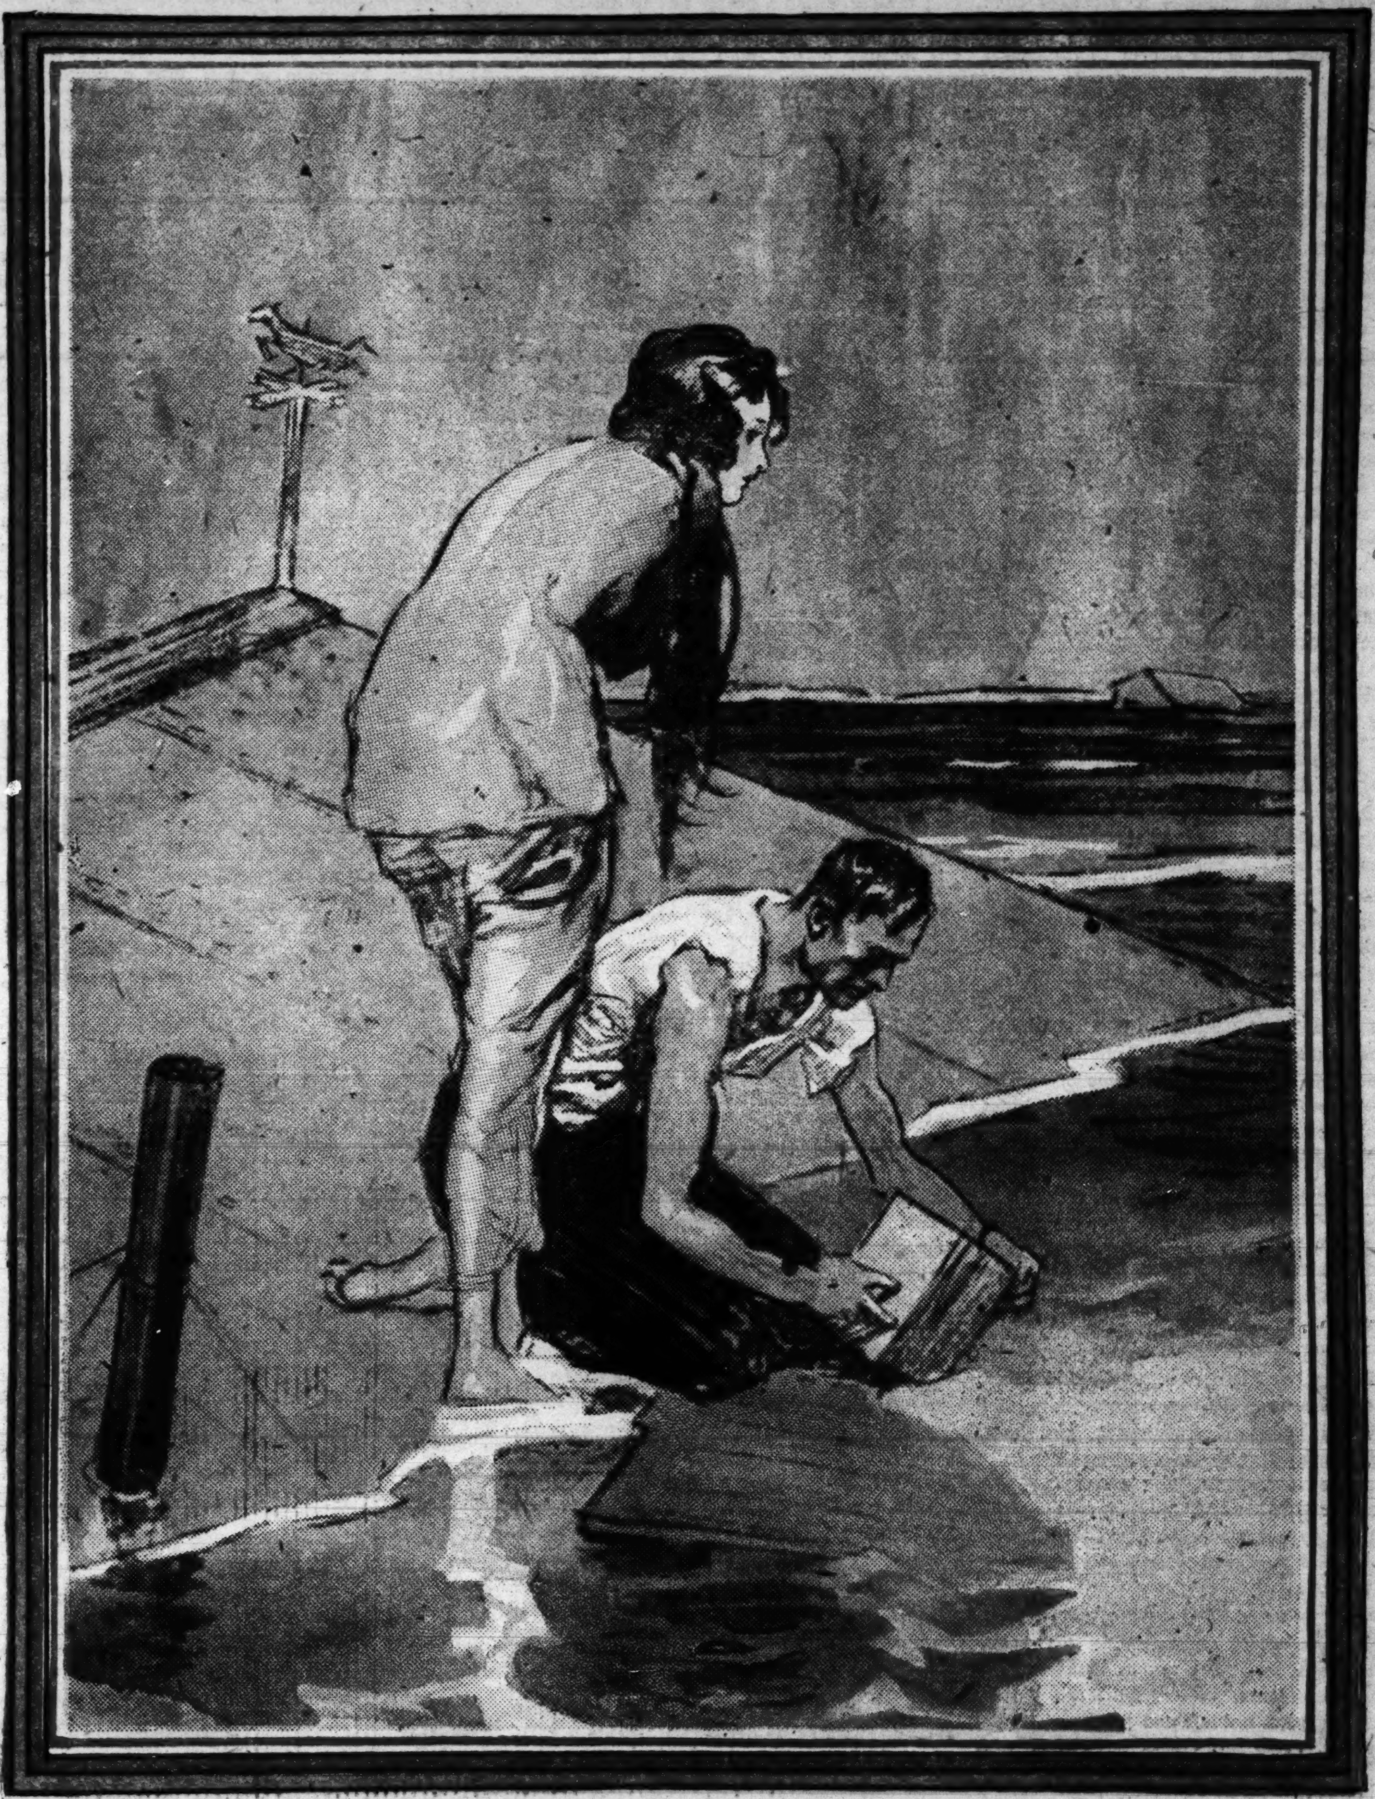
"But I had just written him to say that I had broken the engagement," Claire protested, in a choking voice. "I learned a few things about Reggie Van Schaick which made all idea of marrying him revolting."

"Alas! my dear young lady," said the lawyer, "your letter must be among those which arrived after the stroke. Let me see." He summoned a clerk, who brought a heap of correspondence, and from this he selected and handed to Claire the letter which, by its retarded delivery, had cost her perhaps a quarter of a million dollars.

So here was Claire, a penniless girl, dependent on the bounty of a relative, her engagement to marry a wealthy profligate broken, her expectations shattered, her future a void, and in her heart an aching grief for a man who had proven her best friend, now beyond reach of appeal, and all the result of a horrible misunderstanding and an inefficient postal service.

Claire had taken the blow squarely on her two feet; she had shed some few tears, these of sorrow, quite free from all recrimination. And now, facing the situation, she was obliged to admit that her immediate future was not a brilliant one.

Since the death of her parents her home had been made with a rather tyrannical widowed aunt, whom she suspected of being by no means averse to a second marriage, and Claire had reason to believe that her entertainment was largely due to her usefulness as a decoy. There was nothing of the flapper to her. She had just turned twenty-five, was possessed of sense and character, alluring of face and with a ripeness of physical charms rather unusual for her age. Moreover, she was steady of head, cultured, and she regarded social problems squarely.



"We'd better save our lifeboat. Might want to abandon ship if we happen to run aground."

Facing the present one, her gray eyes grew very thoughtful, her firm little chin was set at an angle of decision, and her cool little nose appeared to raise itself a trifle, as if in self-contempt for the mess that she had made of things as the result of a swift infatuation for a libertine.

But underneath was a burning rage, this directed not against her kindly godfather, but the vultures who had profited by his bequests. She was convinced that a swarm of these had profited by her own fall; so that when presently the porter conducted to the seat facing hers a lean but squarely built young man, whom she recognized instantly as having seen at the reading of the will, Claire's emotion was for the instant homicidal.

She did not remember the amount of the legacy he had inherited, but that did not matter. As she figured it, no doubt correctly enough, her godfather, on striking out at the eleventh hour the considerable fortune previously bequeathed to her, had been left with a residue which he had probably divided among a number of people having no especial claim upon him. A moment later she had reason to feel convinced of this. The young man who was to occupy the lower berth of the section appeared incumbered with a good deal of hand luggage, which the red cap had set down indiscriminately, and the Pullman porter, observing this as he passed, proceeded to stow these pieces in more orderly fashion. A suitcase went under one seat, a soldier's seabag was stuffed under the other, while a roll of steamer rugs with the corner of a Navajo blanket protruding was hung from a hook overhead. The porter then stooped to pick up a small square black valise which the young man had set down in such a manner as to incommode his feet. But this inconspicuous bit of luggage did not come up. The porter had reached for it negligently with one finger, and the expression of his sable face was that of one who might lay hold of the empty trunk left by an indigent boarder and finds it nailed to the floor.

"Lan' sakes!" said he, and tried again, this time with success, though at the cost of some considerable effort, then stood staring with perplexity at the fine steel chain which was attached at one end to the valise and at the other to the wrist of the passenger.

"Never mind that, George," said the young man, crisply. "Just a little White Mule. We have to ride close hard on it nowadays."

The porter gave an explosive Negro laugh. "Yassir," said he, "but I never hefted no White Mule weigh lak that." A knowing look spread over his face as he turned and went about his duties.

Claire had missed no part of this. She could easily guess that "White Mule" was a term for the country's forbidden fruit, but she knew that no spirits could so ballast the little valise, which was not more than the

Bathe Hygienically with KIRK'S JAP ROSE SOAP

Golden Transparent

A BATH EVERY DAY that brings real cleanliness, is the chief secret of perfect health and beauty. Unless the pores of the skin everywhere, are kept open and clean, the skin cannot carry off the bodily impurities. The skin needs to 'breathe' freely, just as do the lungs, if real health is to result. And to breathe freely, the delicate pores must be entirely free of the undissolved impurities and artificial coloring matter of soaps, as well as of waste secretions and dirt.

WATER ALONE will not cleanse the skin perfectly. Most bath and toilet soaps are not wholly soluble — they tend to clog the pores rather than cleanse them. But JAP ROSE Soap is absolutely soluble in any kind of water. More than that, it is made of only the purest oils and c. p. glycerine, which not only cleanse perfectly, but also soothe and heal the tender skin.

A JAP ROSE BATH is a luxury indeed, although a luxury anyone can enjoy. The delicate rose scent, the masses of fairy bubbles, the easy and complete rinsing — one is not only refreshed, rested and absolutely clean, but more beautiful too, for there can be no real beauty where there is not perfect health.

size of two shoe boxes. A solution of the problem flashed immediately across her quick mind. Here apparently was a forehanded young man, who was taking no chances on the prompt custody of his inheritance. He had evidently by some especial favor secured his legacy in gold, and put it in the baby suitcase, which he had secured to his person by a chain. The roll of rugs suggested a sea voyage in immediate prospective. She thought it probable that he was leaving the country, and wondered by what right he could expect to take with him what must be a considerable fortune in gold.

The train presently pulled out of the station; Claire's vis-a-vis picked up a technical magazine of engineering, upon which he concentrated his attention. This gave her an opportunity to study him surreptitiously. Under other circumstances Claire would have found him distinctly attractive. He was the type of man which pleased her most; clean cut, clear of skin and eye, and with a set of features which bespoke race. The left hand resting upon his knee was strong and well shaped, the fingers straight and rather widely spaced—the hand of a craftsman—and on the little finger was a heavy gold seal ring engraved with arms. He was extremely well dressed in a grayish cheviot, very light but of the finest wool, of an English cut which rather belittled the breadth of his shoulders, with a shirt of pongee silk no longer to be found in America, heavy and resistant to the maltreatment of the laundry, and his tie was of a snug woven silk also of foreign fabric.

It was evident to Claire that his clothes were not American, although their wearer was distinctly so, as evidenced by his speech, which might have been that of a New Yorker, possibly a Bostonian.

"Here," thought Claire, bitterly, "is a man already well provided for, who is making off with a good part of what should be my inheritance." She glanced at the end of his suitcase under the seat and saw the label of a Washington hotel, also the remains of one of the French Line. This suggested that he might be in some branch of government service, a naval officer, perhaps, about to be ordered to European waters.

Then as the train rumbled on she made another discovery. It was suffocatingly hot, with a low barometer and a lurid, heavy sky which predicted some sort of meteorological disturbance—earthquake weather, as a Californian might have said. Some of the men in the car had taken off their coats and were sitting in shirtwaists.

A dining car steward announced the first call for dinner. The young man opposite Claire laid down his magazine and rose, when for the first time he appeared to take an active interest in her presence. His features relaxed in a friendly expression and he spoke to her in the pleasant, inoffensive way of one accustomed not only to travel and its exigencies, but courteously offering to render service to his fellow travelers.

"Perhaps you'd rather have the lower berth," said he. "It's rather awkward for a lady to scramble up and down the ladder, and I am quite accustomed to it."

"Thank you," said Claire, "if you're sure you don't mind."

"Not in the least. The upper is really better on a sultry night like this, more free air, and I'm used to that, too." He glanced through the window. "Looks as if we were going to catch a cyclone or cloudburst or something. Hope it doesn't blow the train off the track"—he glanced at his valise and smiled—"just when I've got all my eggs in one basket. I believe I saw you at the funeral of Mr. Lothrop."

"Yes," answered Claire, surprised that he should have recognized her heavily veiled. "Mr. Lothrop was my godfather."

His eyes flashed at her a look of sudden interest. He reseated himself. "Then you must be Miss MacNorton. Mr. Lothrop often talked to me about you. I am Stephen Goddard."

Claire's gray eyes hardened. Her godfather had also spoken frequently to her of Stephen Goddard, whom she knew to have been a sort of protégé for whose scientific education he had paid.

"Yes," she answered, "I've heard him mention you."

"I owe him everything," said Stephen. "I have delayed the sailing of a government vessel to go to his funeral."

"Your duty appears to have been well rewarded," said Claire.

He looked surprised. "I don't think I quite get you."

Claire glanced significantly at his wrist to which the light chain was attached. He caught the trend of her mind and smiled, then frowned.

"If you'll pardon me for saying so, I was intensely surprised at not hearing your name mentioned in the will."

"So was I," said Claire, bitterly; "but that is a matter which I prefer not to discuss."

She turned to look out of the window with the manner of one who desires a conversation discontinued. Stephen appeared to hesitate for a moment, then picked up his valise and walked down the aisle toward the head of the train, indifferent to the curious eyes of such of the passengers as happened to observe his manner of safeguarding the small piece of luggage.

Claire continued to stare out at the dull, monotonous country with eyes as hot and brooding and sullen as the lurid sky, now thickening into a dark opacity as the daylight waned. It was suffocating in the car, and such heavy air as there was to breathe seemed charged with a sort of poisonous depressant. The faces of the passengers were humid, some congested, and across the aisle a plethoric man was panting for breath and starting up fitfully from time to time as he dozed. Claire wondered how she was going to be able to pass the night.

She was angry with herself for having accepted the offer of this complacent young stranger whom she felt had profited at her cost. "Playing safe," said Claire to herself, and her full lip curled scornfully. "That's the way to get what you want in this world. Play safe. If I'd had the sense to play safe I'd be safe now instead of a beggar and prospective outcast."

For it was borne in upon her mind that the reception of her aunt and hostess was apt to be affected by the knowledge of her disinheritance. It was one thing to entertain a prospective heiress and another to dispense a grudging hospitality to an indigent relative who had first broken her engagement with a millionaire and then found herself left portionless.

Blacker and blacker grew Claire's mood, until she found herself in a state of desperation. She could see no light ahead. The discovery of the character of her fiancé, which led to the breaking of her engagement, had been catastrophe enough, she thought, but assuaged to some extent by the prospect of independence. Now that this was withdrawn she felt herself a derelict. There were a number of men who greatly desired to marry her and, although not one of these made any appeal to her as husband, she began to reflect that it might be wise to select the most desirable and do her duty as a wife to the best of her ability.

"I'd better take my medicine and play safe," she told herself with a sort of bitter scorn. "I've no talents, no business ability, no coquetry nor faculty for getting something for nothing. The first thing I know I'll be developing into a hard, acrimonious old maid. Better play safe like my self-satisfied neighbor."

She sent the porter for a sandwich and a glass of milk, then waited in another seat for him to make up her berth. Inside it with the curtains drawn she felt as though buried alive in a misfit coffin not far removed from the infernal regions. Nervous depression added to the intensity of her bodily discomfort. The perspiration ran from her in little rills, but without the agreeable sense of depletion to be found in a Turkish bath.

"I'll be a sodden mass by morning if I live through this fearful night," said Claire to herself. It was difficult to understand the reason for such extra discomfort. The porter had assured the protesting passengers that all of the ventilators were open, even to the screened apertures of the windows. That of Claire was open but the air which filtered through it was hot and oppressive.

As she lay there unable to sleep and reflecting on this final torture inflicted by the High Gods or low devils as the result of her journey to the Southwest in midsummer, she heard Stephen's voice asking the porter to bring the steps and a moment later the curtains rustled as he crept into his upper berth. For some reason the near presence of the successful heritor infuriated her and she reflected that one might cheerfully support the intense discomforts of the night with a gold-filled valise secured to one's person by a chain.

Presently she drifted into an unrestful sleep but was awakened toward midnight by what seemed to be a crashing and battering of the car and a fine spray upon her face.

She discovered then that the train appeared to be caught up in a cyclone, while the rear upon the roof of the car was as though it were passing under a cataract. The porter was hurriedly closing the windows and ventilators and the train had slowed its speed.

"Now," thought Claire, "we shall quickly suffocate and that will be an end of it." She almost regretted when the porter requested permission to close her own and instead of the cooling spray there was the sodden smell of wet bedding.

"Some cyclone, ma'am," said the negro. "I reckon we done pitched into a cloudburst."

Claire presently dropped off again, but this time her sleep was fraught with troubled dreams. She thought that she was aboard a ship which had broken down and was drifting toward a maelstrom. Then suddenly it reached the brink of this and she felt it plunge down into the vortex.

"All is over," thought Claire with a sort of resigned relief, and at that moment there came a most terrific sense of falling accompanied by a rending splitting sound and culminating in an appalling crash.

She woke suddenly and flung up her hands. They struck a hard, smooth surface which slanted down across her and completely blocked her exit from the berth. The car was keeled over at a slight angle to the other side and the air was filled with muffled shrieks and shouting and the roar of waters. Terror-stricken, Claire reached for her light, only to find it extinct. She thrust up the curtain of her window but the darkness without was impenetrable and there seemed to be a flood pouring down the glass. She was imprisoned in a triangular space and immediately guessed that the chains supporting the upper berth had parted and that it had fallen to leave an aperture of not more than six inches on the aisle of the car. Through this she shrieked wildly for help.

"One minute," shouted a vibrant voice. "I'll get you out."

The cries and screams seemed growing fainter, and from a little distance came a smashing, splintering sound. She heard the man beside her roaring for help to raise the berth, which had jammed, but there was no response. Then presently as he struggled it seemed to yield.

"Lie on your back and shove straight up with your arms when I count three," he said. Claire obeyed and they seemed to gain two or three inches.

"It's jammed against the partition," he panted. "Don't be frightened. I'll get you out."

She found herself suddenly alone. There were no more sounds of human presence, nor crushing fabrics but a torrent of water seemed cascading over the roof of the car as a river flows over a dam, with swirling sucking gurgles. Then to her horror Claire felt a warm trickle about her and thrusting her arm through the aperture felt the flood up to the very edge of her berth.

In those few terrible seconds she was able to realize what had happened. There had been a cloudburst and a low trestle crossing some torrential river-bed, normally dry at that season, had been washed out and given way. And here she was imprisoned, probably the only one in the car to be thus helpless, as otherwise there must have been cries for help.

No doubt the torrent was continuing to rise, in which case she must be drowned like a rat in a trap unless speedily released.

"At any rate this solves my problem," she thought, and at that moment there came the sloshing of water in the aisle and a voice said cheerfully. "Now I'll soon have you out of this. Keep over against the window side."

Followed a smashing and splintering apparently the blows of a train ax directed against the partition at her feet. But as these continued, the flood rose higher about her until her body was half submerged. The car seemed to settle a little so that Claire's body was covered and she was forced to raise her head to keep it clear. And all of this in Stygian blackness.

"Now, we'll see," said the vibrant voice huskily. Claire's hands were against the lid of her aqueous coffin, when she felt it suddenly lift. "Slip out," panted a voice.

She squirmed through the aperture and found herself splashing about in two or three feet of water.

"All right," said the voice and a hand fumbling about gripped her by the shoulder and helped her to her feet.

The car was at an angle of forty-five degrees and like people aboard a sailing vessel in a gale, they managed to crawl and scramble to the platform. Crossing this they entered the car ahead which was slanted at a lesser angle, while the water in the aisle was not so deep. They made their way the length of this, Stephen in the lead, and on reaching the forward platform he paused with an exclamation of dismay.

"Good Lord!—the rest of the train is gone."

"Into the river?" Claire asked tremulously.

"I don't think so. He peered out into the murk. "It's not very deep and we could see it if it had. We were moving very slowly when the side of the trestle gave way. This car is on the track. The passengers from ours must have gone through to the car ahead of this when they uncoupled the train and went on."

The black water was swirling past, two feet deep over the platform, while the rain was crashing down in solid sheets. Then as they stood there a shudder seemed to shake the car and it lurched over at a greater angle.

"We've got to get out of this and quick," said Stephen. "The trestle is apt to go at any moment, or our car might roll over and drag this one after it. We're shipwrecked in Arkansas. But we've got to have a raft. Wait a moment."

He plunged into the oblivion of the car and, above the crash of the rain and the gurgling sounds of the torrent, Claire heard the clattering and banging as of loose planks. Lacking the resourcefulness of her rescuer, she could not imagine what he hoped to find as material for a raft in a sleeping car. But she was enlightened when a few minutes later Stephen emerged and propped in the doorway what sounded like a heap of planks.

"These are the triangular partitions from between the upper berths," he said breathlessly. "They'll float us until we ground somewhere. It's not as if we were a thousand miles at sea. "I'll get a couple more."

He accomplished this and taking five of the partitions he laid them in the water one on top of the other beside the downstream edge of the platform, and as he did so there came another ominous shudder and the car careened slightly. Stephen went down the steps and set his valise on the improvised raft.

"Come on," said he to Claire. "Lie halfway across this thing and we'll cast off. Hurry. The car's apt to topple over at any minute."

Claire followed his instructions and a moment later they were swirling away through the inky murk, partly submerged but floated easily by the wood partitions. The water was warm as new milk and about as thick, though this was not immediately discoverable. As the bed of the stream was smooth there were no waves, but occasionally they were caught in a whirlpool and twisted about from side to side.

"We ought to wash ashore pretty soon," said Stephen, "that is if we don't get floated out into the Arkansas. But even in that case we ought to land somewhere in time for breakfast."

Claire began to laugh, not hysterically but from the absurdity of their situation. It seemed a fitting end to her disastrous trip, to be floating down through the pitchy darkness with nothing left her but her life and a suit of silk pajamas, very thin and torn. While opposite her was a young man similarly clad and chained to a bag of treasure which was rightfully hers and which he had been at such pains to safeguard.

"What do you think now of playing safe?" she asked.

"There's no such thing. I've hung on to it so far, though," and he rapped the panel beneath him with his knockles.

"Well, I don't begrudge it to you, now. You saved me from a very oozy death. What if you hadn't been able to get me out?"

"Then I'd have kept you company. There's no good in hating one's self for all one's life."

His hand was close to hers. Claire laid hers on the back of it for a moment with a sudden impulsive pressure. "Thank you" said she.

The pressure was returned and for several moments they drifted on in silence, then Stephen said.

"This is the first time I've been comfortably cool since my morning tub, and that was fairly lukewarm. Not getting chilled, are you?"

"Not a bit. It's very refreshing."

"The daylight can't be far off," said Stephen; "then we can make a landfall and lay a course for somewhere."

The rain stopped suddenly as though somebody had turned off the faucet of the shower and the silence struck upon them with a sort of shock. There was no noise beyond the low murmuring voice of the flood, a sort of deep, musical diapason. Then presently the heavy clouds seemed to roll up by JACK LAIT.

A GAME MEANT FOR TWO

"THERE'S one little game only two can play,
The greatest of life's sweet joy"——

Thus sang Bruiser Mulroy as he sauntered down the main stem of the "bad lands," the central avenue of the city's section where decent folk seldom trod.

"One girlie kin play, but only one way,
With just a single sweetie, only one lovin'
boy."

It was a new song and he fancied it. Not that he subscribed to its sentiment—how many ever do, just because they like a song, agree with its gospel?

"An' he mustn't stray from the straight
narrow way,
They both must be upright an' true;
Deceivers an' sinners kin never be winners
When three play a game meant for two,
dear—
When three play a game meant for two."

Bruiser Mulroy hummed along. He was a hummer, but humming would scarcely have been picked as his pick in solitaire entertainment, for Bruiser Mulroy's foremost manifestations of exuberance would not have logically been expected to express themselves in song, least of all in song of romantic nature, less yet in song of moral tone.

There was no pointed significance in the new vaudeville ditty nor in his singing of it. He had heard it at a cabaret, and he had let it remain in his head. Had it been a blues wail or a weepy "farewell forever" ballad, or an apostrophe to a stein of gin, it would have "stuck" just as solidly and he would have hummed it in his unmusical basso just as profundo.

The Bruiser was a slugger, a bad baby. He "packed a kick" in his right hand that would have jarred a garage. Unlike most knockers down and beaters up, he was a big man, obviously muscular, knit like a Percheron, hairy of hands and shaggy of brows. His clothes fitted him tightly and exaggerated the protruding muscles. As he walked the big ripples of power played over his giant thighs like waves on a troubled sea.

And he was singing about the woe that comes to sinners when three play a game meant for two. He had played games single handed that would have called for four—ordinary men. Morals had he none, conscience had he less, ethics he ignored, proprieties and equities and constituted conventions he pooh-poohed as heartily as though they had been on the statute books.

But he liked that song, even though it found no responding vibration in his code of honor, just as fat fathers weep over maudlin mother mush and loafers beat their wives when they get home after applauding love songs.

As he stamped along, cock of the sidewalk, he was aware of a young woman emerging from one of the dwelling buildings honeycombed with furnished rooms and light housekeeping apartments. He slowed down and gave her more than a cursory look—more than an academic survey. She had come forth a foot or two ahead of him and was going in the same direction. The Bruiser overtook her with two ponderous steps. He put a thumb and forefinger on her plump arm and she turned, startled. He tightened the hold.

"Do you know who I am?" he asked.

She was frightened, but she nodded.

"Fine. Now, who are you?"

"I'm—I'm Nellie Friend."

"That means nothin' to me—how're you hooked up?"

"I'm—I guess you know my husband, Phil Friend, the——"

"The pool shark. Sure I know him. He's a cigaret fiend with a cigaret paper color to his mug, about as big as my little sister. One good paste in the kisser from me an' I'd knock him so far it'd cost him $9 to write a postal card home."

"You—you wouldn't hit him—you——"

"No. I guess I won't have to. He knows me."

He tightened his grip some more and slid his hand higher, above the elbow.

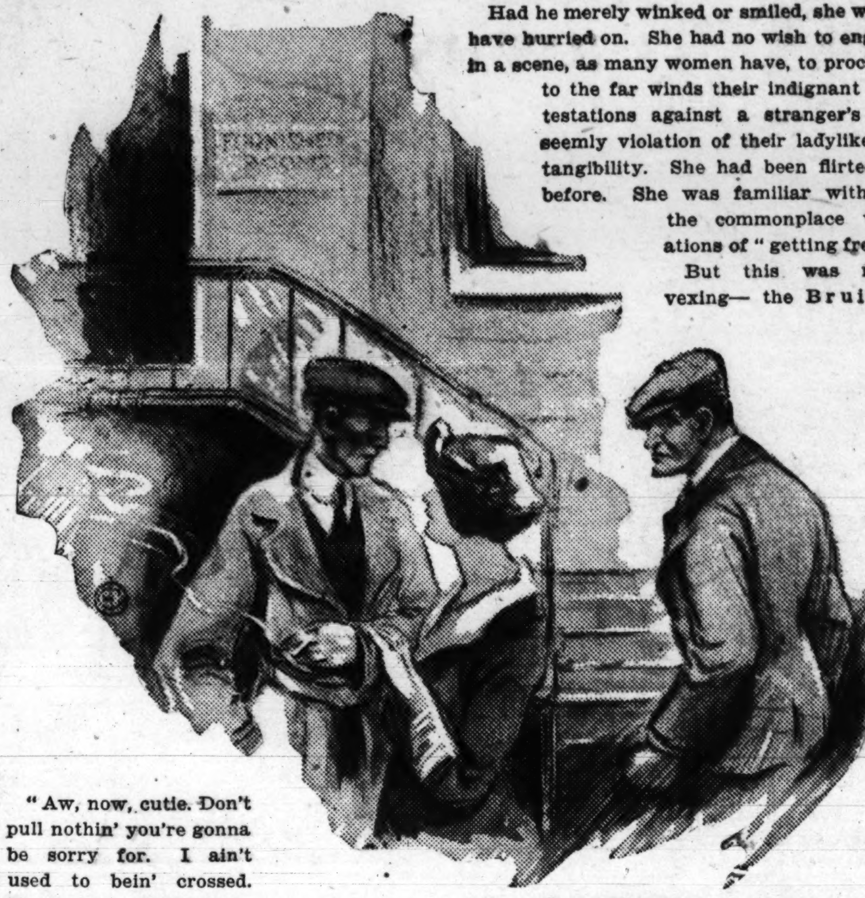
"Wh-why—what's the matter—what did he do to you?"

"He didn' do nothin' to me—an' he ain't gonna. An' he ain't gonna do nothin' to you, neither. If he as much as looks squint-eyed at you for this I'll wheel him one, an' the nex' thing he knows somebody'll be pattin' him on the face with a shovel."

"What are you talking about? My husband never laid a hand on me or even ever said a cross word to me. What's it all about?"

"Say, do you have to have a brick house fall on you before you get jerry to an open an' shut cinch? You look pretty nice to me. An' when a queen makes a hit with me, she kin write her own ticket an' I'll sign it, an' I wanna see some flat-chested an' dyin' poolroom peanut as much as bat an eye, that's all."

"But—say, you let go my arm. I'm a married woman. I don't want you an' I don't want none of your fresh plays."



"Friend, you're the gamest fool I ever met."

"Aw, now, cutie. Don't pull nothin' you're gonna be sorry for. I ain't used to bein' crossed. I'm a nice, quiet lad unlessen I'm paid to bust some bozo or unlessen somebody gits me sore. Now, you——"

"You let go my arm. What do you think this is, Africa? I tell you I'm a respectable married woman, and I don't want nothin' to do with you, and I don't want to hear what you think of yourself—or of me—or anything. I'm on the way to the store to buy some stuff for my husband's supper. Now you let me be."

The Bruiser looked at her in astonishment.

"What's gettin' into you?" he demanded. "Don't I look good to you, or what? How about a li'l ride, a flock o' feed, a nice quiet an' friendly talk, an' then a li'l old fashioned cabaret hoppin'?"

"No. Not a chance in the world. My husband is coming home now any minute. I got to fix him his meal. You go on about your business."

"My business," said the Bruiser, through his teeth, "is gettin' what I go after. An' I wanna see somebody stop me."

"I'll stop you," she said, and with that she slapped his face.

For a second a look came over the tingling face of Bruiser Mulroy that spelled murder. Then he turned it into a wry grin, and then into a genuine smile of amusement—almost satisfaction.

"You're a bear," he said. "If half the men had half the spunk you got, I'd have more fun out o' my trade than what I get now. I'm beginnin' to like you better every minnit. Let's go."

Mrs. Friend was tugging violently to free her arm. A passerby stopped to see what it was about. The Bruiser aimed a kick at him, and the man scurried on his way.

"Go on," said Mulroy. "The more you struggle the more pink you get in them pretty cheeks, an' the prettier them cheeks get the more strugglin' you'll need to slip me the shake."

Mrs. Friend tried to bite the hand that gripped her arm.

"Here," he cautioned. "That's out. Marquis o' Queensbury rules, no scratchin', bitin', or hatpins. I promise you I'll never hit you when you ain't lookin' or when you're down, too. Now come on, like a good kid. I don't wanna get too rough."

The woman looked helplessly about her, though she was by no means yielding or quitting. Her head was in a daze over this assault and this calm, uncamouflaged affront on a public highway by a stranger who had no more right to seize and to outrage her than the power in his steel hands and his egregious physique. She was no sainted simpleton. She had been a chambermaid, and she had married a swallow swindler who made for her an uncertain living by steering callow college boys or tipsy teamsters into the low game of skill which was his sole talent. But she retained a certain modicum of self-respect, and she was as sure as sure is sure that no man could whistle her off her chosen road of duty and of good faith. She was not flattered by the Bruiser's admiration, nor was she grateful for his primitive advances.

Had he merely winked or smiled, she would have hurried on. She had no wish to engage in a scene, as many women have, to proclaim to the far winds their indignant protestations against a stranger's unseemly violation of their ladylike intangibility. She had been flirted at before. She was familiar with all the commonplace variations of "getting fresh."

But this was most vexing— the Bruiser was holding her and hurting her. She had no intention of submitting, he paid no attention to her protesting, and there was no alternative but to fight. She raised her free hand again, but this time Mulroy caught it deftly in the vise of his unoccupied hand, and as he tightened the pressure with both he held her so that she could neither strike nor escape, and where she could not reach him with a kick.

She braced herself for one final effort to break his hold. She was gritting her teeth and there was a look of bulldog resolution on her face. The Bruiser saw that look, and he laughed. His shoulders chugged with mirth, but his thumbs and fingers held hard.

"What's the use o' fightin' an' gettin' yourself all mussed up?" he chuckled. "Might as well come along like a nice, quiet baby. Nothin' ever busted out o' that hold yet, man nor woman, so you got a fine chancet."

She started to whirl her shoulders for that one twist which she hoped might release one hand. But she stopped suddenly, as though she had lost all use of her muscles. She saw, running across the street toward them, her husband.

Several others were standing about in groups by that time, but none had come to help her. There were stout men in the lot. They kept their distances, either because they knew the Bruiser and had no taste for getting their skulls caved in, or they followed that well established principle of the street: Never butt in when a man and woman are fighting, because the man will hit you from in front while the woman will slam you from behind.

But here came Phil Friend, the weakling, the sickling. He burst through the knot of people nearest his wife and the Bruiser, ran up behind Mulroy, and landed a blow on the slugger's neck. Mulroy dropped the woman and spun about. In his eyes there was manslaughter.

His eyes blinked for a second when he saw who had struck him.

"Why, you li'l cootie—you——"

Friend, a small circle of red burning on each of his jaundiced cheeks, stood his ground.

The Bruiser took one step at him and lifted his mighty paw, clenched and palpitating with anger.

"Put down your hand, Mulroy," said Friend. "If you hit me you'll have to kill me, because, so help me, I'll put a bullet through you if you leave me alive."

Something in the voice of the cadaverous husband, and something in his manner, caused Mulroy to drop his hand.

"Go ahead," he sneered. "Pull your gat—if you do I'll shove it down your throat."

"I ain't got no gat," said Friend. "But if you lay a hand on me or if you touch my wife again—an' I ever come to—I'll get one an' I'll lay for you day an' night an' I'll croak you. I swear it—I swear it on my wife."

Mulroy turned to look at that wife. She was breathing hard from her struggle and the pyramided stress of her emotions of five trying minutes. But her eyes had opened wide and there was in them a shining light that was neither of fear nor of fury. It was love; it was thanksgiving.

The Bruiser turned his head again and saw Friend. He saw that the man realized fully his danger. He saw that the characterless poolroom tout had not flown at him in the temper of a gnat stinging an elephant, but that the skinny physical incompetent had stormed him with a full realization of what and whom he was going against. And, why? Because he loved his wife; because he loved her enough to die for her, and, if he lived, to kill for her.

Bruiser Mulroy had never been whipped, had never even been withstood. Fifty people were within sight and earshot now, and the story would travel the levee to its far borders.

"Friend," he said, "you're the gamest fool I ever met."

Friend made no return to this compliment, but only waved his wife to step around the huge intruder and to his side, which she did, lovingly taking his measly arm.

"They's a lot o' rough-an'-tumble boys an' a lot o' coppers with cannons on their hip what wouldn't o' done what you done, Friend."

"They might," said Friend, "if they seen you rasslin' their wife on the street."

"They might," said Mulroy. "But who'd o' ever expected it from you?"

"She would," said Friend.

Mulroy was not a sentimental man, but he softened until he almost crumpled. There was a choke in his voice as he spoke, low and without the Bruiser's bravado:

"Friend, you're a lucky stiff. If I could ever make a woman think I'd go all the way for her like that, I'd live a diff'rent life. I'm a lonesome sap, I am. I could never convince a skirt that I'd scrap for her becus I care for her, an' scrappin' is my business."

"I never mentioned scrap to my wife in my life," said Friend. "It'd be a joke for me to talk fight."

"Then why do you say she would of expected you to fight Bruiser Mulroy for her?"

"Because she knows there ain't nothin' I wouldn't do for her, jus' like I know there ain't nothin' she wouldn't do for me—we ain't got it all laid out word by word an' punch by punch—whatever comes up, us two will go through—for each other—won't we honey?"

She nodded, happily—jocundly.

"I'm licked," said Mulroy. "I never dreampt o' such stuff."

"You didn't? Gee—I pity you. Well, we got to be goin' now."

Bruiser Mulroy picked up his hat, which Friend had knocked off with his single blow from behind. He brushed its crown against his forearm sleeve. One or two boys, ready to run, boohed at him. He did not hear them. He turned and started down street, as he had been going before Mrs. Friend had come out of the tenement. For a few yards he was silent. Then he began to hum softly:

"There's one little game only two can play,
The greatest of life's sweet joy"——

He walked on and sucked his under lip.

"Say, that's a fine song," he mused. "Only two, huh? The song says three can't work it. Well, I could write another verse—one can't, neither——"

"One girlie kin play, but only one way,
With just a single sweetie, only one lovin'
boy——"

"It's got to be a lovin' boy, is it? I guess lovin' is somethin' I never got hep to—till tonight."

"An' he mustn't stray from the straight
narrow way,
They both must be upright an' true—
Deceivers an' sinners kin never be winners
When three play a game meant for two,
dear—
When three play a game meant for two."

"Say, I wonder where them song writers an' pool sharks get all their inside tips on this love racket. What's the use o' bein' a champ if a lot o' rums has got it on you in the [illegible] what counts, that game for two [illegible]" at the edges and the brilliant summer stars shone down upon them from a widening zone of fathomless sky. Dark high banks loomed up on either side at a distance of several hundred yards. But staring downstream was like looking straight out to open sea.

"Just as I thought," said Stephen. "This is a big shallow torrential tributary of the Arkansas, and it can't be very far away." His eyes pierced the gloom, now rapidly lightening, and suddenly he gave a gasp of dismay.

"Good Lord! look at that. We're out in the river."

For the clay banks on either side had dwindled abruptly, then disappeared, and they saw that they were swirling out upon a broad expanse of water. A higher draft of air had swept away the rain clouds and there was a growing light which announced the dawn.

This brightened rapidly as the sky cleared, and presently a brilliant crimson glow spread itself across the firmament and edged the distant volumes of dissipating vapor with glorious color.

"Lovely morning," said Stephen. "What's that thing ahead?"

"A house," said Claire.

The day rushed in a good deal as a stage is lightened in a morning scene. They found themselves well out in a big muddy stream the color of yellow paint in the reflected light from the sky upon the turbid water.

The force of the torrent had propelled them nearly to mid-river and the low banks looked to be a mile away on either side. Not far ahead of them was a square wooden building with a flat roof. This on a slant which brought one side of it awash, possibly from the weight of a stove inside, as a pipe projected.

"We had better tranship," said Stephen. "We've drifted out into the Arkansas not far from where it empties into the Mississippi, and if we have to go on to Vicksburg we will be more comfortable aboard a larger vessel. Let's kick this boat of ours ahead."

He shifted himself around to the side of Claire and they began to strike out with their feet, driving their float at a fair progress which promised soon to overhaul the house not far ahead. There was slight danger of the partitions sliding apart, the buoyancy of those beneath thrusting them up against the submerged one on which their weight rested; also because the apex of their triangle was between Claire and Stephen.

"A twin-propeller craft," Stephen observed, "noncapsizable and nonsinkable."

"One ought to play safe with a big gold shipment," answered Claire.

"Right-o. Especially when you happen to be chained to it. Lucky for me we swapped berths. I was half awake when we got let down, so I grabbed the curtain rod and swung there till I got a foothold. Providentially my berth jammed or it might have crushed you."

"Thanks to you, I'm still alive and kicking," Claire answered.

And, thanks to the kicking, they were soon able to exchange a precarious float for a more stable one. The floating house, which looked like a big square box, had revolved in an eddy so that its front was now presented obliquely to them, about ten feet of it being above the water, while the rear was awash. Two upper story windows were clear of the stream, and above these was painted an inscription in crude vermilion letters, the n's and s's reversed: "COTTON PICKERS BANK," and beneath, "STORAGE."

"Good thing for the cotton pickers they haven't started to pick," Stephen observed. "Let's kick this thing around to the back."

They accomplished this and found the rim of the roof about a foot under the yellow water. Stephen passed his valise aboard, scrambled up after it, then turned and held out his hand to Claire, who now for the first time realized with a shock that she was scarcely clad at all. But there was no help for it, and, being a sensible girl, she took the outstretched hand and a moment later was standing, as Stephen expressed it, "on the quarter deck," a superb, unshrinking figure in her thin, wet silk pajamas. Stephen without glancing at Claire began to drag the pieces of Pullman partition up onto the roof. Their weight had caused the flimsy structure to careen at an even greater angle.

"We'd better save our lifeboat," said he. "Might want to abandon ship if we should happen to run aground. Besides, once the sun gets up this tar paper is going to get awful hot."

He fitted the triangular pieces together near the front of the roof, when Claire sank down upon them with a sigh of fatigue, less from exhaustion than the tremendous strain of the last three hours. The day was coming apace and presently the sun rose and sent its crimson horizontal beams across what much resembled a sea of fluid mud. Sitting side by side with their hands clasped in front of their knees, they looked out across the desolate waste. Here and there were farms along the banks of the river and far ahead a jetty ran out for some distance into the stream. Some motor boats were also visible moored to the shore, but no immediate succor was in sight. There was also about them a great mass of floating debris, trees, and logs, and fragments of shacks, and not very far distant a waterlogged skiff which Stephen eyed covetously. But Claire observed that never once his eyes rested upon herself, and this fact gave her a new esteem for him.

She reflected that she really was about as much in his debt as it is possible for one person to be in another's, that, resistant to the panic of the other passengers who had fled forward while there was still time, he had remained terribly incumbered by the heavy valise, not only an inconvenience but a grave danger, to fight for and accomplish her release. She believed absolutely that he would have gone to the bottom of the creek with the car sooner than have abandoned her, had been in danger of doing so at any moment with the coach at a perilous pitch which needed but the slightest settling of its support to roll over into the stream. This knowledge sent a warm glow through her and made her feel that she had done him great injustice.

"It's going to be scorching hot in about an hour," he said, "but we are sure to be taken off before we begin to crisp up. Besides we can always keep wet. We could do with a bite to eat, though." He rose, crossed the roof, and returned with two flat stones from those cemented around the base of the stove pipe, then reseated himself at her side.

"What now?" asked Claire.

"Watch and learn," he answered.

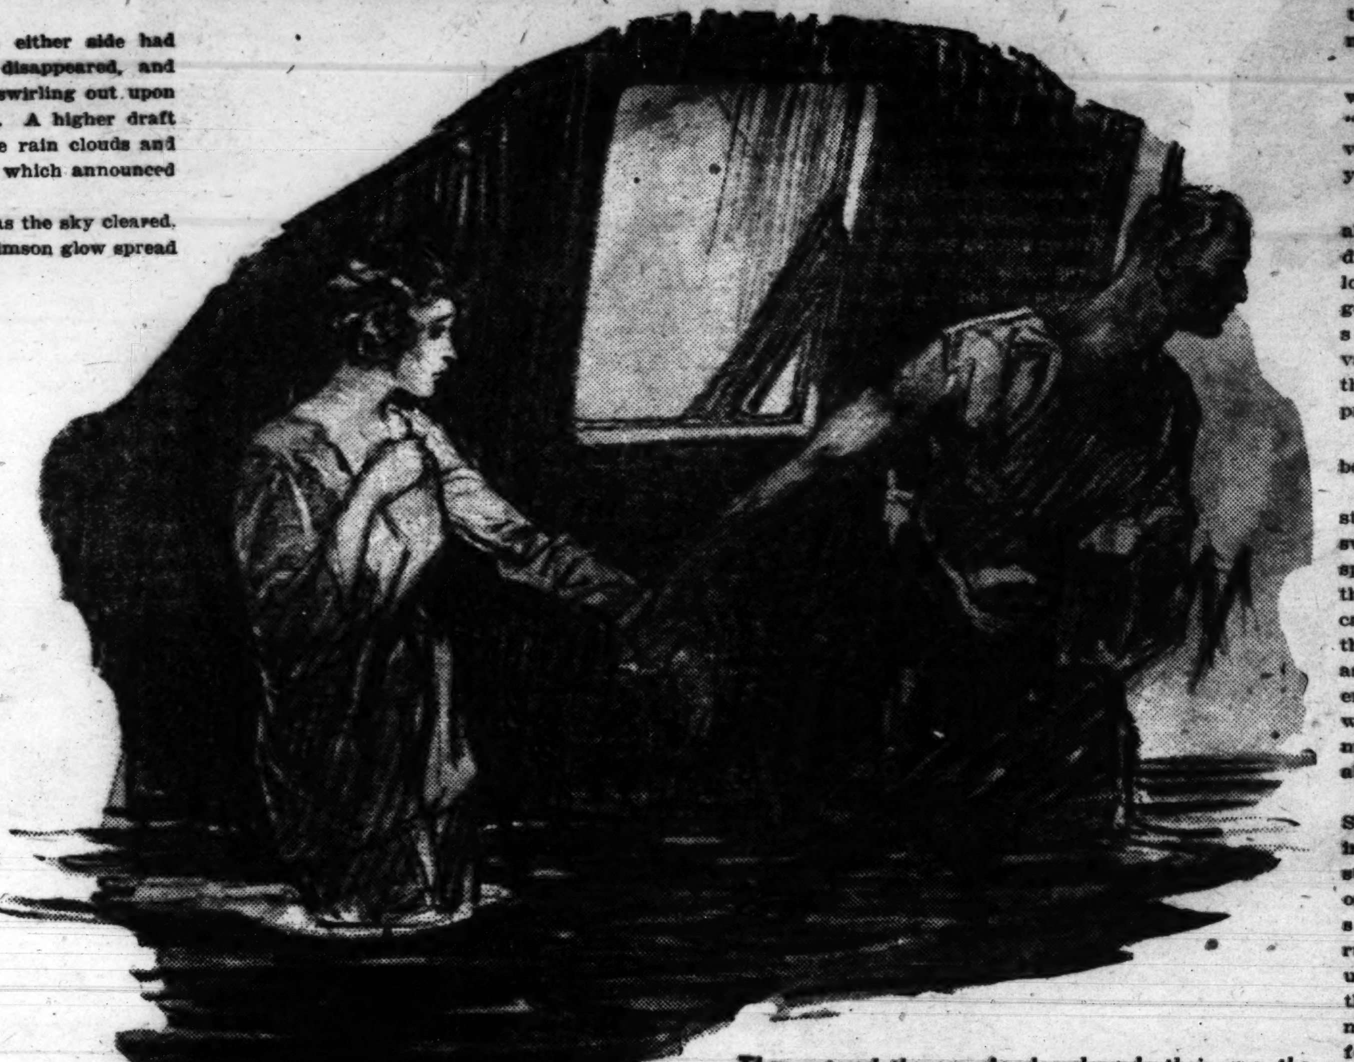
Stretching the chain across the corner of one stone, he began to strike it with the other, about a foot from his wrist.

"You think of everything, don't you?" said Claire.

"Ah! but you see I'm an inventor!"

"But is that playing safe?" she asked, amused.

"It would prove so if I should happen to fall overboard. But my present object is to swim over and get that skiff. Then we can split paddles off our raft and row ashore."



They entered the car ahead and made their way the length of this, Stephen in the lead.

He continued his hammering softly, so as not to break the stone, which was wearing considerably from the process.

"I suppose you think," Stephen observed as he tapped away, "that the contents of this valise should by rights belong to you."

"Not now," Claire answered. "Any such claim is more than settled."

He shot her a sidelong look, then glanced quickly away, reddening slightly. "Then you consider that there is no existing claim between us?"

"I didn't say that. I said that what possible claim I might have on you was settled."

Tap! tap! tap! His head was bowed over his task, and Claire, glancing at him in turn, discovered that his shipwrecked condition added to rather than diminished his attractiveness. The water had curled his chestnut hair in pleasing fashion and his skin was very clear and fine, his eyes doubly fringed with long, black, curving lashes, and his profile of pure classic Grecian type, but without the softness lent by the chisel of Praxitiles. He had more jaw and his chin was square rather than rounded, while the lips, instead of being full, were straight and firm.

Then, watching his task, its method puzzled her, for instead of tapping continually on one point of the chain he now spread it the length of the stone and proceeded to hammer this segment flat.

"Why are you doing that?" she asked.

"Watch and learn," he answered.

Satisfied presently with the result, he picked up the chain, of which the links were now hammered so closely together that there was no play between them, but remained stiff like a piece of wire. Taking this between his hands, he began to bend it back and forth at the point which he had first eroded. The result was almost immediate, as the chain, no longer able to articulate, broke at the eroded part.

"Easy enough when you happen to be an inventor," and glanced at Claire with a flashing smile which brought the color to her face. But this was not because of her déshabille. She was beginning to forget about that, or at least to disregard it. For a moment her gray eyes clung to his hazel ones, when for some mysterious reason both faces glowed with a crimson which was not entirely a reflection of the sunrise. Stephen rose to his feet, picked up the valise, and set it away from the edge of the roof, almost in the center.

Claire laughed. "Invention seems to be your first instinct, and playing safe the second," said she. "How much have you actually got in that bag?"

He raised his eyebrows. "In real money, none."

"What?"

"None. In fact, it would not even be negotiable to anybody who might steal it."

"Well, upon my word," gasped Claire. "Then why do you invite attack by chaining yourself to it?"

"Because I am very absent minded and I did not want to risk losing it. I am apt to get thinking about something of real value. The contents of the valise have still to prove their value."

"And when will that be?"

"When the hour strikes," Stephen answered, and as he spoke an astonishing thing occurred. There came a buzzing from the inside of the valise, as if it imprisoned an enormous bee, and this was followed by the muffled ringing of an alarm clock.

The effect upon Stephen was electrifying. For a moment he stared at the bag with open mouth, then sprang to his feet, rushed to it, picked it up, and held it while the alarm continued merrily to ring. Claire, for her part, was petrified with amazement. It flashed suddenly across her mind that she must be adrift on that muddy river with a madman, for who else would think of winding up and setting an alarm clock, then placing it in a valise and chaining himself to it?

Stephen's immediate maneuvers appeared to confirm this startling conviction. The alarm rang itself out and stopped. He set down the bag and stared from one side of the river to the other as if trying to take bearings. Then turning he glared at Claire with a wild expression in his face.

"We're smack over it," said he.

"Over what?" she asked faintly.

"Over gold," he answered. "Quantities of gold, either in the bed of the river or on a sunken steamer, or private treasure, or something of the sort."

Claire looked about fearsomely as if seeking some avenue of escape. There being none in sight, she steadied her voice and asked, "How do you know?"

He flung out his arms in a sort of despair. "Smack over scads of gold and no way of getting an accurate bearing or buoying the spot or anything to locate it. Never mind. I know where it is in a general way and I can get a boat and come back here and paddle around until I find it."

Claire had no longer any doubt. Her rescuer was unquestionably mad, but with the madness of the inventor, some monomania or insistent idea which left him sane enough in other respects. She began to breathe more freely when his next words confounded her diagnosis of his case.

"You see, Miss MacNorton," said he, now staring directly at her, but apparently unconscious of her near nudity, "that thing in the bag is an invention for locating precious nonmagnetic metals, particularly gold. Mr. Lothrop financed me while I was at work upon it. That's been since the end of the war. I've discovered an affinity for gold which acts in a way to liberate a certain force which makes an electric connection and rings a bell. This would only happen if the gold was in great quantity and directly underneath, even at a considerable depth."

Claire's face cleared, then she reflected for a moment. "Would it do it if the gold were in small quantity but very close?" she asked.

would have known that no suspicion would have been aroused by her entrance. A taxi breakdown could happen to any one; that any one should seek shelter from the storm was a natural thing, not something to invite curiosity. But she thought incoherently. She must approach by stealth, relying on surprise. . . . .

Almost above her head, it seemed to her, the lightning flashed. The roar of thunder that followed seemed to shake her. But she felt no fear. For in the flash she had seen, in one of the French windows that opened upon the Inn balcony, the man in search of whom she had braved the storm.

As a searchlight might light up the recesses of a cavern, so the lightning showed her clearly the interior of the room. The second floor of the Cresthill Inn was elevated above the ground only a dozen feet. Where Rosa stood the ground rose, as though lovingly to embrace the great elm from behind which she peered. Her head was only a foot or so below the level of the private dining room, and so she could see, from the waist up, the figure of Halsey, and also the figure, a few feet away from him, of a woman.

For a moment she leaned against the trunk of the elm. She had known; of course she had known. But somewhere, deep down in her subconsciousness, had lurked a hope. It was a ridiculous hope, one that she was unaware of entertaining, but it had existed. And now it was gone.

Into her eyes came hate that would endure as long as life was in her. If, in the same subconscious region that the false hope had dwelled, there had been any faltering of her intention, it disappeared now. She would do what she had come to do!

The elements seemed to conspire in her behalf. For, following this last illumination, came that almost utter darkness that the thunderstorm sometimes brings with it. She gathered her sodden skirts in one hand and raced across the downward, then upward, sloping bit of lawn to the stairs that led to the balcony.

She paused, breathless. Not the exertion of the brief run through the pelting rain, but the rage and hate within her made her heart beat, made her gasp for breath and lean, lest she fall, against the flimsy balustrade that guarded the stairway.

Though a score of the Inn employés might see her, might at the last moment interfere with her plan, she would not move. But slowly her breath, and with it her power to move, came back to her. And she saw that from where she stood she would be invisible to any one in the Inn.

The foot of the stairway faced a blank wall. There was no window between it and the corner of the building at the right. And from the view of any one at the windows at the left the stairway itself sheltered her. Unless she had been seen to run across that stretch of lawn. . . . But evidently she had not, for no one called to her, no one came in search of her.

The balcony itself shielded her from the observation of any one on the second floor. She had only to climb the flight of stairs, walk to the window where she had seen Halsey, and whose location was burned in her brain—as though her brain had been a camera plate and the lightning the flashlight that fixed a picture upon its sensitive surface—aim through it . . .

Crouched there in the rain, she withdrew the automatic pistol from the handbag. She threw the bag from her. She could not be hampered. She removed her veil. Carefully she examined the weapon. She had done so at the pawnshop, but she verified her previous results. It was in perfect working order, ready, as soon as she slipped the safety catch, to hurl a leaden rain of death . . . She slipped the catch.

Cautiously, although in the roar of the wind and the rattle of the rain against window panes and balcony floor, no sound of footsteps could possibly have been heard within the Inn, she climbed the flight of stairs.

At the top she turned slightly to the right. There, where she could touch the streaming glass with the soaking fingertips of her gloves, was the tall French window through which she had seen the figure of Halsey.

She noted that the window was slightly ajar. One jerk of the handle and it would stand wide for her entrance. Half-crouching, like some feral thing, she put forth her hand.

Inside the room Allayne was staring at the man who had locked the door and who now stood, threatening her with a revolver, with his back to the window, the only other mode of egress from the room.

"Fifteen hundred dollars," said Halsey, contemptuously. "Fif-teen hundred! That's what your good name is worth, eh?"

"It's not the price of my good name," Allayne retorted. "It is to enable you to save your life."

"Kind of you," jeered Halsey. "I suppose that I ought to be grateful. But I'm not. Do you know what happened to me yesterday? You don't, and probably don't care. But I'm going to tell you. Two doctors told me that I couldn't live another week. You may save your expressions of sorrow, Allayne, my dear."

Allayne made no reply. Halsey's voice rose shrilly.

"Two years ago," he said, "two hundred thousand dollars—less—would have assured me years of life. But now—millions couldn't help me."

"Then what do you want with me?" asked Allayne. She strived pathetically to make her voice sound brave, but failed.

"Want from you? Nothing that you can give me, my dear girl," sneered Halsey. "But there is something that I can take from you. You hate scandal, don't you? You're so good, so noble, so pure. . . . Faugh, you are a squeamish little schoolgirl. And because of your squeamishness you robbed me of my chance of life. Well, I'll rob you of something. You have money; you have a husband. Well, I'll take those from you."

He stared at her. Into his eyes came the gleam of the maniac.

"The rich Mrs. Bourke," he cried. "Found in a private room in a roadhouse; found by the body of a dead man! How will she explain it?"

Slowly Allayne began to understand. But with understanding came non-belief. "You wouldn't dare," she said.

Halsey smiled again in that queer mirthless fashion that had so frightened her a moment ago.

"Why not?" he asked. "A day more or less to live—that's all I have. Because of you! Shall I refuse to seize a chance to make you pay for what you've made me suffer? You sent me from you because of scandal! Well, I'll leave you with a scandal that you can never explain! Even if you convince the police that I killed myself—why were you here? And you'll not convince them that I killed myself. I've taken care of that."

He lifted the revolver. "Your precious Bourke," he jeered. "He's had you. I wonder if he'll want you now. And even if he does—the police will have something to say about that." He laughed again. And now all semblance of sanity had left him.

He was a coward. He dreaded death, and brooding on his dread had made him unbalanced. As a person standing on the top of a tall building, in deadly fear lest he fall, suddenly hurls himself over the edge, to end the agonizing suspense, so Halsey, on the brink of death, now leaped to meet it. He raised the revolver.

Outside, Rosa's hand touched the glass of the window. Now that she had arrived at the consummation of her desire no false move must be permitted to jeopardize it. Softly, her breath held, she pushed against the glass. The window opened slightly. She heard the words:

". . . your precious Bourke. . . . I wonder if he'll want you now!"

She straightened up. Right! Always right about Halsey! In the last few moments of his life. . . . Well, he didn't know how few they were!

She burst through the door. A clap of thunder, louder than any that had gone before, drowned the sound of her entrance. But Allayne, facing toward the window, saw her. Her eyes lighted for a second, then darkened as she recognized the woman, the woman of the train-gate, the woman who had claimed Halsey as her own. Her impulse to cry out died away. This woman, whose eyes blazed with hate, would not save her from Halsey.

She closed her eyes as the muzzle of Halsey's gun pointed toward her. Then, summoning her courage, she opened them. She gasped as the gun curved upward, pointing toward the ceiling, then swiftly descended. She believed him at last. She'd thought that Halsey raved when he spoke of explanations that she would have to make. She'd thought that he'd meant to kill her, then himself. She knew now how dreadful was his real intention; he meant to kill himself and let her live, to be accused—of murder, perhaps!

And then, sharply, barely audible above the thunder, Rosa's pistol spoke. For Rosa had not guessed Halsey's intention. She thought that because Allayne refused herself Halsey intended killing her. And she would balk him of his own revenge while she exacted hers.

Halsey half-turned; his face, a moment ago contorted with insane wrath, took on suddenly a stupid, vacuous expression. He stared at Rosa; his lips curled in a silly grin; and then he pitched forward upon the floor.

A moment Rosa stared at him, her teeth gleaming in the semi-gloom of the room. Then her own pistol clattered to the floor as she fell against the table and slid to the floor in a dead faint.

Upon the door the waiter knocked. Slowly Allayne felt her body grow chill. The wraith of scandal had put his hand upon her shoulder at last.

Why didn't the waiter break the door down? There was only one answer to the question: the thunder had drowned the sound of the shot. He had come merely for the dishes.

Time! Allayne wanted time! No plan of extrication from this terrible entanglement could come to her as yet, but—she wanted time. She walked to the door. And because she was not beaten, never could be beaten until every avenue of hope was barred, her step became suddenly firm; her eyes, that had been dull, became bright, even hard. And her voice, when she spoke, would have been the despair of any great actress of melodrama. For it held exactly the correct shade of petulance.

"What do you wish?" she asked.

"The dishes, madame."

"We'll ring when we want you," replied Allayne.

She was brave, but not foolhardy. Until the man's footsteps sounded as he moved away from the door, she stood stock still, hardly daring to breathe. Then, when he had definitely gone, she turned back toward the two figures upon the floor.

Suddenly the thought came to her that Halsey might be alive. Until this moment it had never occurred to her that the man might live. Now, forgetting what he was, what he had planned to do, she bent over him. But there had never been a chance. The round hole in Halsey's forehead told the veriest layman—or woman—that death had been practically instantaneous.

A movement of Rosa's arm made Allayne turn. The woman's eyes were open now. As Allayne stared at her she struggled to her knees. Comprehension dawned in her black eyes. Her mouth opened. But before she could scream Allayne was kneeling beside her. One hand gripped Rosa's shoulders, and the other pressed against the woman's lips.

"Don't," she commanded.

Rosa's eyes widened. The pupils, Allayne noted, were distended. Hysteria was only a hair's breadth away; and with hysteria would come the Inn employés, knocking, pounding, smashing against the door. Her fingers gripped tightly into Rosa's shoulder, until the pressure made the woman move uneasily.

"You hurt me," she said.

PLAYING SAFE

"Why, yes," he answered. "I've tested it over a gold brick."

"Then maybe it's in the bank," said Claire.

He stared at her uncomprehendingly, then frowned.

"I'm not joking," said he.

"Neither am I," said Claire. "We're sitting on the roof of a bank. Don't you remember the sign?"

He slapped his thigh. "By jiminy, I hadn't thought of that."

And then to Claire's dismay he strode across to where she was sitting, poised himself on the edge of the roof, and took a clean dive into the turbid waters.

But Claire was no longer alarmed. Looking over the edge, she saw him rise and reach a window in a stroke or two. Then he turned his dripping face upward. "Hand me down that stone," said he.

Claire obeyed. Stephen smashed a pane of glass, reached inside, removed a window stick, then raised the sash and crawled over the sill, which was just awash. Claire could hear a sloshing about beneath her. A few moments later Stephen's head and shoulders reappeared. He held in his hand a canvas shot bag which appeared to be about half full, and, standing on the sill, he handed this up to her.

"They don't believe in safes down here," said he. "This was tucked away up under a roof beam. I set the valise down smack over it. I may be a good inventor, but about most other things I'm a darn fool. If it hadn't been for you I'd have come back here and wasted weeks paddling around in a scow."

He slipped back into the muddy water, swam around to the rear, and got aboard. Together they opened the sack and found it to contain four hundred and fifty dollars in twenty dollar gold pieces.

"This darky banker was getting ready to loan a little money on the crop," said Stephen. "We'll find out about him when we land and see that he gets it. Meanwhile we might negotiate a little loan ourselves."

They looked at each other and burst into a gust of laughter.

"I begin to understand," said Claire, "why you kept it chained to you. It seems to me you've got a fortune in that bag."

"I hope so," Stephen answered. "My object is to locate big gold shipments on vessels mined or torpedoed. The government has been sufficiently interested to put a chaser at my disposal for the next three months. I doubt if my invention would work on land except in the case of buried treasure where the gold was in considerable volume and near the surface. A mere lode or vein would scarcely get enough reaction."

"All the same you ought to try," said Claire.

"I intend to, of course. A rich surface vein would ring the bell, I think. There's a lot of prospecting ahead and I've got a considerable grub stake, thanks to your godfather, but—I need a partner."

He turned his head slowly and his hazel eyes looked steadily into her gray ones, and again the wave of color spread over the faces of both. Then Stephen looked down at her left hand, which was devoid of any ornament.

"Has anybody a prior claim?" he asked.

Claire shook her head. Stephen possessed himself of the unadorned hand and raised it to his lips. "Not long ago you practically acknowledged a claim on my part," said he. "I don't intend to press that, because what I did was distinctly in the line of duty, so if you prefer I'll waive it. Do you?"

Again Claire shook her head. She turned, and as he looked into her eyes Stephen wondered how he could ever have found them hard and hostile.

"Two years ago," said Stephen, "I begged a picture of you from Mr. Lothrop. It has been my shrine ever since. He knew of this, but I asked him to keep it secret until I might have something to offer. He thoroughly approved, and no doubt it was on that account he was so furious at learning of your engagement."

Claire's eyes widened. "You knew about that?" she asked.

"Yes," said Stephen, still holding the unresisting hand. "I asked the lawyers why your name had not been read, and they told me. I fully intended to regulate that score. But as it turns out I seem to be asking instead of giving."

He raised her hand again to his lips. Claire, scarcely able to breathe, turned and stared at the distant shore. "There are some men running down the jetty and getting into a boat," said she.

"Never mind the men," said Stephen. "How about this partnership which I propose? Do you accept or do you refuse?"

Claire turned slowly and looked at him, her face slanted upward and a stricken expression in her eyes. "What sort of partner?" she murmured.

"There's only one sort. A gold ring on this pretty finger and a light, invisible chain which nothing can break fastened to that and to my heart. You're not going to refuse."

Claire gave a little sob. "After all that's happened I don't see how I could refuse you anything. But—but, I haven't a thing in the world," and added with a gurgling laugh, "I haven't even any clothes."

"You've got yourself," said Stephen. "You've got courage and sweetness and beauty. It's up to me to supply the rest."

He drew the hand toward him, and with it the arm and then the girl. His arms went round her and hers slipped up over his shoulders. Their faces were crushed together ecstatically. Then Claire freed herself and looked over his shoulder.

"We mustn't," said she. "Here comes the boat."

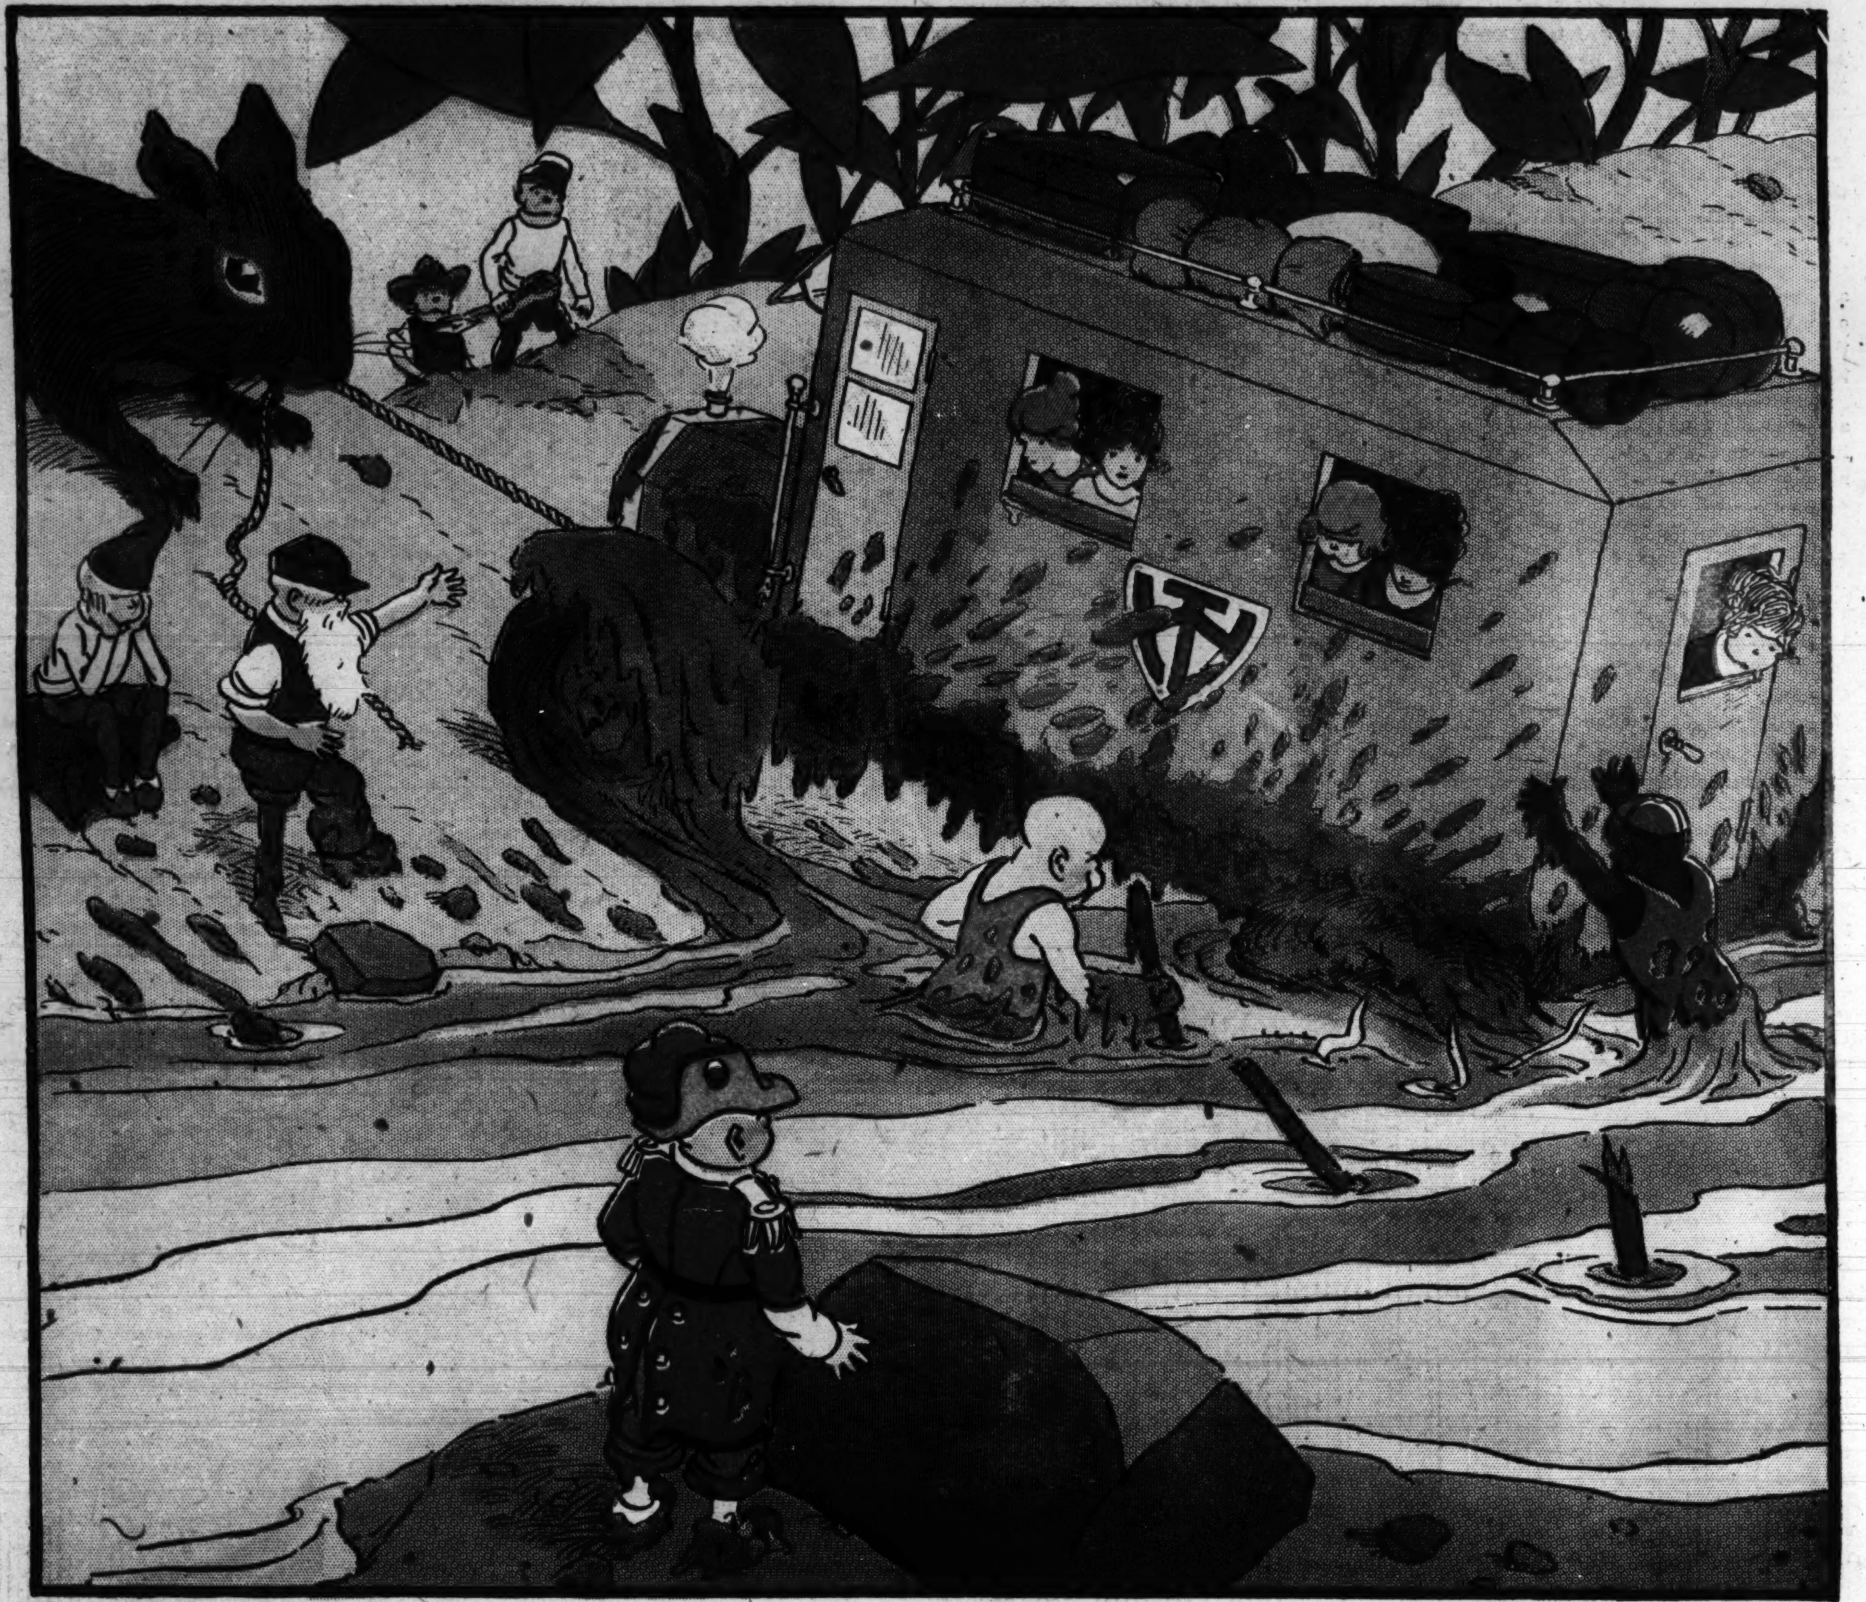
THE TEENIE WEENIES.

EVEN TEENIE WEENIE TRUCKS HAVE TO BE PULLED OUT OF THE MUD.

BY WM. DONAHEY.



THE two tiny trucks, which had been built by the Turk and Paddy Pinn, fairly flew over the road, and the Teenie Weenies all enjoyed themselves as they rolled along.

Paddy Pinn drove one of the trucks while the Turk steered the other, and both of the little engines purred beautifully in spite of the fact that they were heavily loaded with Teenie Weenies, tents, pots, kettles, and all the other necessary things that campers find useful.

The Teenie Weenies were on an auto tour, and the first day on the road they traveled seventy-six Teenie Weenie miles.

They stopped near a small creek for the first night, and under the shelter of a huge blackberry bush they pitched their tiny tents, built a fire for the Cook, who put up his big iron kettle, and in a short time two beans were boiling merrily.

When the beans were done, the little folks formed in line, and, passing by the Cook, each Teenie Weenie was supplied with a slice of bean, a chunk of bread, a cup of cocoa, and a large spoonful of stewed raisin.

The little people sat on sticks about the fire and ate their supper, while the sleepy birds chirped in the bushes overhead.

After the little folks had eaten, they sat around the fire and told stories, sang songs, and talked until a late hour.

One of the trucks was fixed up for the ladies, as they were afraid of ants and would not sleep in tents, but the little men all slept in tents, except those who took turns guarding the tiny camp.

The little campers were up bright and early the next morning, and after a delightful breakfast of corn mush and milk they once more set out on their way.

"I think we're going to have a storm," said the Old Soldier, who sat on the driver's seat with Paddy Pinn and the General. "Those clouds don't look like clear weather to me."

The Old Soldier was a mighty good weather prophet, and when the clouds began to roll up in great black masses the General ordered the trucks to stop under the shelter of an old dry goods box, which lay near the road.

The little trucks had no sooner run under the box than the rain began to fall, and for almost an hour and a half the water came down by the cupful.

When the rain had stopped, the little trucks once more took to the highway, and, as the road was cement, they rolled along with ease, but soon the cement ended, and then trouble began, for the road was now clay and the mud was fully an inch and a half deep.

In some places there were great ruts, and once or twice the tiny trucks nearly stuck in the mud.

"It's pretty hard going, that's what it is," said Paddy Pinn, who was driving the leading truck. "I think we'd better find a good camping place and stop for the rest of the day."

"All right," answered the General. "We'll stop at the first good looking camping place we come to."

It was a long time before the little folks found a good camping place, for the tiny truck stuck in the mud as it was trying to cross a deep rut.

The Teenie Weenies worked for a long time trying to get out, but every time they tried to get out the wheels seemed to sink deeper into the sticky clay.

They stuffed grass and weeds under the wheels, they pulled, they shouted, they suggested, and some of the little men put on their bathing suits and tried to pry the wheels out.

"Couldn't we get a chicken to pull us out?" suggested the Dunce. "I'll go back and ask that hen we passed on the road a little while ago."

"Hello, strangers! In trouble?" asked a big squirrel as he jumped off a fence near the road and hopped over to the excited Teenie Weenies.

"Yes, sir; we are," answered the General, lifting his hat. "Could you be kind enough to give us a lift? We have been working here for nearly four hours trying to get out of this mud."

"Sure," said the squirrel. "Tie a rope to the front end of the truck, and I'll pull you out before you can say hippopotamus."

In a few minutes the Policeman tied one end of a rope to the truck and carried the other end up the side of the rut where the squirrel stood.

"Now just get out of my way so I can switch my tail without knockin' anybody down, and I'll pull this truck out in a jiffy," said the squirrel, taking the end of the rope in his mouth.

Paddy Pinn started the engine, and the squirrel, bracing his feet, gave a mighty pull, and the truck fairly flew out of the muddy hole.

After the squirrel had been given four peanuts for his work, the little trucks chugged along until they found a fair camping place, where they stopped for the night.

The BOGIE of FEAR by Arthur Somers Roche

ILLUSTRATED BY MAUDE MARTIN ELLIS

THE STORY.

ALLAYNE GUERNSEY has inherited the Guernsey millions and an inborn dread of scandal. Her besetting fear of being talked about leads her, at twenty-four, to magnify a trivial quarrel with

SPENSER BOURKE, her fiancé, break the engagement, and rush into a heedless marriage with

BENNETT HALSEY, a smooth crook who is at the end of his resources and needs Allayne's money. At the start of their honeymoon the couple are intercepted by a woman known as ROSA HALSEY, who has been the crook's companion in crime. Allayne's suspicions are quickly aroused, and before their journey is fairly started she tells Halsey she is through with him. The train on which they are passengers is wrecked, and Halsey, in despair at the failure of his scheme, conceives the idea of "playing dead" by exchanging papers with one of the wreck victims. Allayne has been carried from the wreck by Spenser Bourke; their romance is renewed, and, supposing Halsey to be dead, they are married, and find themselves supremely happy. Then Halsey, who has been traveling about with Rosa, reappears in the rôle of blackmailer. Allayne is panic-stricken, for she has put all her money into Bourke's business, and when Halsey commands her to join him at a roadhouse she obeys without question. The crook has had a heart attack, knows himself to be at the point of death, and has turned his thoughts to revenge. At his hotel he gets Rosa out of the way by sending her out for medicine. At the roadhouse he writes a note to the chief of police, and when Allayne comes he draws a revolver and locks the door of the room he has engaged.

And then, sharply, barely audible above the thunder, Rosa's pistol spoke.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT.

At the Inn.

SHORTLY after Halsey left their rooms Rosa returned to them. Gently she opened the door of their living room. She stood still, lest perchance she disturb the invalid, who might be sleeping. Cautiously she removed her hat and coat, and tiptoed, carrying the bottle filled at the drug-store, to the door of the room where she supposed Halsey to be lying. Not hearing a sound, even the breathing of a sleeping man, she entered. her swarthy skin white with fear.

A moment later, frightened, she had summoned the chambermaid. Had Mr. "Carver"—the name under which they were traveling—gone out? The chambermaid didn't know. She hadn't seen the gentleman.

But, as Rosa had seen, his hat and coat were gone! It was incredible. The exertion of walking to the elevator might kill him. Frantic, she ran to the elevator; from its operator she learned that Halsey had descended half an hour or so ago. From the clerk at the desk she found out that Halsey had passed through the street door. She inquired of a shabby porter outside, to learn that a man answering to her description of Halsey had entered a taxicab some little while before, and the porter had heard him ask to be driven to the Cresthill Inn.

"Where is that?" demanded Rosa.

The man told her. "Sort of a roadhouse, ma'am," he added.

Slowly, bewildered, Rosa went back to their rooms. She sat down, studying the situation. And slowly a terrible anger began to possess her. Bennett Halsey was no fool. He'd undergone too many heart attacks to have any illusions about his safety. He knew that he was in the very shadow of death. He was not anxious to die. Rosa knew the heart of him. She knew that he was a coward, that he shuddered at thought of death. It was not for his virtues that she loved Halsey. It was for no particular reason; it was because she couldn't help it.

Then what, she asked herself, had caused Halsey to risk the advancement, in time, of the death he dreaded? It couldn't have been business. True, Halsey did not keep Rosa informed as to the details of his illegalities, but she knew perfectly well that, in his present condition, a million dollars would not have tempted him to leave the room, much less the hotel.

But she knew what would make him take risks. A woman! She thought that she knew Halsey as well as mortal ever had known mortal. And, knowing him, she was certain that she guessed the reason for his absence.

The getting rid of her on a specious excuse; the hasty departure; the place to which he went—a roadhouse! It was for this that she had been ever faithful to him, loyal, had dragged out terror-filled years of sacrifice; so that at the last she might be deserted for another woman.

Before this desertion all other treacheries became little things. She had forgiven them, even if she had not forgotten. But these last few moments of his life belonged to her. To rob her of them meant to slap her face, to jeer at her devotion, to tell her, in so many words, that she had been a fool, used as fools are used, only when necessity of convenience compels.

He would not leave her even a memory. God knew that it would be a sad enough memory at best, a memory of lies, of deceit that had bruised her soul. But—it would have been something. Now—there would be nothing.

Before her eyes ran a picture of the past. Always she had given, never taken. Time and again she had sworn to leave him, yet had been unable to do so. She did not respect him; she despised him. Yet he had so satisfied something in her that always she had remained, had suffered, had endured.

She had asked nothing save a little kindness, a little affection. To gain these occasionally she had given everything. She had no high code of morals. That Halsey was a criminal, a thief, had never weighed against him. She did not realize that philosophers might consider that she was reaping the reward of her own venality. She only realized that she was a woman and that her man had, at the very end, betrayed her.

For that her logic was wrong never entered her head. She knew him too well. And so the crossed strains in her—she was Latin and Slav combined—began to throw off the restraints that society imposes. This was the final offense. For another woman he dared death. Very well. He would dare death in another fashion that he dreaded.

She left the rooms and descended to the street. The hotel was in a cheap neighborhood, and on her way to the drug store Rosa had passed a pawnshop. Her association with Halsey had made her familiar with such places, and this one she entered confidently. Though she raged inwardly, outwardly she was calm, cool, collected. Like the volcano that is a blazing furnace underneath, and is calm and placid above, was Rosa.

It was against the law, the pawnbroker told her, to sell revolvers. Rosa laughed at him.

"And if you never broke the law, Ikey," she said, "you'd starve to death. I want a good gat."

Her slangy utterance and easy manner impressed the man. He was quick to size up his customers. It was essential that he should be. Dealing as he did, in transactions outside the law, his liberty depended upon his ability to tell the difference between a genuine criminal and a detective who was trying to trap him.

"What do you want it for?" he asked.

Rosa smiled. She opened her purse and took out fifty dollars.

"That's what I want it for," she replied.

The pawnbroker shrugged. His question had been perfunctory, unnecessary. If this woman committed crime with the weapon which he would sell her, it would be no affair of his. Moreover, he would deny, in the unlikely event of his sale being suspected, ever having seen the woman, ever having sold a revolver to any one. The law was the law, but a forty-dollar profit was a forty-dollar profit.

But he didn't make quite that much. Rosa knew what she wanted. She rejected the first weapon shown her and selected another, a stocky-barreled affair that had cost the pawnbroker, if one included interest on the loan, something like seventeen dollars. Still, Rome wasn't built in a day, and pawnbrokers can't become wealthy overnight. Little drops of water make the mighty ocean; little three hundred per cent deals make a man successful and a respectable and envied member of society.

Rosa concealed the weapon in her handbag. It fitted as easily into the receptacle as her vanity case and her purse. No one would ever dream that this quietly clad woman carried a lethal weapon. Yet the pawnbroker, watching the sinuous, animal-like glide of her, and having a recollection of her hot eyes, felt a slight shiver run down his spine. Still, business was business. Anyway, she probably wanted it for protection against burglars. His sleep wasn't disturbed that night.

Half a block from the pawnshop Rosa lifted a well-gloved hand. A taxi veered in to the curb and she entered it.

"Cresthill Inn," she told the driver.

Ten minutes later the front tire blew out. The man descended from the driver's seat. It had begun to rain, and Rosa heard him muttering defamatory remarks about his luck. It was evidently bad, for the fresh tire which, after ten minutes he had managed to put on the wheel, collapsed for lack of air. And he had no pump.

He opened the door of the cab. "Lady," he said, "I'm sorry, but I can't take you no farther. I'll cut that new tire all to pieces if I drive on it. It's only a minute's walk to Cresthill."

It was raining steadily. Occasional smashes of thunder shook the air, and flashes of lightning illumined the suddenly darkened landscape. The Latin still believes in the Evil Eye; the Russ is a mystic, believing in powers of evil that are personal. Rosa, product of these two races, had her full share of superstitious fears. In her heart of hearts she never believed that a thunderstorm was a thing of Nature; she believed it something supernatural. She was one of those women who hide in closets, with the door tightly shut, when the electricity begins to play around the heavens.

But today fear left her. She had more than her fair share of vanity, too, and ordinarily the thought of muddied shoes and wet clothing would have appalled her. But not today. She paid the man and descended from the cab. He pointed along the road.

"Only a hundred yards, ma'am," he said. "You see that driveway? Right up there. Sorry, ma'am."

Rosa nodded. She bent her head before the rain, now driven by almost a gale, and started toward the Inn. She splashed through puddles, unaware of them. The rain beat against her veil, sent her hat askew, made her black hair cling stringily to her cheeks. She was unconscious of it all. Gripping her handbag tightly, pressing it against her bosom, she came to the driveway.

Fifty yards away, perched slightly above the level of the main road, stood the Inn. From the seclusion of a clump of bushes Rosa surveyed the place. Somewhere within its walls was Halsey—with another woman. The thought made her writhe, physically as well as mentally. She pressed the handbag tighter to her, until the hard bulk of the automatic pistol inside hurt her flesh.

The slight pain tended to steady her nerves. Up to now she had had no definite plan of action, but now she felt that any hasty, impulsive action might prevent her from doing that which she had set out to do.

To burst, wet, disheveled, into the Inn, meant, she believed, to arouse instant curiosity. If Halsey were lunching in a public room, her entrance might give him warning. If he should, by any chance, see her coming up the driveway . . . . .

Ahead of her, ten yards away, was a huge tree that gave better promise of secrecy. She sped across the lawn and stood behind it. Now, closer to the building, she noticed that a balcony ran around the second floor, reached by outside steps. If she could ascend them . . . . .

Her brain, obsessed with her desires, was functioning more clearly than it had on the ride out here, but it was not normal. Had it been so, she would have realised that the rain and wind had so changed her from a quietly dressed woman who could pass as a lady to a blowsy, bedraggled woman who might be anything at all; that, unless Halsey came face to face with her, there was no danger of recognition

Had she been able to think clearly, she

THE WORLD'S MOST POWERFUL BATTLESHIP—The new U. S. S. Maryland, which will put to sea late this fall, carries eight 16-inch guns, the largest ever mounted on a naval fighting unit. Each of the guns fires a shell weighing 2,100 pounds for a distance of more than 20 miles. The Maryland is the latest achievement of naval architects, and is electrically equipped throughout. The generating unit, which drives the ship at 21 knots, would supply enough electric power for a city of 100,000 population.

DESTROYERS AT PLAY—An unusual aerial photograph, showing maneuvers of the little "watchdogs of the navy" on the southern drill grounds of the Pacific fleet off San Diego, Cal. This particular maneuver was executed while the destroyers were moving at full speed. Note the sharply defined wakes and the close shave between two vessels at the right, which would appear to have almost collided.

Dependable as a Watchdog

Twenty-five per cent more Holland Furnaces were sold during April, May and June of this year than for the same period in any previous year in the history of our business.

THE HOLLAND
NO. 45
HOLLAND FURNACE CO.
HOLLAND, MICH.
DRAFT
PAT'D JAN 9 1917

THE mere fact that this company can make such a startling business report is of the greatest significance to every man who owns a home.

For times like these point out and emphasize the dependable values; and a growing public demand for any product today unerringly indicates an acknowledged superior worth. People are discriminating in favor of dependability and economy, as against mere claims and fine-sounding promises.

In buying a furnace the careful home owner is more than ever before exercising his right to be positively sure that when his heating system is installed it will give dependable, long-lived service—and that he has made an investment which will make his house more valuable to live in, to rent, or to sell.

In less than fifteen years, starting with a superior product and an idea of service that definitely guaranteed continuous satisfaction to every owner, the Holland Furnace Company has grown to be the largest installer of furnaces in the world.

And now, in just the section in which the readers of the Tribune reside, there are over 170,000 Holland owners who will tell you the two great reasons why

HOLLAND FURNACES

Make Warm Friends—two reasons that explain the immense volume of Holland business, and its steady increase regardless of seasons or general business conditions.

First, as already stated—a superior product, which includes scientific design, better materials and the most careful and experienced workmanship, at an honest price.

Second, the Holland Idea of Installation and Service, which leaves nothing to guesswork or incompetent men in placing the Holland into your home.

For when you buy a Holland Furnace it is first carefully planned to fit the exact conditions of your house, and then it is expertly installed by our own trained workmen.

All Holland men in our hundreds of Holland Branches are employed by this company, on full time, to do nothing but install Holland Furnaces and give Holland Service.

Holland Furnaces are not sold through dealers or installed as a side-line by tinsmiths. Only a trained heating expert can competently determine the best place for setting the furnace, insure the proper draft, gauge the correct pitch and size of pipes, the scientific location of warm and cold air registers, and all the details necessary to the continuous circulation and even distribution of warm, moist air to every room where heat is desired.

Holland not only saves you time, materials, and the waste of incompetent workmen, but a Holland Furnace thus installed will heat your home with less fuel, and it burns either hard or soft coal with highest efficiency and cleanliness.

Holland owners enjoy the comfort of correct, healthful heating and are free from annoyance in the easy operation of their heating plants.

Because Holland Furnaces are as dependable as a watchdog, they

MAKE WARM FRIENDS

The startling record of Holland sales is a most convincing demonstration that good quality, good service and right prices make a combination that wins success even when business conditions are most unfavorable.

As building is now becoming more active, we look forward to even a greater increase as the months go by.

If you are building or planning a new home, or improving one already built, it will pay you to consult the Holland Man in your locality now.

Every year during the fall rush we are forced to disappoint many customers. At most, it will be only a few months until the fall storms are again upon us. Why not be prepared?

If you like, you can order now and start your payments on September 1st, after your furnace is installed and all ready for guaranteed satisfactory service.

Holland products include all types of warm air heating systems, as well as combination hot water and warm air. Therefore, our recommendations are entirely without prejudice. We advise the style that best suits your home for comfortable and economical heating. We have over two hundred Holland branches in the territory covered by this newspaper. One is located near you.

Surely it is not unwise to talk over your heating requirements with a competent, experienced heating man. Telephone the Holland Branch Manager today.

HARRIETT HAMMOND has had most of her success with Sennett. Recently, however, R-C Pictures corp. thought they discovered in her a gem of great value and she has been selected to play leads.

We will await with interest to see whether or not this beautiful lady in the beautiful gown with the real hand embroidery on it makes good. Mae Tinee.

MAY McAVOY, whom you have just seen in her first starring venture, "A Private Scandal," produced by Realart, is shown here in a scene taken from that same picture.

Personally I think she is a lovely thing to look at; I think the photograph an intriguing one, and I also think you'd like to have a reproduction of it. Here it is. Y'wekkum! Mae Tinee.

BETTY CARPENTER is the busy young woman you will see with Johnny Hines in his Torchy comedy, "Burn 'Em Up, Barnes." She hasn't been in pictures long; her name even isn't in the motion picture directory and I never heard anybody say that she was either dead or married—so you see she's not become famous yet. Just the same, from her picture she would appear to have brains as well as beauty, and so I hand it to you for your albums. Mae Tinee.

CONSTANCE BINNEY is to be seen in the screen adaptation of Elsie Ferguson's stage success, "Such a Little Queen." This picture, which I think is a perfectly darling one, shows her in the royal regalia. Look at the pearls and diamonds and rubies and everything embroidered all over her!

She looks "such a little queen," every inch of her—doesn't she? Mae Tinee.

A GERMAN PROTEST—This massmeeting, held in the shadow of the great Berlin cathedral, was called to demand the return of the German prisoners of war still held in the penitentiary of Avignon, France. Several other meetings of protest against the holding of Germans in French prisons and camps have been held recently in various parts of Germany.

THIS SMALL RIVETING GUN was used in New York the other day to demonstrate the operating principle of its proposed giant counterpart, which the inventor, John Temple, says will shoot a five-ton projectile 300 miles. Such an unheard-of super-cannon, in the opinion of ordnance experts, "would make war too terrible for nations to engage in it." The little riveting gun is smokeless and almost noiseless, and actually fires steel slugs into steel plates. The plate in the photograph is three-quarters of an inch thick.

IF YOU CAN'T GO BATHING, THE BATH WILL COME TO YOU—provided you live in that favored section of New York's lower east side where, by order of a mayor's committee, shower baths have been erected in the center of the city streets. The blocks in which the showers are located have been closed to traffic and set aside for the exclusive use of children who cannot afford to pay the price of a bath house.

Remove Unsightly Corns

Hard or Soft—Big or Little—Old or New

An unsightly corn or callous on the bare foot of a bathing girl is an inexcusable disfigurement. Whoever reveals such a blemish or endures, for even five minutes, an aching corn or tender callous has only herself to blame.

Never was pain stopped so quickly as soreness in a corn is banished by "GETS-IT." Just as cold water instantly quenches thirst, so does two or three drops of "GETS-IT" bring to the tenderest corn complete relief and then makes that relief permanent by peeling the corn off—in one piece, root and all. Costs but a trifle—everywhere.

Why The Chicago Tribune has the Largest Morning Daily Circulation in America

JOSEPH PIERSON has spent more than ten years on The Chicago Tribune. In the early days of the war he conceived the idea of publishing a newspaper in Paris for the benefit of the American soldiers. Not many hours later he was on his way to Paris to establish The European Edition of The Chicago Tribune, of which he was the first editor. He returned to become cable editor of The Tribune.

By wireless or cable, he assigns The Tribune correspondents to the news in their territories, and the messages come back, sometimes by courier, on horse or mule or in a sedan chair, to the nearest telegraph, cable or wireless station, so that the stories may reach the readers of The Tribune in the shortest time humanly possible and before any other newspaper, anywhere, has them.

PHIL KINSLEY belongs to that roaming group of newspaper men who follow the big news wherever it breaks. He may reach the edges of the arctic in winter, or may find himself, when it's 90 in the shade at home, beating down toward the scorching equator. On one coast this week, he may be hurriedly sent to another next week. From the drawing room of the President of the United States he may go, as fast as train and ship and mule will take him, to some hot, dark mud hut of a savage tribesman in the Philippines.

And Phil is a home-loving individual, too, with a wife and three children and a pleasant little place in Evanston. He's glad, occasionally, when the world quiets down. But always he is ready, on less than an hour's notice, with a couple of bags that may accompany him to any corner of the earth where the news is breaking.

Newspapers in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Vancouver, Salt Lake, Denver, Kansas City, Little Rock, Fort Worth, Houston, Omaha, Minneapolis, Nashville, Memphis, Louisville, Rochester, New York, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Toronto and Montreal maintain leased wires into The Tribune office in order to secure Tribune exclusive news. All these newspapers have the services of great press associations, but they pay operators' salaries, rental of wires and fees to The Tribune amounting to thousands of dollars per year for the privilege of sharing in the scoops achieved by Tribune staff correspondents. In fact, Tribune reporters stationed all over the globe are now covering world events so thoroughly that even European newspapers are buying news of Europe from The Chicago Tribune. Again and again Chicago Tribune reporters scooped the press of European capitals on news events occurring in those capitals. The Foreign News Service of The Chicago Tribune has no peer.

HENRY WALES is the Paris correspondent of The Tribune. During the peace conference, when open covenants were arrived at behind a flock of locked doors, Wales proved, by the number of scoops he scored, to be one of the greatest reporters in Europe. Paris newspapers often found the need of quoting The Chicago Tribune in order to give their readers the latest news of the frenzied statesmanship operating in their own marble halls. And, like Steele in London, he varies his heavy news cables with lighter stories of the boulevards and the always interesting night life of Paris.

JOHN STEELE has charge of the London bureau of The Chicago Tribune. He is an American who has spent many years in the British capital as correspondent and writer. Every phase of the political situation is known to him, and he has the confidence and the respect of the British statesmen who are making history. There is scarcely a day that The Tribune does not carry a signed story by John Steele. Whether it originates in the office of the prime minister or in the drawing room of a frivolous duchess, it is certain to be interesting, authentic and informative.

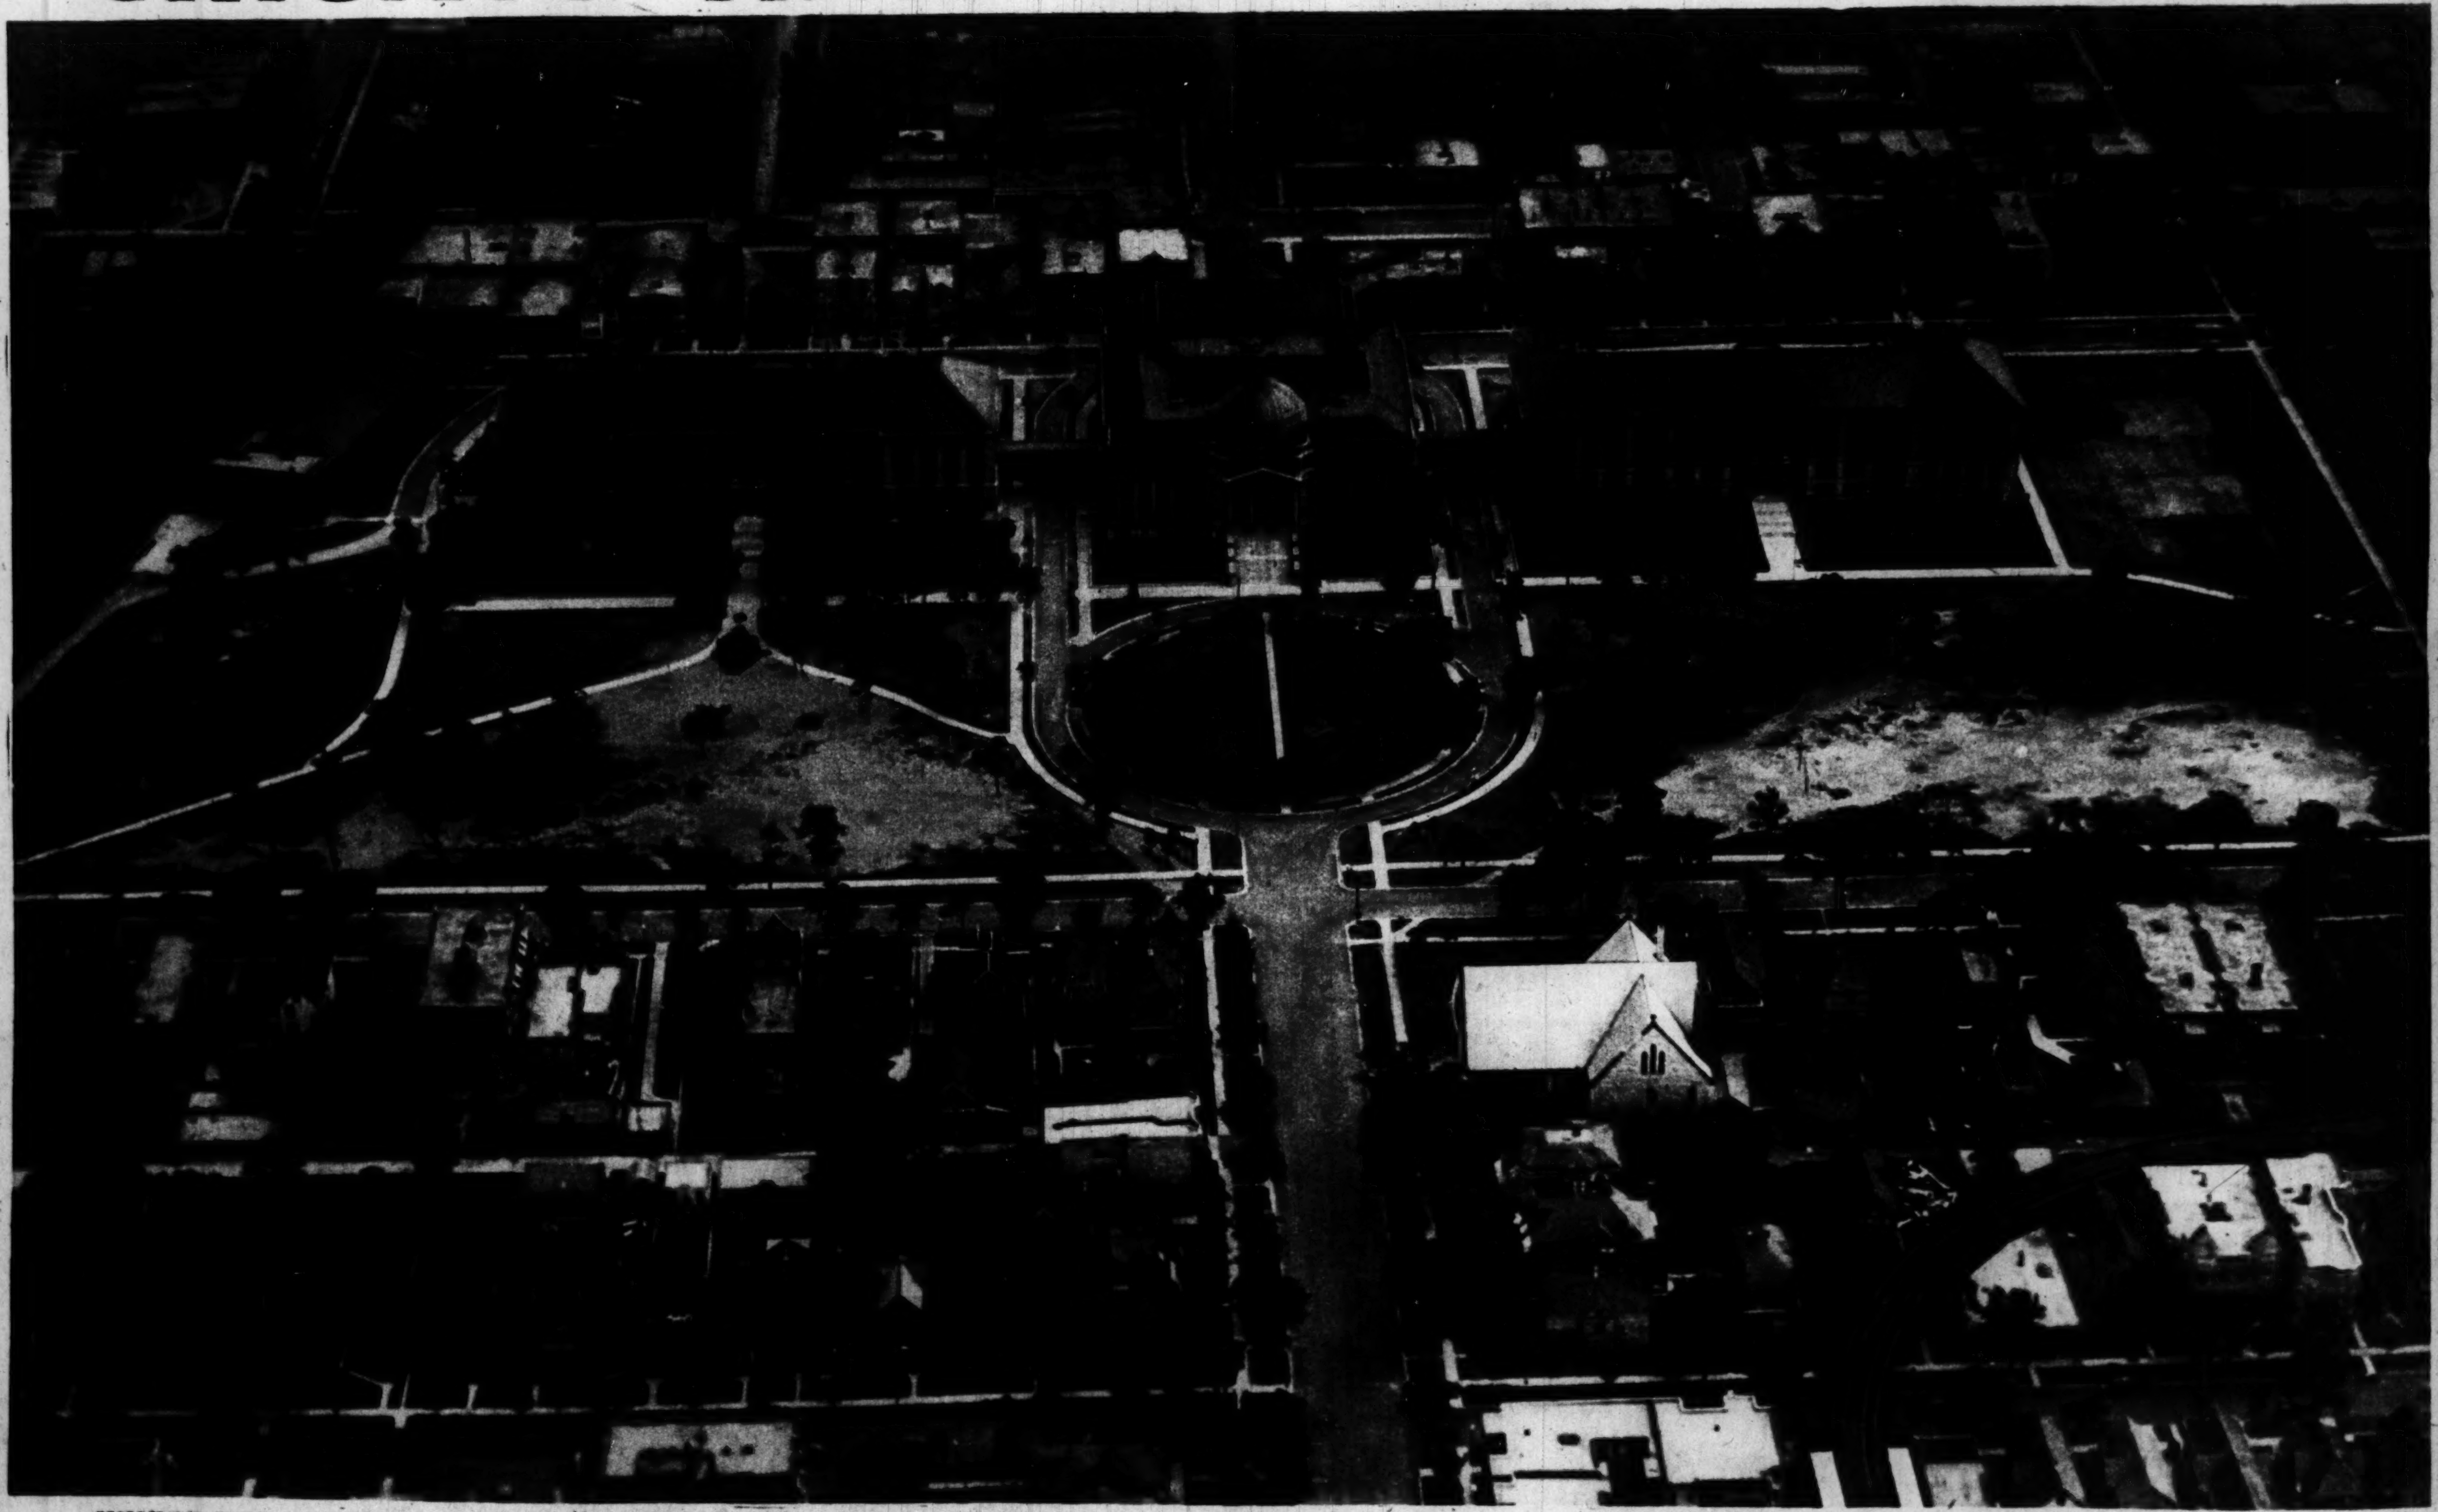
THE CHICAGO NORMAL COLLEGE



WHERE THEY TEACH TEACHERS TO TEACH—The spacious grounds of the Chicago Normal college lie between Sixty-seventh and Sixty-ninth streets, on the south side. Stewart avenue runs vertically through the center of the picture, which was taken as the camera man faced south, and cutting through diagonally, at the left are the tracks of the Rock Island railroad. The curved tracks in the lower right hand corner are those of the Normal Park branch of the South Side elevated.

A MODERN "WOMAN WHO LIVED IN A SHOE"—Mrs. Lillian Moller Gilbreth of Montclair, N. In addition to being the mother of ten sons and daughters she is a doctor of philosophy (having received the degree when her fifth child was a baby), is listed in "Who's Who" as an industrial psychologist, and has just been awarded an honorary membership in the Society of Industrial Engineers for her contributions to the literature of scientific management. The photograph shows her with her family—which, it might be mentioned parenthetically, includes her husband, Frank B. Gilbreth, a consulting engineer of international reputation.

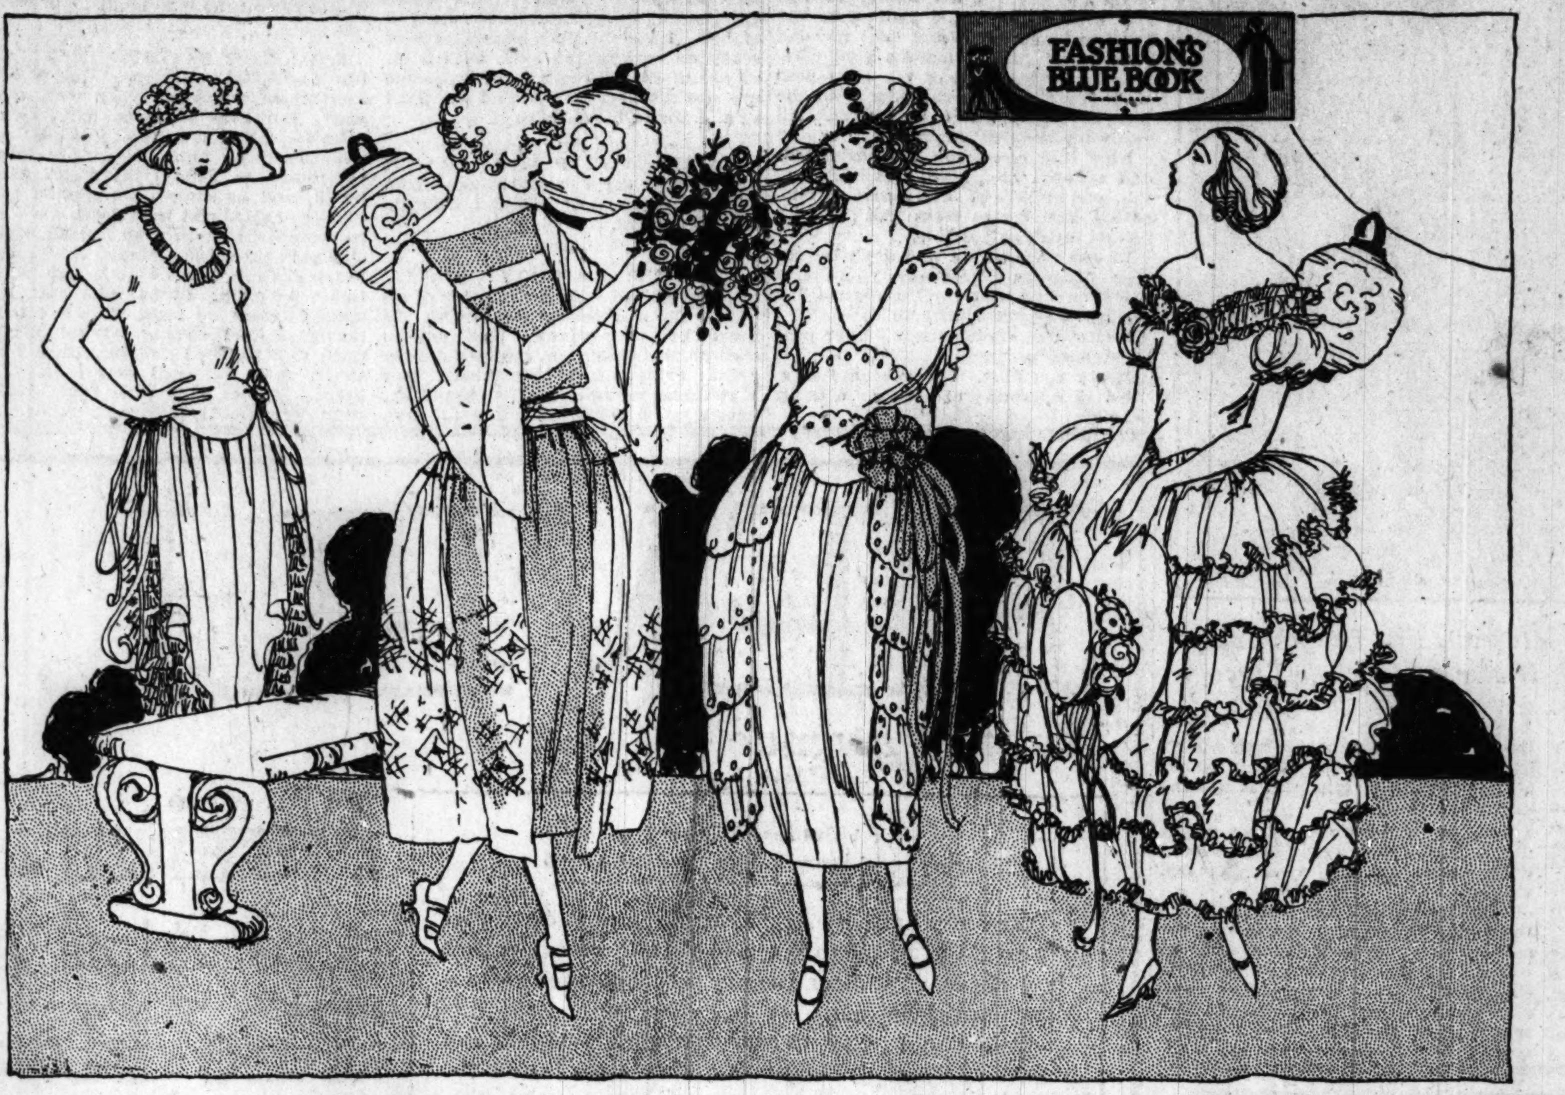
Fashions Beauty Contests

FOR THE MIDSUMMER GARDEN PARTY

by CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.



WHO would dream that she at the right is waiting, not for the stage coach, but for the limousine. For in every detail this representative frock of the summer of 1921 echoes the dress lore of our grandmothers. It is carried out in white organdy with hat to match, and its only touch of color is found in the ashes of roses flower at the sloping shoulder line. Next, a frock of mauve muslin embroidered in silver and set off with cocarde of purple moire ribbon indicates not only the modishness of simplicity but of moire. Third, a gray organdy embroidered in colored beads shows you the new wide sleeves—also much of its blue satin foundation. Last, one of the ubiquitous white crepe de chines with hat to match.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—I myself think the very fresh young freshman was justified. The other day he was the guest at a country club in one of the most exclusive sections of Massachusetts, and he was introduced to a girl in a red flannel coat, a red and white striped flannel skirt, and a red felt hat. "I say," said he pleasantly, "which hole are you marking?"

The fact of it is that, thanks to the uprising of the reds, every country club nowadays is dotted with these human golf link flags. Women are working out their crimson destiny in all sorts of materials, and, though they themselves protest that it really isn't a bit warmer than any other shade, it is a bit hard on the onlooker. The blaze of the sun is bad enough without this blaze of the blazer, hat, and skirt.

I have just come back from a journey in which I penetrated the fashion jungles of Lenox. At the country clubs in that section of wealth and ancient lineage I made the following valuable notes:

As Hamlet is to the play so is ginghamlet to the country club play. The gingham reserves are all out and they have developed their chosen uniform in every possible way. Ginghams are in all colors, but the favored ones come logically in red and white checks. Usually the line of these frocks is straight up and down. The more you can succeed in looking curveless as a telephone pole the better your ginghamese. Long bodices prevail, and frequently they are scalloped. Sometimes a sash or girdle or belt in either self or contrasting material interpolates at the natural waistline. There are many finishes at neck and cuffs with white filet or organdy or Irish. Often hats of self material help them out.

And not only the gingham frocks, either! You positively can't keep this restive fabric on a leash. Motifs of red and white checked gingham in diamond or oblong shapes are sometimes placed on morning frocks of white organdy. Also bands of it are selected as the trimming for navy taffeta frocks.

While I was watching a love set at one country club my attention was diverted by nearby flapperish tones.

"Yes, you have to wet it every night, you know," they announced to a waiting world. "I've finally got mine so it stays in place."

In my artless fashion I supposed that she was referring to hair. Later on, however, I discovered that it was her hat which had been the subject of these permanent wave processes. The hat thus put up was a simple leghorn, untrimmed save for the mannish band of ribbon and rolling back from the face in regular Buffalo Bill fashion. These hats were widely worn—particularly by flappers—in connection with the gingham frock, the sweater and skirt, and the sleeveless one piece sports frock.

The latter costume is seen every place nowadays. It comes usually in linen or pongee, and is worn over white organdy or silk blouse. However, material is by no means arbitrary, and you can watch the sleeveless one piece sports dress in every phase of development.

In the inner arcana of Lenox sports clothes are not practiced so violently as elsewhere. Many of the girls and women who emerge from those aristocratic villas hidden from the prying eye of the tourist by acres of leafy grounds are as feminine as a Fielding heroine. They wear in the mornings exquisite, simple frocks of organdy, batiste, mull, and voile, often lace or embroidery trimmed. And even the rougher natures content themselves with skirts of white flannel or silk, accompanied by sheerest of shirtwaists in mauve, yellow, blue, or rose.

A word about some of the new blouses. At Lenox I saw a lovely one of mauve crepe de chine—an over-the-skirt model—which made use of no other trimming than faggoting. The entire blouse, sleeves and all, was composed of sections of the material joined in this manner. This employment of faggoting and the ladder stitch is coming into high favor, and I am told that the designers are bringing out many such models for the fall.

Another most attractive chiffon model, carried out in pale blue—charming in accompaniment with the white crepe de chine sports skirt—had sleeves slashed from shoulder to wrist. It is a style delightfully reminiscent of Holbein. However, the great sixteenth century portrait painter indicated a contrasting material under his sleeve strips. This is not in line with the modern thought, and the arm is not only detected but discovered through sleeves of this type. I do not mean this as criticism, for, to my mind, nothing quite so attractive in sleeve experiments has been presented for a long time. The slashed sleeve, whether long or short, is, too, a feature of many new blouses.

Miss Anne Anachronism is certainly the belle of the summer of 1921. For a leftover from one of my erudite phases leaves me under the impression that an anachronism is a juggling with dates, the installment of an historical character into an age to which he did not belong. Now, what we have done is to put the heroine of 1850 or 1860 plump down into this present time. I have talked often of these Empress Eugenie modes with their off the shoulder bodices often coming to a prim little point in front, and introducing wide skirts ruffled or garlanded. So I shall proceed immediately to a description of one of these frocks as shown at the right of the page.

The material here is white organdy, and there is no foreign trimming save the band of fine white net sloping down over the shoulders. This is edged with a fine ruffling of the material, caught at the center with a taffeta flower in the fashionable ashes of roses tint. The skirt is made up of flounces edged with the same rufflings of self-material. The hat, also of white organdy, is trimmed with flowers of the ashes of roses silk, made still more pictorial by streamers of ribbon in the same tint. With this are worn the white silk stockings and the low white kid pumps which Lenox and many of the other smart resorts have decreed as proper accompaniments of the sheer summer frock of fine material. Often these pumps have the baby French heel.

Simplicity of line! It is this summer just as it was a year ago. The fashionable of the world have become fanatics on the subject, and no matter to which of the eastern resorts you go you will find the Vere de Veres veering constantly to the most guileless of lines. It is the quality of the fabric, the small touches, and—above all—combinations of material to which the woman who would dress well must look for perfection.

The frock of mauve muslin shown second from the right brings out this creed conclusively. Nothing but scalloped sections of the dress material on both bodice and skirt are here to support the distinction of the dress. Yet, embroidered in silver thread and set off at the waist by a huge cocarde of purple ribbon, the result is one that could pass any lorgnette squad.

The tremendously wide sleeves sponsored by Jenny are a feature of midsummer dressing. They appear, often set in armholes dipping to the waist line, in blouses, frocks, and wraps. We illustrate them second from the left in a frock of gray organdy embroidered in colored beads and combined with soft blue satin. The corsage of satin is unveiled save by one narrow band of organdy. The back is plain.

Last of all comes the ubiquitous white crepe de chine costume carried out by means of a hat of this material massed with waxed white flowers and by a frock which shows many plaited ruffles of self-material combining with rose colored ribbons.

For summer wear have been devised many wraps de luxe of satin and taffeta often veiled in lace, chiffon, or georgette. They are in either coat or cape models, and their most popular color choice falls on black. However, American beauty is encountered in this realm, and so are the pastel tints.

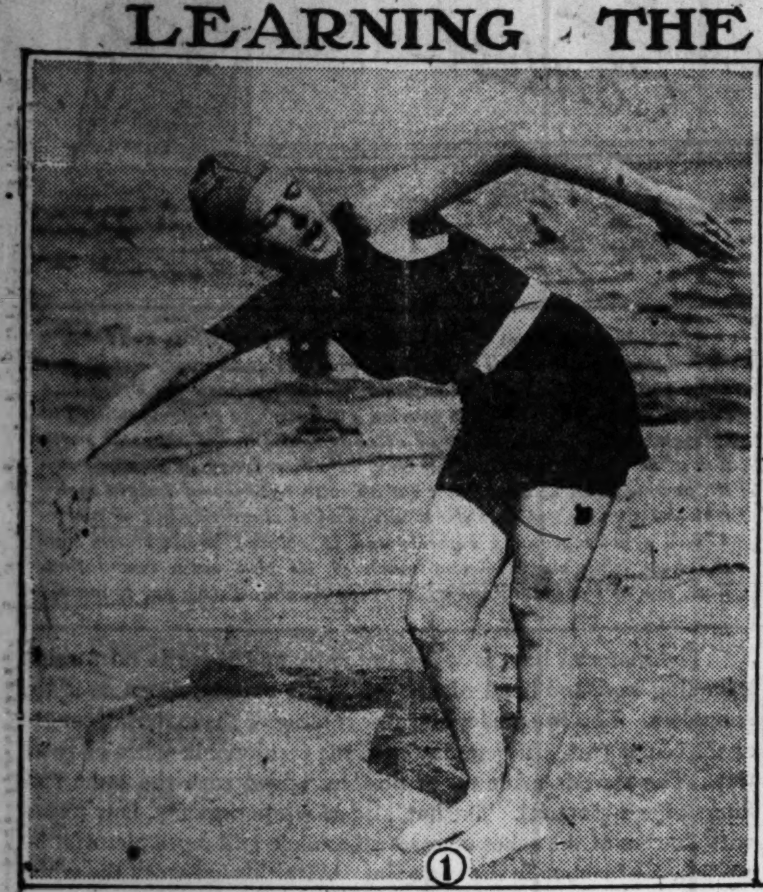
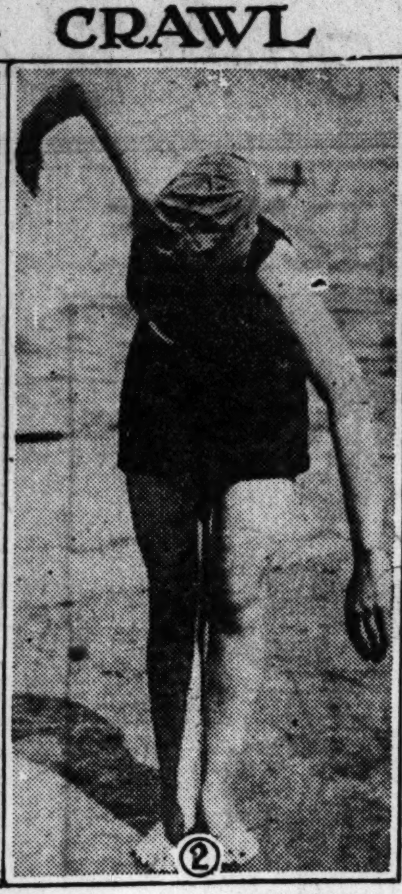
LEARNING THE CRAWL





Imitate a Two Arm Windmill, the Back Arm of Which Is Always a Full Length Behind the One in Front—Take Breath in Through Mouth Above Water, and Exhale Through Nose Under Water.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

THE crawl—not the breast stroke—has been adopted by the most up to date swimming instructors as the first stroke to learn. It has been proven that the crawl—the simplified crawl, it is called—is the most natural way of swimming; once it is learned the breast stroke comes easily, which is not as true of the crawl when the breast stroke has been learned first.

The Y. M. C. A. has worked out a method of teaching swimming by imitating swimming and floating objects and gradually working into the crawl. Through their courtesy I give it here. For beginners, therefore, I would suggest a class, which makes learning more play than work, and the combined finances of a class make the matter of an instructor's expense trivial.

If you will study carefully the following lessons, you may even work the crawl out by yourself. But it is an interesting way of presenting it, planned to get the mind off the fear of water by substituting other thoughts.

1. The hungry duck—When a duck is hungry he pokes his head under the water to look for something to eat. If he can see under water we can, too. Open the eyes after the face is under water. Don't hurry about it, hold your breath, take your time, look at your fingers. All the hungry ducks ready—go.

2. Motor boat breathing—A motor boat is an efficient breather, because it takes air in through one valve, the carburetor, and lets it out under water through the exhaust pipe. Now, just for demonstration, one of the leaders will take a good breath in through his mouth, or carburetor, above water, and let it out through his nose, or exhaust pipe, under water.

We can get enough air in through the mouth above water in one second to let out through the nose under water for twenty seconds. Now, let all the motor boats get breathing. Everybody go slow and easy. Don't blow out hard; just let the lungs relax and expel the air easily. Try it bending the knees and bobbing up and down.

Now try the same breathing turning the face to the side and holding the head partly in the water all the time. Use the nose for exhalation when at all possible, but when defect prohibits mouth can be used. Breathe ten times without stopping in free and easy way before going farther.

3. Jelly fish or lily pod—Now that we have found that the face and eyes won't shrink from washing and that we won't die if we put our faces under water, let's bob around like a jelly fish or lily pod that's broken adrift. Everybody take a deep breath and hold it put face down in the water and bring the knees up to the chest, clasping them with the arms. You'll bob like an empty jug with a cork in it. When you want to stand, let go of your knees and put your feet down, throw your head back, and push down with the hands. Remember, a jelly fish is soft so you must relax. Now, at the word go, all the jelly fish start to float. Don't stand till the whistle blows at the tenth count.

4. The mud turtle—We have proven to ourselves that the water will carry us, so we can now imitate a mud turtle floating in a pond, warming his back in the sun. See how he rests on the water; his neck is sticking out of his shell and his arms and his legs are spread out to balance him in the water. You see it carries him. It will carry you, too. But remember that to get the feet up the chin must come down to the chest. First the jelly fish position; then stretch the arms and legs out. Open your eyes and always know where you are. Come on, now, turtles, and let's sun a while.

5. The Dutch windmill—All along the canals in Holland are windmills with arms, which revolve swiftly when the wind blows. Let's imitate a two arm windmill, the back arm of which is always a full length behind the one in front, because both are on the same piece of wood. When the left arm is down the right arm is up, and vice versa.

Now all out of water. Let's paddle like a Dutch windmill. Bend over a little. Now the big wind, and fast we go.

Standing in the water just as though the windmill had been blown into the canal, let's walk making our arms go round. See if you can't help pull with the paddles. Next put the face down and paddle across with feet on bottom. Now like the sled across the surface of the water with the windmill paddles pulling across the tank. Go slow and don't worry about progress.

Next add the motor boat breathing to the windmill stroke, and you'll find it works fine. Rotate the head to the left side as the left arm goes up and inhale; let it out when the face goes down.

6. Windmill and steamboat combination—One day while the windmill was paddling along, a steamboat came along behind it and collided, and the two were stuck together. They never could get them apart again, so forever after the windmill paddled on the front end and the steam boat paddled on the back, and it made a good combination. The work of the steamboat is simply thrashing the legs from the hips up and down in the water. All ready for the combination.

Now just remember the carburetor and exhaust breathing, and add it to the windmill and steamboat combination, and try to relax like the jelly fish as much as possible.

Practice the above, and don't let unseen progress discourage you. You will soon find that our little game has resulted in your ability to swim.

Remember, confidence is 90 per cent of swimming.

Relax and float. Contract and sink.

No one learns to swim without practice.

Antoinette Donnelly's Beauty Answers.

ELOISE: IF THERE IS NO EYE-strain felt other than the natural tire after a day's work there is no need of an eye wash. I do advise, however, on the experience of one of the best eye men in the country, after the night's washup to apply a warm cloth to the closed lids and let it remain on a couple of minutes. This releases the eye muscles from the one set position they have been in and rests them greatly. In the morning, follow the face ablution by repeating the water application, using cold water, instead of hot. I have a little pamphlet now ready on care of the eyes, with a lot of useful information I got from the eye specialist before referred to. Send s. a. e. for it, if you wish it.

MARIE: FOR PERSPIRING hands bathe them in cold water. Rub with a 10 per cent solution salicylic acid in alcohol.

NERVOUS: I AM CONTINUALLY being surprised with the number of requests for a cure for nail biting. It must be nervousness that makes grownups indulge in the disfiguring habit. Pride in nails should help. But if you need something better to put on, here it is: Alcohol, 1¼ ounces; chinoidin ¼ ounce, gum mastic ¼ ounce, and gum myrrh, 1⅛ ounces. Mix, let stand forty-eight hours, shaking bottle occasionally. Apply with camel's hair brush. This can be removed with alcohol or hot water.

QUERY: COLD COLORS SHOULD be avoided by the sallow complexioned. White may be worn by a woman of any age, but the pure and blue white must be softened to creamy and pink toned whites to suit the individual.

S. B.: THE BATHING COSTUME has its little irritations. You can't keep them concealed very well, can you? But here are some good exercises for reducing ankles. First: Stand with hands on hips, raise right knee vigorously to form right angle with trunk, and at same time stretch the toes downward and backward. Do this movement snappy, so you feel the muscles pull; repeat five times; then raise left leg same way. Follow fast with this movement: Stand with feet together, hands on hips; with left foot firmly planted on the ground swing right foot forward and backward five times, then sideward and back five times. Repeat with other foot. Hold your right hand and arm stretched out straight in front, and try to kick the extended hand with the right foot, raising gradually higher and higher. Repeat with left hand extended. Do these morning and night. The hips and waist, too, will come in for some good muscular work.

MATRON: YES, IT IS THE BUSY woman who keeps the youngest. Take the mother of a large family—she invariably is mistaken for one of the girls. Take the active business and professional woman; compare her with the woman at home with little or nothing to do, and she invariably looks years younger. To keep young, you have to live life fairly strenuously. And there's so much in the world to do that no woman need be out of the job of keeping young by activity. In addition to being active, one has to eat sane foods, with plenty of fruit and bulky or green vegetables; one has to do a certain amount of whole hearted exercise daily, and one also has to know how to play and relax and rest. Prevent constipation by the right diet, and drink plenty of water. Enjoy each day. A day wasted is a day older. A day used right is lopping two days off the other end of the calendar.

(A Business Editorial)
"BUSINESS IS GREAT"

On every hand we hear that business is dead, that the world is going to rot, and that there are darker days ahead. We hear the cry so much that we unconsciously believe it.

Does it not occur to you that such thoughts and statements tend to augment rather than lessen the trouble?

Remember the silver lining, and that the clouds that are now in the sky will clear.

Think of the misfortune, misery and depression that the rest of the world is in, and then give thanks for our relative good fortune.

A smile of confidence will win where a frown of distrust will destroy.

Spread the propaganda of success—not of failure. Will such a doctrine work?

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"We have five children in our family, and expect the stork ere long. We have had an unusual lot of sickness and ill luck. I am a man 44 years old, not physically strong, and have not had employment except odd jobs and working for our rent. We are sadly in need of two beds, springs, mattresses, and bedding. Some of us are now sleeping on the floor. We have two little girls who are without shoes and stockings; their ages are 7 and 8; they wear size 11 and 12 shoes. A son, 11, who is as large as a 12 year boy, needs clothes and shoes, size 4. The gas meter has been taken out, and so we have no way of cooking except on a camp fire in the furnace pit in the basement. And we have no way of getting an oil or gasoline stove, which is so urgently needed. I have not clothes nor shoes presentable to apply for a position to better our condition. I am willing to work and pay for these things. I am 5 feet 10 inches, medium build, wear 9 or 9½ shoes. If there are any who have any of the things mentioned, and who have work to be performed, I will gladly work for same."

I shall be happy to send the name of this applicant to any one who desires to offer help.

"Today I received nine splendid records from Mrs. H. W. L. I also received several from A. E. B. a few days ago. I want, through your column, to acknowledge this great kindness. It is deeply appreciated, and the music is soothing, entertaining, and so satisfactory. If you can imagine a man who has been active all his life, but for the last four years a shut-in, you have a picture of my case. These records are surely a source of pleasure, and relieve the long, long hours. I thank these two kind, generous people with all my heart. I still have a pair of crutches, also a cane and a pair of white canvas oxfords, size 10½, which are practically new. Some one ought to have these, and I would feel happy to give them. T. S. S."

Thank you for your thoughtfulness. Your address will be given to the first applicant needing the things you offer.

"I am a girl 20 years old and on account of ill health have been obliged to quit work. The doctor orders that I take a great deal of exercise—if possible, play tennis. I live close to a park, and while tennis nets are furnished, rackets are not. As I am unable to work, I find it impossible to buy the rackets, and I wonder if som one among your readers has two rackets for which she has no further need, so that my sister and I could play tennis these lovely summer days. We would be grateful, indeed. C. D."

Your address will be gladly given to any one who writes that they can supply tennis rackets.

"I have asked so often for magazines, but have never been lucky to get some. In today's paper I read the offer of magazines by A. M. D., so I want to try my luck again. Please won't it be possible to let me have some of them? I would be so thankful. Mrs. M. T."

It is not much fun pulling the boxes around these hot days, but if the scrap pile is there it is worth digging for them just to know so simple a gift could make happy the life of another, isn't it? The magazines offered by A. M. D. have been given to an earlier applicant.

"I wish to make a request for my parents. They are quite feeble and cannot get out often. I thought perhaps that some one with an automobile would be kind enough to give them a ride through the parks. I am a widow and work every day. Mother takes care of my little girl and keeps house. I am the only support, so I do not have much left and cannot afford to hire an auto. I would be so thankful if this could be arranged. "Mrs. V. S."

Won't some kindly disposed automobile owner respond to Mrs. S.'s plea?

"I have six children—two little girls who love music, which we are unable to buy. We would love the old ragtime songs. Do you know some kind friend who has sheet music to dispose of? If you could help us, please send address to the little girl. It would please her so much. Mrs. M. F."

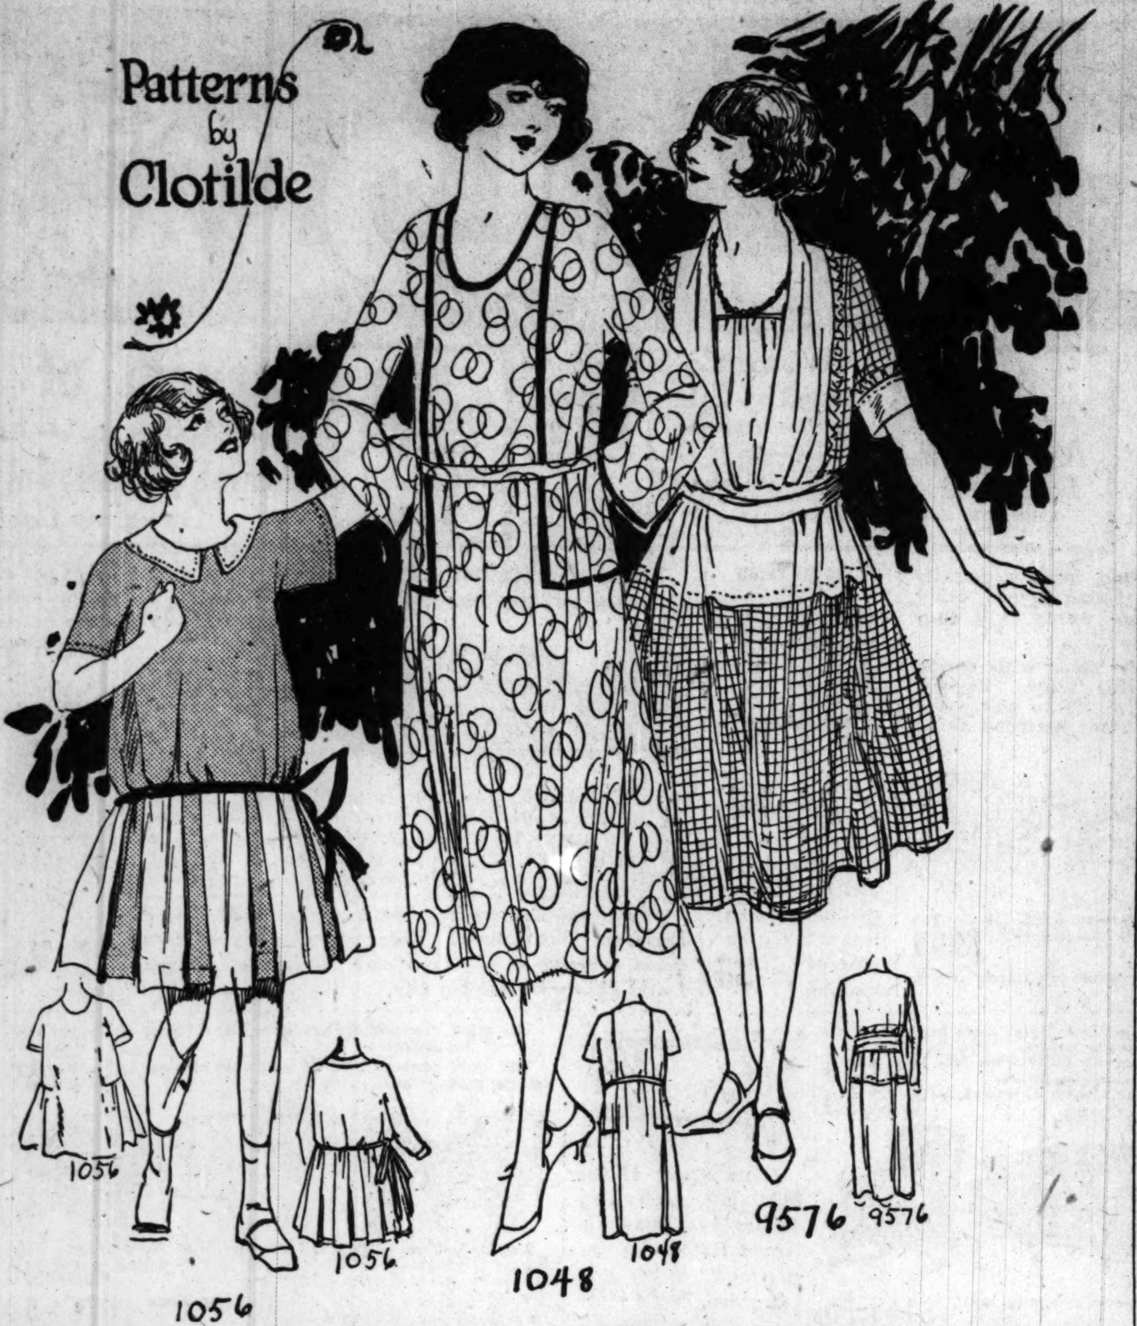
We often have music donations, and I shall remember your little daughter at the next popular music offering.

"I have just come home from the sanitarium, and I want to take up typewriting to earn a living. I am 16 years of age, the eldest of a family of seven. If there is a typewriter not in use at the present time, do you think it could be loaned to me? I would be most grateful. H. H."

I shall place your address on file, and if a typewriter is offered will let you know.

"I have a pair of 3½ D low black shoes, new ones, that I would like to give to some one who needs them. I also have some bric-à-brac that some one might like to have. Mrs. S."

Thank you. Your name will be given to the person who can wear the shoes offered.



1056—Girl's dress. Sizes 8 to 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 36 or 40 inch material with ¾ yard of 36 inch contrasting and 10½ yards of ribbon.

1048—Woman's dress. Sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 40 inch white material with 2 yards of 36 inch checked.

9576—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36 to 42 inch bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material with 1½ yards of 36 inch plain, and 4⅝ yards of plaiting.

How to Use the Patterns

WOMEN who like things a little out of the ordinary will want to make a dress by pattern No. 1048. It is not quite as easy to make as some others, but the pattern is clearly marked on all necessary places with perforations and notches, showing clearly how to put it together.

The main thing to do with any pattern you buy is to apply your own measures to it before pinning it on the material. A great many women might buy, for instance, a 38 bust measure pattern, and yet some of the length or width measures might differ enough to give considerable trouble in fitting. So, if one applies one's own length and width (waist and skirt) measures to the pattern, any needed alternations can be made or a note made of it on the pattern.

The sleeves and side fronts of this dress are cut kimono fashion, and to these the rest of the dress is attached. There is an extension on the front par of each side front piece that forms a pocket. It is a clever and simple way to arrange for the pockets, the pattern indicating quite clearly how to make them.

The opening of the dress is down the left side of the front, and the front and back of the waist and skirt are in one piece.

The skirt measures 2⅛ yards around the bottom for size 36, and the sleeves can, of course, be cut any preferred length.

A foulard in beige and black would make up prettily, and the two parts of the dress could be put together with a narrow piping of black.

Linen would be a good material for this pattern, or one of those lovely cotton voiles.

Little girls' dresses show the loose panels the same as do those of their elders; and pattern No. 1056 will be sure to please the young daughter.

This pattern is in one piece, with kimono waist part, and the sides of the skirt part extend out beyond the waist, so as to give fullness. The waist is cut in at the bottom a little way beyond the under arm seams, and the skirt extension is gathered and the edge of it brought back so it will be even with the under arm seam of the waist. This makes a becoming fullness over the sides.

The loose panels may be of the same or a contrast material. If the material or materials chosen for this dress are plain, nothing will be prettier than some embroidery; and, of course, if it is figured, all that will be necessary will be to use one of the colors in the design for the finish at the neck and sleeves. The narrow sash ribbon can match the trimming in color.

No. 9576 is a pretty model for some one of the lovely thin materials. Organdie, muslin, dimity, voile, or even the heavier wash materials will make up well. The upper part of the skirt, the cuffs, collar, and girdle can be of a solid color and the lower skirt part and the waist of some contrasting color and design.

The illustration shows a narrow ruffle or plaiting used as trimming, and nothing daintier or prettier could be used. If the dress is made of organdie, muslin, or voile, the ruffles can be made of the plain color on the bias, measuring one and one-half the length to which they are to be attached. Net or footing also makes pretty ruffling, and one can dye this to match the gown.

I imagine most women will prefer the short sleeves for this dress, and the broad, upturning cuff finished with the plaiting will be the right finish. The cuffs should be entirely finished before setting on to the sleeves. Turning them wrong side out, and letting them hang down from the sleeves, baste the under edge (which will be the right side of the cuffs when they are turned up over the sleeves), to the edge of each sleeve, having the seam come on the right side of the sleeve. Then stitch and hem the other cuff edge down over the seam. Press smooth, and turn the cuff up over the sleeve where it belongs, and tack invisibly in two places to the sleeve.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

One day aunty radiantly approached Janet and sparkled: "What would you say to having a little brother or sister?"

"I'd just hate it! I don't want any!" blazed Janet.

A few days after the coming of a little brother, however, Janet was more than resigned to his arrival.

One day she was rocking him to sleep and aunty said: "So, after all, you're rather fond of little brother?"

"O, yes, I just love him!" gushed Janet, "I wouldn't be a bit sorry if he had been twins." F. J.

Frank is fond of horses, and played fearlessly at the heels of the safe old team his father drove. Recently, however, his father purchased a new team of mules, and thought it necessary to warn his son against going into the stalls.

"These horses aren't like old Ned and Jerry; they're strangers—they don't know you," he said.

What was father's alarm a few minutes afterward to see Frank standing before the tallest of the two animals, with hand coaxingly outstretched toward its nose.

"Don't you know me? I'm Francis Alfred Wilcox. They call me Frank, though," he was saying, when the long arm of his father reached in and cut the introduction short. L. M.

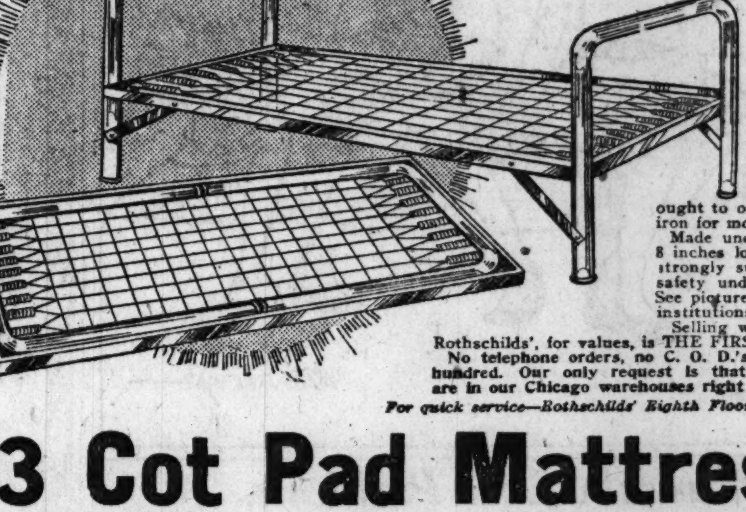
NEW Folding Steel Army Cots

39c

Yes! That's the price. No printer's mistake. Thirty-nine cents! It's the most breath-taking value we remember in the history of State Street. But that is what the public has come to expect from Rothschilds'. The entire 20,000 (enough for a good size city) should be sold in one day if our salespeople can write down the orders fast enough.



Thirty-nine cents! Think of it—the price of a few postage stamps, or a good cigar or two. And at Rothschilds' tomorrow thirty-nine cents will buy a world-famed Simmons Folding Steel Army Cot that will last a lifetime. Why, you ought to be able to use it for ten years and then sell it for old iron for more than thirty-nine cents.

Made under Government supervision, 30 inches wide, 6 feet 8 inches long, with regular Simmons link fabric steel spring, strongly supported by 2 inch helical springs for comfort and safety under the heaviest weight; head and foot fold under. See picture. For summer home, city homes, campers, porches, institutions, safe, sanitary, and comfortable.

Selling will start with a rush at 8:30. Tell you friends that Rothschilds', for values, is THE FIRST STORE IN THE LOOP.

No telephone orders, no C. O. D.'s, no cancellations. Buy all you can use—one or a hundred. Our only request is that you be a bit patient about delivery. The cots are in our Chicago warehouses right now, but it will take a little time to deliver them.

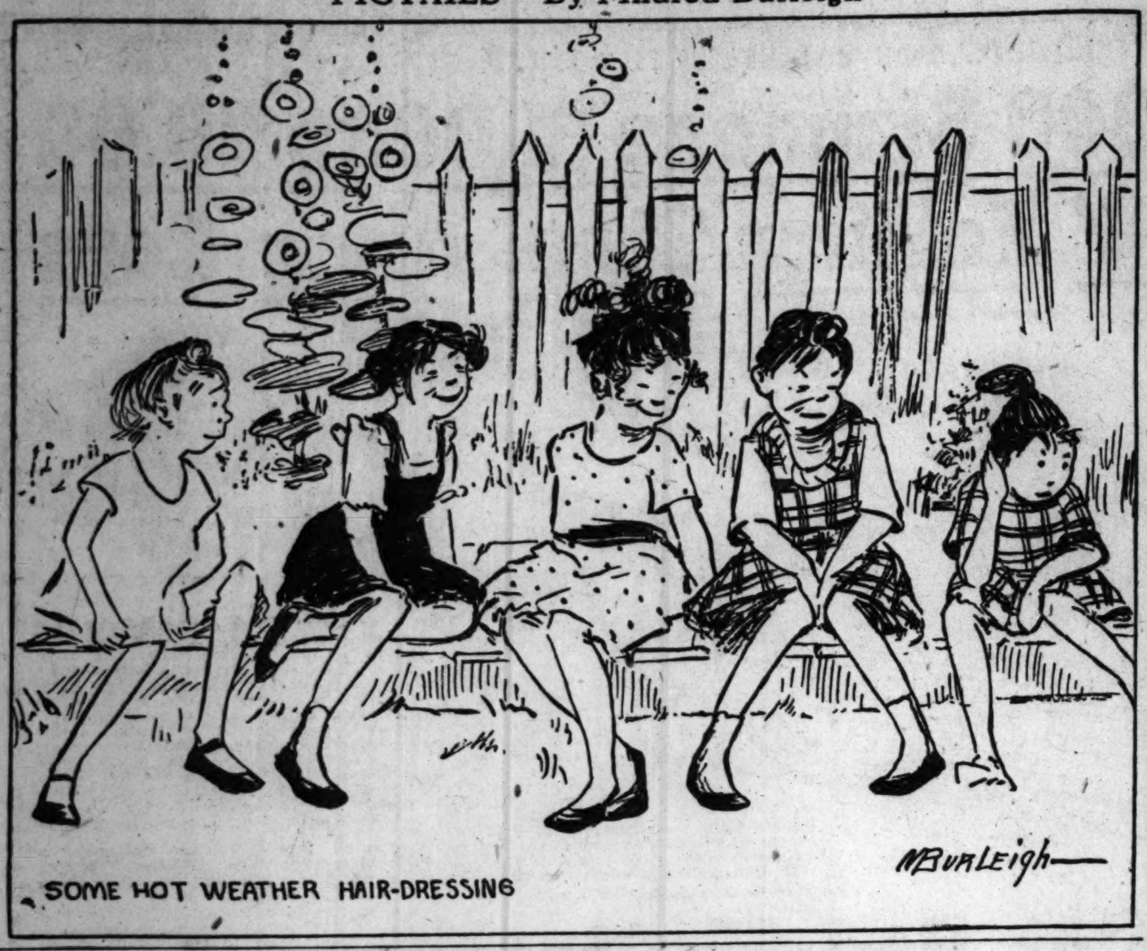
"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh



Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems.

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

You're Unreasonable.

"Dear Miss Blake: My girl friend and myself were accosted by two young fellows one evening on our way home from a show who proved to be nice appearing young chaps.

"During our little chat it developed that they were friends of my brother's, although they did not know me. We, therefore, went out with them about four times and I, being a little bit bored with the fellow I had for my partner, am not at home to him when he calls.

"Do you think it loyal of my girl friend to keep right on going out with the other fellow, particularly as we met them both together? Also, he being a conceited fellow, doesn't that prove she likes him? PEGGY."

Unreasonableness, thy name is woman. How thoroughly selfish of you to expect the other girl to give up her friend just because yours bored you. However, that is all beside the point. What you should have asked me was, if you did not do wrong answering men who accosted you on the street, so as to give me a chance to tell you how little I think of girls who do that and how little the men themselves think of you, too.

Like the Measles.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young stenographer, having just passed my eighteenth birthday. I read with a great deal of interest your column, and noticed your definition of love.

"My boss, who is past sixty years old, says that love is 'the inward inexpressibility of an outward all overishness.' He seems to know a great deal about love for he says he has been in love more or less ever since he was nine.

"I have thought I was in love two or three times myself, I may want to ask your personal advice a little later on. I know you will give it to me because you are always kind, especially to young ladies asking your advice.

"How can a young girl, who has thought several times she was in love, decide that the feeling she has now is the real thing? ANXIOUS."

If your boss is past sixty, you would better leave love out of your conversation. He is a ridiculous old gentleman with a ridiculous definition of something he probably hasn't met in his sixty years. When you are in love you know it. No one has to tell you what the real symptoms are. It's just like the measles. You can't mistake it.

Those Lovers' Quarrels.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am going with a young man of 21 whom I love dearly. He loves me, too, and we are to be married in a few months. The trouble is, Miss Blake, we are both quick tempered and there is seldom a time that we go out together that we don't have a petty disagreement, which usually ends in my giving in.

"I love him too much to let anything come between us, and he always apologizes and says he feels sorry for his part in the quarrel, but next time we meet it's the same thing over again. These quarrels are caused partly by jealousy on his part.

"What can I do? I wouldn't think of giving him up, but this appears to be a menace to our future happiness. "JEANNE."

The best recipe I have in stock for quarreling sweethearts is for only one to quarrel at a time. Avoid the question, or simply refuse to talk about it. Better still, cultivate a little humor. You can do more with a dash of humor than with all the quarreling and arguing in the world. There's a lot of poetry about the sweetness of making up lovers' quarrels, but I notice repeated quarrels invariably end in a total breach.

The Old, Old Story.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going out with a young man two years my senior for a short time, but we are quite fond of each other. However, whenever he takes me out he always likes to put his arm about me and squeeze me, and has hinted several times for a kiss, which I have ignored. Please advise me whether I am wrong in allowing him to be a little familiar now and then. PUZZLED."

You know the old truism about familiarity breeding contempt. More romances than you would ever imagine have been broken up on account of a girl's allowing familiarities. It isn't because I am a prudish, crabby, loveless old soul that I continually advise you girls to save your kisses and embraces, but because I love to see you young girls happy and your romances continue happily.

Keep On Refusing.

"Dear Miss Blake: Just a year ago I was introduced to some young man, whom I care for and I know he cares for me. He never makes a date, but calls when he pleases, which is once a week and sometimes every two weeks.

He always asks me for a good-night kiss, which I refuse, as he never talks about marriage to me. I am 20 and he is 24. How should I come out with this question? Do you think I am right in refusing him a kiss? "HILDA."

Yes, Hilda, he will come oftener and longer if you keep your kisses for the man who asks you to marry him. But you can't come out and ask him if you are to understand you are the only girl for him. Give him a little more time.

College Boy Peeved.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have kept company with a man two years during which time he has professed his love for me and has given me a friendship ring. At present he is attending college and has no idea of marriage yet. One night I met another young man and spent the evening with him. To be fair with my own sweetheart I told him of this occurrence. Do you think he did right in leaving me on this account? Your answer will guide me in doing what is right. MADDY."

If he was peeved as easily as that, you are better rid of him, don't you think, Maddy? You should go out and have a good time, when there is only a friendship ring between you and the college boy.

Finished for Life.

"Dear Miss Blake: About a year ago I met a young man whom I love dearly. He also expressed his love for me and asked me to marry him this coming August. Recently he made an appointment for me to meet him, but because of illness I was unable to do so. The next time I met him I explained the situation and asked him to forgive me for disappointing him, but he told me that he was finished with me for life. Miss Blake, do you really think he could have loved me? I doubt it. But still and all, he introduced me to his people. Please advise me what to do. "HEARTBROKEN."

He is extremely unreasonable. You might have got word to him some way, though. His pride was hurt, I suppose, beyond endurance. But, at that, if he had loved you really, he would have accepted your explanation.

No Need of Advice.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 18 years of age and am in love with a young man who is married. He thinks the world of me and asks me every day to take trips with him. I love him and I would like to go, but I think it is wrong. Please give me advice if I should go with him or not. He is always running after me and when I go with another fellow he loses his mind. Do you think it does me any good to love him? BROWN EYES."

I think you are letting yourself in for a world of trouble. Have you no sense of honor toward the wife of the man? Don't care anything about your reputation? If you are minus these qualities, I am afraid I cannot advise anything. If you had them, you wouldn't need any advice.

A Game You Can't Beat.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am much in love with a certain girl. She tells me that she cares for me, but she does not want me to play the horses. For her sake I quit them. She herself is fond of ponies and every day she has a sure winner. What do you do in a case like that? EDDIE."

The kettle calling the pot black, eh, Eddie? Certainly not the girl to work any permanent reform. But you give them up permanently. No good ever came of money won that way, and usually you lose more often than you win. It's a game you can't beat, no matter how smart you are.

DEL-A-TONE

Others see you raise your arms 100 times a day. Are you guilty of an indelicacy of toilet so common among women?

A Little Thing—yet how noticeable

It is unpleasant to notice a lack of refinement in others—a touch of indelicacy. We never dream that a little flaw in our toilet may make us an offender.

Often in this season's thin waists and low cut gowns the underarm is entirely exposed. The arm is raised to fix the hair, to grasp a strap in a crowded car or for numberless other reasons—and far too often to permit an unsightly growth of hair to go unnoticed.

A smooth, white underarm with its soft curves is pretty and it adds immeasurably to the attractiveness of pretty arms and shoulders. Its charm may be yours by the use of delightful Delatone.

Delatone is one of the oldest and most widely used depilatories. It will remove hair from the neck, face and underarms—surely, quickly and safely.

Beauty specialists use Delatone because it leaves the skin naturally clear, firm and smooth without the slightest discoloration.

Delatone comes in neat little air-tight jars. That is why it stays fresh and retains its strength. Money back if not satisfied.

At any Druggist's or department store or a generous one ounce jar direct to you on receipt of $1.00.

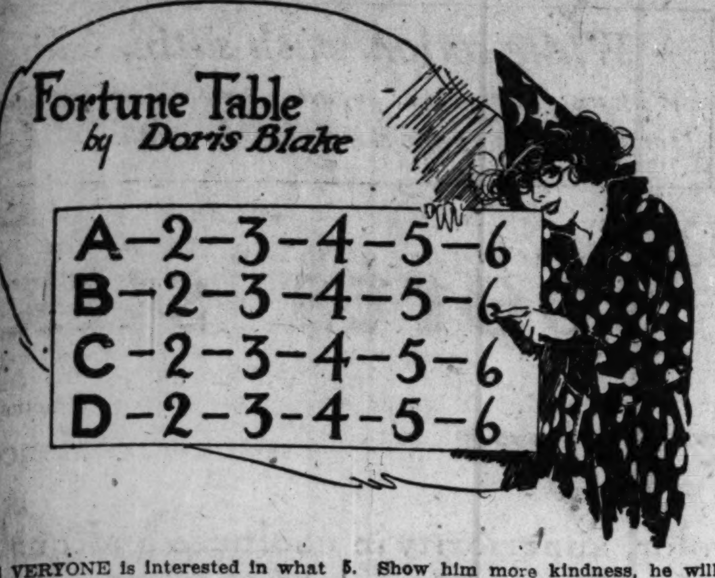
Fortune Table

by Doris Blake



EVERYONE is interested in what the future has in store for him and her in the way of a mate. Perhaps the following table will tell you what you want to know. But don't take it seriously. It's just for fun.

Copy the table in the illustration on a piece of paper. Cover it over with a paper the same size. With a large pin or hatpin prick through the upper layer to a number underneath. Then look for your answer to what kind of mate you'll draw in the following:

A—Handsome youth be sure you'll have,
Brown hair, high nose, and full of salve.
2. An honest tradesman is your lot
When he proposes, slight him not.
3. A man to your fair lot shall fall
Who's slender, straight, and very tall.
4. Fair, ruddy, bushhaired is thy love
He'll keep thee well, and call thee dove.
5. A widower, though rich, you'll marry
If you answer quick and do not tarry.
6. Proper and prim he'll surely be
His loving graces you will not see.

Whether a maid shall have him she loves:

B—Be not too coy, he is your own
But through delay he may be gone.
2. He of your love would like to know
He'd soon propose if it were so.
3. Come set your hopes at rest, I say,
He comes to plunder and run away.
4. A real close neighbor is your man
And he will have you, if he can.
5. Show him more kindness, he will speak;
His heart with silence else will break.
6. Sigh no more, he does relent
Of his flirtations he repents.

How many husbands you may expect:

C It's very true that you shall wed
A second time before you're dead.
2. With one alone thy life shall be.
You'll sail a smooth sea of matrimony.
3. The stars three husbands do presage
And you shall die of a ripe old age.
4. Wed thou at once or else I fear
Thou will not much for wedlock care.
5. Too much of pride will make thee tarry
If you don't take care you'll never marry.
6. Accept the ring thy love would give
For not very long will your husband live.

Whether it be best to marry or not:

D Don't fear that husbands are unkind
There's many a one would please your mind.
2. If he be of complexion fair,
You'll make a happy wedded pair.
3. Come, never fear, all will be well
Give him a signal for the wedding bell.
4. Pray lose no time, for if you do
Age will come on, and you may rue.
5. If this match slip you lose your chances
You'll sit by the wall and watch the dances.
6. Cupid commands thee now to do it
Without ado and without dispute.

Dry Cleaning at Home

By Alma Harding.

ALPHABETICAL TABLE OF SPOT REMOVERS.

This is the thirteenth article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

LACQUER—Use carbontetrachloride or alcohol to remove the stains.

Lampshades.

To clean properly it is well to have a brush with a curved back and good pointed bristles to get in all the plaits. Owing to the heat the shade has received, the silk is often in a fragile condition, so rubbing must not be too hard. Apply a 5 per cent benzine soap solution and rinse well in fresh benzine.

Lard.

Fresh lard comes out with carbontetrachloride. If old, treat with a little castor oil before applying the carbontetrachloride.

Leather.

There are several mixtures which may be used for cleaning leather. One is made of 4 parts of turpentine to 1 part ether. A second mixture is 8 parts camphor, 1 part alcohol, and 1 part ether. To soften leather which has become dry and cracked, use equal parts of glycerine and egg yolk. This imparts a fine finis to dyed leather. Perspiration on leather may usually be removed with alcohol. For mildew, rub with a soft cloth which has been dipped in a little vaseline.

Lime Stains.

Lime and lye stains will disappear from linen in washing. On cotton, wool, and silk, apply drop by drop any dilute acid except sulphuric or tartaric until the spot has disappeared, then wash thoroughly. A weak hydrochloric solution is the best.

Linseed Oil.

This is one of the hardest stains to remove. About the only way is to mix common oil with turpentine. Rub this in well and soak for an hour. Then clean the whole with carbontetrachide.

Lunar Caustic.

This may be removed by daubing with mixture made as follows: Dissolve 1-3 ounce of chloride of ammonium in 4 ounces of water; also dissolve 1-3 ounce of corrosive sublimate in 4 ounces of water. Mix these two liquids and apply.

Another mixture is 1 ounce of Glauber's salts, ½ ounce of chloride of lime, and 1 ounce of water.

In white goods it is possible to dab first with tincture of iodine and then with cyanide of potassium, which is a deadly poison.

Machine Oil.

Cold water and Ivory soap will take it out of all wash goods; for silks use benzine.

Maps.

To clean maps and documents, dip a soft cloth into powdered pumice and rub lightly. This will not turn up the surface like rubber.

Marble.

To clean marble scour with a fine sandsoap or cover with a paste of whiting or pipe clay mixed with ammonia or alcohol. Let dry and brush or wash off. Polish with a coarse flannel or an old felt hat. Be careful not to let any acid touch the marble. To renew its high polish shine with encaustic of wax. To remove ink stains from marble, mix equal parts of spirits of vitrol and lemon juice. Apply, and in a few minutes rub with a soft cloth and wash.

Meat Juice.

Wash in cold water and when well soaked and nearly obliterated, use soap.

Medicine.

Nearly all medicine stains are soluble in alcohol. If it is a metallic salt, spot with a weak solution of oxalic or hydrochloric acid. If these fail, apply the directions given under Iodine.

Men's Suits.

Beat and brush well to get out all the dust possible. Then go over them thoroughly with a brush dipped in benzine soap solution. Then rinse with clear benzine.

Mildew.

It is difficult to remove these stains as they are a real vegetable growth on the fiber. The most common, but slow, method is to rub on lemon juice and put in the sunshine, or to make a paste of one tablespoonful of powdered starch, the juice of one lemon, and one teaspoonful of salt. Rub on and let stand twenty-four hours or even longer. Eau de Javelle, quite strong, is often effective on white goods. Never forget to rinse in ammonia water after using.

Milk.

When fresh, wash in cold water. On fast colors use soap and ammonia water, and rinse well. For silks and wools use carbon tetrachloride.

Mold.

Use a 10 per cent solution of oxalic acid on white goods.

Mother of Pearl.

It must never be touched by benzine of any of the other solvents, so take off pearl buttons if you wish to guard their luster, and be careful in the cleaning of fans.

Mucus.

Soak in ammonia water and wash in cold water with soap. Often the addition of a little salt is a great help. In washing handkerchiefs put two tablespoonfuls of salt to one quart of cold water. Use this same proportion for mucus mixed with blood. Let soak several hours.

Mud Stains.

Usually it is enough to let the mud acid solution. On woolen garments, if obstinate, sponge with a weak acetic acid solution. On woolen garments if it is difficult, put it on a slab and sponge with a 10 per cent benzine soap solution, and rinse in clear benzine. If the color will not be affected by ammonia, a little may be added to help. Often when all the grease has been removed by benzine and a mud stain still remains, a water brushing will penetrate the fibers and cleanse. Use distilled water if possible. This method can be used on plain printed muslins, soft silks, serges, etc. But the work must be rapid, and you must dry the material as quickly as possible.

Muriatic Acid.

The stains from this acid are energetic, and should be washed out at once with diluted ammonia water.

Mustard Stains.

Usually soap and water are sufficient.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

TELEPATHY.

MY Dear One: I thought tonight I should never have been able to take up my pen and write my letter to you. I worked so hard today that I am weary, desperately weary, and the heart seems to have gone out of me completely.

But it is just ten years ago tonight I began writing you love letters you have never received because I have never sent them. I have written them with the blood of my heart to you, dear Edwin, who meant more to me than all the world but whom fate decreed I should never have.

Sometimes I feel a wave of bitterness toward fate for having dealt me the cruelest blow of all. I had my chance from you and you were patient and everything that was dear and good, but mother and the children had only me to depend upon and I could not leave her, frail, dear woman, to face everything alone while I went away rejoicing in my happiness with you.

Tonight, mother gone, the children scattered in homes of their own, and I here with but the ghost of happiness to haunt me, I feel I cannot bear it, and I pour out my heart to you. I hope you'll hear me, Edwin. I pray every night you will hear my call. FLORA.

OUR interpretation of the word "value" may be somewhat different from that generally accepted. With us "value" means not alone low price, not alone dependable quality, but these two combined with large assortments. We believe that cheap merchandise is expensive at any price, and that a few bargains do not constitute a sale. According to our way of thinking, a sale must possess these three things: Merchandise of a quality sure to give satisfaction; lowest possible price consistent with such quality, and stocks big enough to meet the demand of all who come in response to the sale, as long as the sale lasts.

Our Half-Yearly clearance of underwear

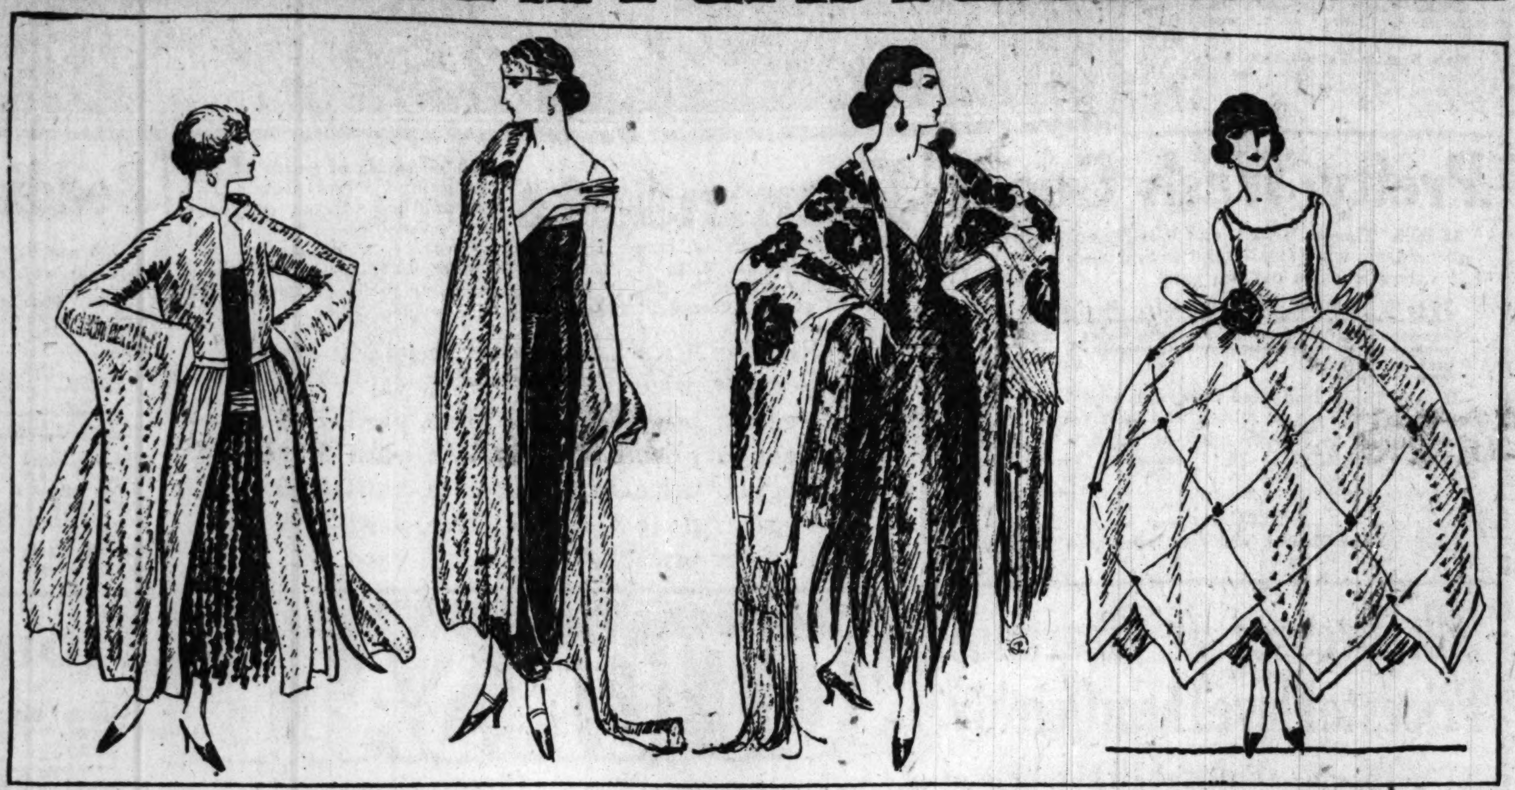
The Last Word in Paris Fashions

UN FETE DE NUIT.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]



Coat of gray satin with long, loose sleeves and cuffs forming trains. Poiret.

Black crêpe gown with diamond shoulder straps. Mantle of silver cloth. Worth.

Green gown by Vionnet as background for white Spanish shawl with black figures.

White organdie dress quilted with yellow flowers; tulle edged scallops. Lanvin.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—It was the prettiest garden party you ever saw. The Saint Cloud Country club gave it, and it was called Un Fête de Nuit. Never had the night looked more beautiful than from the high scene with the Seine beneath, the stars overhead, and the trees on the grounds set with little green lamps.

Everybody you ever heard of was there. Paul Poiret got it up and designed the favors. Gradually as the dances proceeded the grounds blossomed into a garden of paper crêpe flowers more audacious than nature ever attempted. Great roses in the form of caps went to the men, who wore them jauntily. Kindred roses for the women were in myriads of colors and fastened on high distaffs. There were wreaths and huge straw hats garlanded in field flowers; and scythes and sickles and watering pots in gay yellows and vermillions, and they worked together into a lovely scene.

Of course the costuming did not detract from the occasion. The accompanying were among the gowns represented. The first illustrates my old thesis of the growing prominence of the sleeve. It is the leading feature of many a present day costume, as in this. Mme. Menier, of the chocolate fame, is wearing it, and she is considered by experts to be the most beautiful blonde in France.

The garment featured in the drawing is a coat by Poiret in gray satin, with Japanese flowing sleeves that fit closely to a point somewhat below the elbow and then run off into cuffs that serve also as trains. One of the styles of the moment is to have them fitted closely and then expand, but many of them are getting to be gathered at the top, as in the olden days of twenty or thirty years ago.

As with most of Poiret's things, the bodice is extremely straight and the skirt hugely full. He and Lanvin are simply going to make their skirts full, no matter how anybody else in the world, including us Americans, feel about it. There is a general belief in expert quarters that they are going to win and that their silhouette will at least be the one prevailing after 6 in the evening. This highly original manteau was worn over a dinner dress of black and silver brocaded tissue.

The charm of the second costume lies in the classic drapery of the softest tissue I have ever touched. This one was worn by the celebrated dark beauty of France, who made a lovely contrast with the one preceding in their many intimate if flying conversations during the evening. Mme. Trézel is the lady's name and Worth is the creator of her costume. It is of dead black crêpe with one touch of deep peacock blue at the corsage. Black jet and diamonds form an interesting sash—the adjective not being mine but the comment of a neighboring spectator. I should go a shade further and say that it was all of a sensational sash. She wore a mantle of silver cloth lined with black chiffon, and of course she wore it where it would do the least good—thrown over one shoulder. A neat tiara of diamonds completed this modest costume that didn't cost over one fortune. I forgot to mention that the sleeves were held in place with straps of diamonds.

The third lady is one of the belles of Paris today. She used to be a Spanish dancer and now she is the wife of an Indian prince with more money than you ever heard of and she is the mother of countless children. In the smart restaurants of the world, at Deauvillé and all centers of fashion, they all lunch at the same table, together with the wives and husbands that some of them have collected here and there, and one of the diversions of strangers is to try to figure out who is related to whom and to what extent.

But this is a letter on the current fashions. The lady is called the Maharench de Kaparthala. No function of today is considered complete without her presence, and she is here robed in emerald green to go with her jewels. She always wears emeralds and diamonds. Her earrings are celebrated among the jewel experts of the world. The other feature of her costume is her Spanish shawl of a white ground splotched with big black flowers. The color scheme against that green dress is amazing and stunning withal. The dress, as you can see, is made along the Gothic lines popularized by Vionnet. The lady's hairdress is one much in vogue.

Meanwhile Lanvin plies her trade untroubled by any influence outside of herself and the Spanish nation. The fourth is one of her dresses, and it looks to me a great deal like a pincushion or one of the powder boxes in vogue. It is of white organdy—who is rich enough to wear them? One appearance just about covers their narrow life span.

A girl at the fête was among those with a father whose bank account can stand the strain. It was caught together into a quilted effect with tiny flowers of the same color. There was an old fashioned bouquet of yellow and blue flowers at the waist line. The pointed scallops around the skirt were edged with white tulle. And the neck was round. A test of years is whether you can wear a neck like that.

Ill Timed.

While spending a summer at a lake, during a rest from my pastoral duties I used to find great sport in indulging in water gymnastics. One favorite trick of mine was to swim under water for some distance, grab a person by the leg, and pull him or her under. It was most often her, for my chief victim was my sister-in-law. On one occasion when she was standing in the water talking to a group of women I carefully measured my distance, took my direction, and dove toward the victim. I grabbed the hazy limb and proceeded to submerge my captive. Imagine my bewilderment and chagrin to find myself looking into the laughing face of my sister-in-law several feet away, and I discovered that I had ducked a middle aged matron to whom I had not even been introduced. Even my profuse apologies and ministerial bearing failed to overcome the look of horror on her face.

H. J.

Father Spoils It All.

I believe my most embarrassing moment occurred a good many years ago, when I was a boy. A little girl came to visit in the neighborhood, and there was a great deal of rivalry among the boys as to whom she was to go with. My father had a horse and buggy, so I was proud to think I had that advantage.

I well remember the day I took her for her first drive. My father had informed me I could not go, as he had some work for me to do, but when he had left the house, I proceeded to get ready. I drove past every house where any of the boys lived, as I wanted them to see us. I had contemplated getting home early, but I seemed to have lost track of time, and it was dusk when we returned.

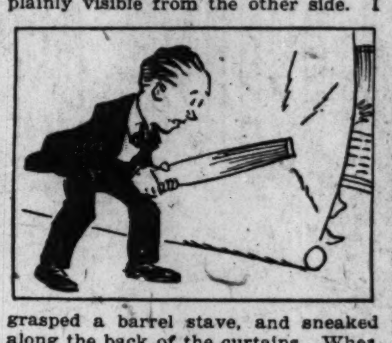
My father was awaiting me, and instead of greeting me with a pleasant smile, he had a different kind of a message for me, and right before my girl, on whom I had wanted to make such a good impression. It proved to be so embarrassing, I was almost glad when she departed for her home.

W. W. C.

Struck a Shadow.

We were working on our senior class play and were going through one of the first rehearsals in the opera house. A bunch of those who held only minor parts in the play finding time heavy on their hand, began playing pranks on each other.

I observed one of my pals standing backed up against a canvas drop so that the outline of his form was plainly visible from the other side. I grasped a barrel stave, and sneaked along the back of the curtains. When opposite the place where I thought he was standing, I swung a right heavy blow with the barrel stave against the most protruding part of the canvas and was rewarded by a startled squawk from the other side.



Imagine my surprise and consternation when I found out that I had spanked our instructor, Miss Payne, instead of my friend. I had quite a time explaining my actions. There were no more jokes played there.

E. B.

He Meant to Ask.

I am a veneer inspector at a furniture plant. One day I decided to utilize for myself what had been a choice bit of lumber but which, through a slight defect, was rendered useless for the purpose for which it was intended. I could use it by cutting it into small pieces, and the firm couldn't, as they made no small furniture.

This particular morning I parked my car about four feet outside the window near which I worked. I intended to ask the superintendent for the piece of lumber in question, for I was certain I might have it if I explained the matter to him. He happened to be in an ugly mood, so I just waited until he went upstairs, then I slipped out the window and laid the lumber in the rear of the car.

That night at closing time one of my fellow workers and myself got into the car and started home. It was raining, and a block from the plant we overtook the superintendent and an office girl walking to a car line. Of course, I stopped and asked them to ride. They climbed into the rear seat. When we'd gone a short distance the girl started to giggle; finally she laughed out loud. I had forgotten about the lumber, and the girl knew I hadn't asked for it. I got so excited we narrowly escaped two collisions, but everything was satisfactorily explained in the morning.

O. G.

General Effect Wrong.

Small daughter, clad in middy and black bloomers, was playing in the yard when she happened to see a caller entering. Although not forward, she had always felt her responsibilities as hostess, and hurried up the back stairs to make herself presentable.

My caller was a handsome and fashionably clad young woman who had never before called, and I was anxious to make as favorable an impression as possible. In a few moments daughter came running into the room, and, turning to present her, I was stunned to find that she had slipped out of her middy and into her best white dress—a filmy organdy—through which the black bloomers leered at me wickedly. Her face and arms, too, were quite in keeping with the bloomers. In her haste to get dressed she had forgotten to wash!

I still blush at the recollection of the obvious amazement of my caller.

S. W. B.

At the Exchange Desk.

At a card party the other day I won the prize, which was handsome and expensive, but something I did not want in the least. Some one asked the hostess where she had bought it, and I took mental note of the store she mentioned. Next day I went to the store and was just unwrapping the prize and explaining to the saleswoman that I wanted to exchange it for something else when I looked up. At the next counter, watching me, was my hostess of the day before.

H. H.

Hard on the Patient.

I was nursing an influential woman through a severe illness, and wished to appear at my best before her and her relatives. While I was feeding her one day, her husband began some interesting subject. My embarrassment, however, absorbed my interest when I became aware I was feeding myself instead of the patient.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

WITHOUT A HAPPY ENDING.

To Robert Craig and Lucille Blake the summer following their graduation from the village high school was a golden dream. The years of boyhood and girlhood had been spent together. They had shared each other's joys and sorrows.

Lucille, with her golden hair and shining eyes, was the belle of the town. This fact was not to be denied. Every one knew and accepted it. Although she treated the other boys, who occasionally gathered in her parlor, friendly, she had eyes for only one—and the community knew that it was Robert Craig.

The long beautiful summer days glided swiftly by. Finally the time came when they must part, for Robert was to go to a nearby college, while Lucille was to stay in the village.

After a last happy evening together the boy departed for school, taking with him the promise of the girl he loved to wait for him until he had made a success of life.

Four long years Lucille waited, and while she waited she planned, for she wanted to be Robert's partner in everything. His vacation days were wonderful, and every time these two were together their love seemed to grow deeper.

And now there were just three weeks to wait. Robert had finished college, and was coming home to marry her and take her with him to the city.

Two weeks before the day set for Robert's arrival, Lucille received a letter. Recognizing the handwriting, she tore the envelope zigzag in her eagerness. It was a wedding announcement from Robert. He had married a prominent society girl whom he had met through his associations with a wealthy uncle.

At first to Lucille came only despair and humiliation—bitterness followed. People were kind to her, but that mattered not, for she had lost the boy of her dreams. She could not tear from her soul the love she held for him, and she hated herself because she could not.

No longer being able to bear the shame of living in the village, she drew from the bank her savings. She then purchased a neat little bungalow in a pretty suburb of a neighboring city, and faced life alone.

The years rolled by, and Lucille continued to live alone with her dreams. Her friends urged her to go out more, but she preferred to live apart from the world. The wound in her heart had never healed; she still loved the man who had jilted her.

It had been ten years since she had seen Robert, but she knew life had been kind to him. For this she was glad.

One morning the postman brought her a letter. She started as she gazed at the handwriting and then with nervous fingers broke the seal. The letter was from Robert, who was begging permission to call. He explained that he had stopped in the city as he was returning from the west, where he had buried his wife.

Her pride was strong, but her love was stronger, and after three months' constant companionship Lucille found herself again engaged to Robert. It seemed now that once more life was going to be kind. But one evening he told her that he was called away on important business and would return in a few days."

He never returned; she never heard from him again. Just three days after his departure as she was reading an account of a terrible railway accident she found the name of Robert Craig listed among the dead.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

AFTER THE HOLIDAY.

The first day Ann had lunch with us on her return from a three weeks' vacation in the north woods, Dorothy began, in a doleful manner, to sympathize with her for having to start in again at the old daily grind of transcribing uninteresting notes and copying long, dull reports for the auditor. Ann didn't let her proceed far along that line. She was in a buoyant mood, and instead of allowing Dorothy to lower her spirits she caught her young friend up with her and carried her along in the current of her own healthy good humor.

"You're not going to make me feel sorry for myself, Dorothy," she said. "I'm feeling altogether too vigorous and happy for that. I had a wonderful time, dear. Lived out of doors practically all the time since I've been away, and after the third day I never gave a thought to the office or to anything connected with it. Just put it out of my mind and forgot about it. Now that I'm back and feeling so good the work doesn't seem dull at all, and I rather wonder at myself for having hated it so intensely before I went away."

She smiled to herself as she resumed eating. Then after a few moments she said: "My vacation came nearly being a failure. If it hadn't been for Connie and John Lawton I'd have moped the three solid weeks I was up there. You see, I was in a pretty bad state when I went up, and for the first three days I had hardly enough energy to walk the 200 feet between the cottage porch and the pier. I was a damper on the party, all right. I could think and talk of nothing else but coming back to the horrible grind in the auditing department and wondering at the same time who was doing my work and how they were getting on without me, and whether Mr. Andrews' affairs were being properly taken care of. Then I was obsessed by the fear that Mr. Andrews might never come back and I'd be stuck in that awful job for good.

"I could see I was worrying Connie," Ann went on, "but even that didn't help me to pull myself out of the slough I was stupidly floundering about in. It wasn't until John made a direct attack that I rallied and jerked myself out.

"Connie had planned an all day picnic. We were to go six miles up the lake and across to the other shore. Our bathing suits, fishing tackle, and rifles were packed in the launch along with a day's rations, and the materials for starting a fire. At the last minute I decided I wasn't equal to the trip and said I'd stay at the cottage and read while they were gone. Connie would have let me stay, but John self with out of my hands and said there'd be no picnic without me and as he didn't want to disappoint his other guests I'd better decide to come along.

"I agreed to go, but not heartily, I'm afraid. For on the way down to the boat John proceeded to read me a lecture. He was so severe with me that I was impressed in spite of myself. Was I a spoil sport? He'd never thought so before. But it seemed to him that I was doing my best to spoil things for everybody—Connie and himself especially. Everything they'd planned for the last three days I'd vetoed. Besides, I'd done nothing but whine about the office. Didn't I think they could get along without me down there? He guessed they could. What if Mr. Andrews never did come back? Didn't I have enough gumption to paddle my own canoe? Did I have to depend on somebody else to steer a straight course for me? Well, everybody but Connie had left a job to come up here and have a rest and a good time. Why couldn't I forget the office for a while and take my good time like the others? He never wanted to think of the office until he stepped into it again, ready for another year's hard work.

"I laughed outright at that. It suddenly struck me that I was making myself awfully ridiculous. Of course, my job would be taken care of quite well without me, and even if something did happen to prevent my going back as confidential secretary to the head of the firm I had sufficient experience and the ability, I hoped, to get as good a job somewhere else. Why, here was John Lawton, head and shoulders of an institution that it took several hundred people to maintain, not giving a thought to his job. I had nothing at stake compared to him, and I was making myself and everybody else sick with my petty worries and fears. I was ridiculous.

"I got into that boat in a chastened spirit, feeling humble and ashamed of myself. John and Constance soon rallied me out of that mood, and from then on there was no one in the party who played harder than I or who was more oblivious of a tomorrow. With the exception of those first three days, this vacation will always be a glorious memory.

"So, you see, Dorothy," she concluded, "your sympathy's entirely wasted on me. I'm equal to any job, no matter how hard or dull. I'll stick at my present one, and do justice to it, too, until Mr. Andrews comes back in the fall. Then, if something happens to prevent my getting my good job back, I'll go out and get another just as good."

Ann's exhilaration stimulated all three of us. Dorothy expressed the hope that she and Marion—they are to spend their vacations together—would come back from their trip in the same spirit that Ann's in now. I went back to my desk and in a short time had finished a bit of work that had been hanging fire for several days simply because I had lacked the energy to complete it.

That Vital Look of Happiness

—that smiling, easy poise which typifies the wearers of Cantilever Shoes is founded on a basic principle of good health. For foot comfort is a necessary factor in good health, which inspires happiness—while happiness in turn creates good looks.

Proper fitting shoes are necessary to foot comfort, but more than this, the shoes must be correctly designed and constructed to allow ease of walking, of foot action, in a natural way.

Nature gave the human foot a flexible arch and instep. That is why The Cantilever Shoe is made to flex with the foot, instead of being made rigid by a metal "shank piece," such as is concealed in ordinary shoes. The Cantilever Shoe encourages strengthening exercise of the arch muscles and with your feet moving easily and naturally, you walk or stand in comfort.

The natural shape of the shoe and the well-set heel encourage correct posture. With the weight properly distributed, you can walk or stand for a long time in Cantilevers without the fatigue experienced in other footwear. The style of Cantilever Shoes is correct for daytime wear.

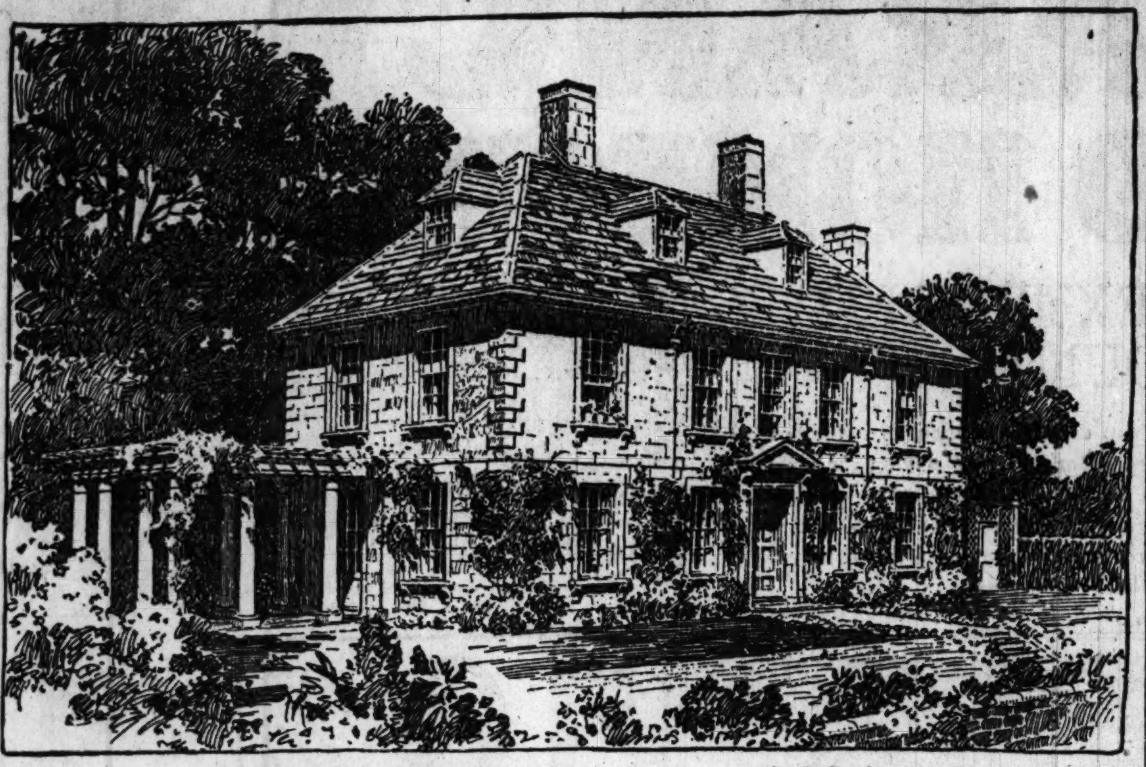
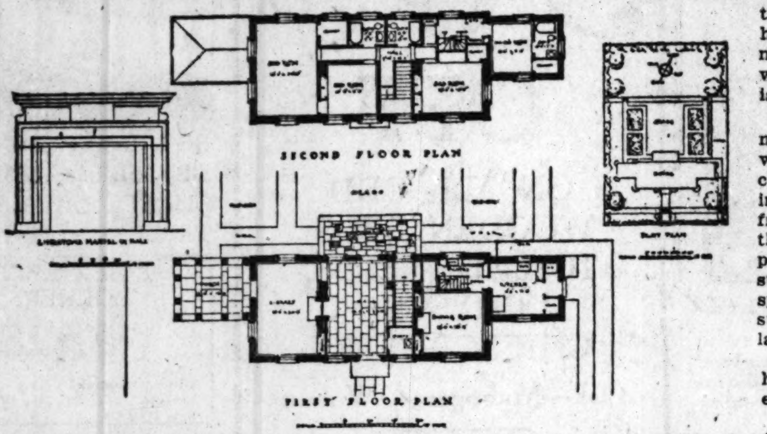
For Those Who Want to Build for Permanence the All Stone Colonial House Is Suggested

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.





WHEN we think of the term colonial as applied to residence architecture we instinctively recall the Dutch colonial farm house of New York and New Jersey that has been so frequently adopted as an inspiration for modern small houses. We may also think of the more stately southern colonial type, with tall columns and porticos; or, if of eastern birth or residence, we may recall the many other varied New England colonial types, all charming in their naive simplicity and direct appeal as appropriate to American home life.

Most of these houses built during the early days were built of local stone, with wood trim, or were entirely of wood. These were the prevalent building materials. The stone was taken from the site or nearby fields and the timber could be had in any quantity for the simple cutting down of trees and hewing of same. Birch was seldom used except in the larger cities because it had to be brought over from Europe.

There is, however, another type of colonial house closely related to the early type that is not quite so well known, but should not be lost sight of because it is not a farm house, not a cottage, but a real suburban house, and is the more suitable and logical type for the suburban home of today. The all stone colonial house of eastern Pennsylvania and adjacent territory is the one referred to. This is undoubtedly the best early expression of American home life based on the higher standards of living in England. No other early American style is a truer expression of American culture or more suitable to use for the moderate size American home of today.

The house illustrated is of this type. It is not over large or pretentious, but just the type of home that any American family would justly aspire to build and continue to enjoy as a family homestead for generations to come.

This is not primarily a home for newlyweds. It is the kind of a home one would wish to build as a permanent one after father is established in business and the eldest son at college, and after an experiment or two with bungalows and rented small houses. The walls are of plain sawed rustic Indiana limestone backed up with hollow tile or brick. There is just enough cut stone in the entrance feature, plain trim around windows, and quoin stones to give the house an air of dignity and refinement. The columns supporting the porch roof, also the porch and terrace floors and front steps, are also of stone, making the building absolutely permanent, reducing maintenanace expense to a minimum, and assuring a home that will grow old gracefully and mellow beautifully under the hand of Time.

There is no elaborate cornice, a simple molded stone course serving to support the overhang of pitched roof, which is covered with variegated green and purple slate.

The porch is not stretched out along one whole side of the house, cutting off the direct sunlight, but is rectangular in shape, placed so as to catch every breeze, a true outdoor living room connecting the house with its garden, which commands a view of the front yard and street, as well as the garden at rear, its position adding to the desirable privacy of the garden. This porch could be readily inclosed in glass for use as a sun room in cold weather.

The terrace facing garden at back of house is secluded and sufficiently private to form an ideal outdoor tea or breakfast room if covered with an awning on removable iron pipe supports. The fine colonial type divided sash windows, with their flower pot ledges, as shown by the perspective drawing, have desirable charm, and give a distinctive air to the house.

The entrance hall is quite wide, has a fireplace with limestone mantel, and is really not a hallway, but a living room, where the younger children and gayer members of the family can congregate of an evening without disturbing the more studious in the adjoining library, the plan thus skillfully utilizing what is often waste or little used space in a house. This hall is floored with slabs of Indiana limestone rubbed to a fine sand finish—an ideal floor for the hall of any suburban or country home that is unharmed by wet or muddy shoes. Such a floor is easily washed with mop, can be waxed, and is just right for dancing.

The stairs and dining room are made private by the alcove off hall, by which these and service portions are connected with the living rooms, making it possible to reach the bedrooms from kitchen without passing through the living rooms. By reason of this privacy of the main stairs, the rear stairs might be dispensed with, and the space which they occupy in second story utilized for other purposes, as later referred to.

The dining room is of fair size, and has built-in china cupboards placed on each side of mantel.

The kitchen has light and air on three sides, and, with its view of both garden and street, is an ideally located workroom for mother and daughter in a servantless home, while sufficiently isolated for hired help.

There is ample closet space in the second story, and by a little rearrangement of the plan, omitting the maid's room and rear stairs, four good size bedrooms and small sewing room would be available. The hipped roof covering the house provides a fine roomy attic lighted by five dormer windows, and could be finished as a playroom when the children were young and as a billiard room or studio later on.

Picture this fine stone house partly covered with English ivy, set in a garden, and surrounded by shrubbery and flowers, and you have a true conception of the ideal American home.

THE BUREAU SCARF.

MAKING pretty things for one's home is always attractive work; and bureau and chiffonier covers come under that head and can be made for much less than it is possible to buy them. If you prefer keeping them white, there is nothing more beautiful than a rather heavy linen, with an embroidered scalloped edge, and in the center, down near the scallops, have an embroidered initial or monogram, having the letters about 3 inches long.

It is possible to buy all sorts and sizes of scallops—in a transfer design—and while this embroidery would be tedious if done too steadily, it will be fascinating work and will go rapidly if kept as pick-up. The scallops should be outlined with a single thread of the embroidery cotton, and then carefully padded—having the padding heavier in the center and gradually running off to nothing as it nears the corners. It pays to do this preliminary work with care, for much of the beauty of the finished scallop depends on it.

This sort of a cover should have pin cushions to match.

Another pretty idea is to have a piece of silk, satin, or sateen cut and hemmed the exact size of the top of the bureau, choosing the color of your draperies for this. Then use dimity in white with a tiny flower the color of the sateen, if you can, for the real cover. It can be finished with a half inch hem across the back, and on the three other edges stitch a two inch wide ruching of the dimity. The edges of the ruching should be hemmed on the machine, using the narrow hemmer, and then gathered through the middle. If your work is to look well, it must be carefully done—that is, in putting the ruching on. Gather in tiny stitches, first measuring for each end and across the front, dividing the ruching and cover into quarters. Lay the gathers as evenly as possible; for that is the part that can make or mar the appearance of the cover. At the corners don't have the ruching too bunchy, but just full enough to lie smoothly.

Cross barred flaxon or dimity makes lovely covers, with the ruching of organdie, or with the edges finished with a narrow hem, and Valenciennes lace whipped all around by hand. Of course, an insertion and edging can be used, or just an edging, and the corners will look well mitered.

Covers to match your draperies, if you have colored ones over the white, are attractive, and a lace edge will make a good finish.

Linen, embroidered in a cross-stich design, makes wonderfully pretty covers; these can be made to hang over at the ends several inches. If this is done, have hemstitched hems at each end, and before using the colored floss scald thoroughly, putting a little salt in the water. Fine canvas should be used for the work, as the stitches look better if not too large.

Varied Activities of Women

Among the Moors, girls are fattened for the marriage market much as the poultry farmer treats his live stock. The staple food for the women is bread, and it is chiefly with this that they are fattened. Long shaped pellets of it are constantly forced down their throats for a period of about three weeks before their marriage.

SOME RECENT FRENCH MENUS.

FOUR months ago a French prefect, some mayors of districts, a director of railroads, and other magnates had a dinner at a famous hotel, in southern France, the menu of which was made up entirely of ancient dishes of that locality, and it was even printed in exceedingly ancient language. Under each item in parenthesis were modern French translations. Translating these latter, quite literally, the menu reads:

Some little things in order to commence.
Heads of salmon with pretty little peas.
Cock in white wine.
A garden plate.
Liver of gosling fattened in doors, with sauce "suce-ton-doigt."
Crepes such as the monks of the abbey loved.

And the final line of the menu read: "And the good God with us."

"Little things in order to commence" characterize every French luncheon (dejeuner) menu of today, but these appetizers are not given in dinner menus, the first item on which is the "potage." Not even in the highest class or most elaborate dinners (la grande cuisine) do these things appear. It is not French to use them. But the elaborate French dinner menu has always been rather brief, and it is so today.

Quality instead of quantity is what French cookery has always stood for.

Americans Invade Paris.

By the way, it is an entertaining and also a serious fact to see the French turn Puritan in opposing the American invasion of Paris with restaurants in which dancing and jazz and gum chewing are noisily prominent. It irritates the French gastronome that the toddle and "la gomme a macher" (which, translated literally, seems to mean more than "gum to chew") should be imported so largely, just at the time when we have shut out their wines. Few of the most venerable hotels seem to be able to keep out what is being imposed "by people of the far west," "the cowboys," "the gourmonds from across the ocean," etc. This invasion is destroying "the noble French traditions," they say, and no doubt it is, but we might say a few things in recrimination:

Anybody who really cares for food in the artistic way the French have can but sympathize with their distaste for this wild and woolly combination of it with what seems like excessive enthusiasm of movement, noises of all sorts and loud ones, and general abandon. In addition to the frenetic dancing, these upholders of the old traditions object to the smoking with the eating. The editor of the leading cooking journal of Paris, in deploring these things, says that these destroyers of French eating customs light their cigars at the minute of sitting down to the table (des les primes hors d'oeuvre), the smell of which hinders everybody, those who smoke and those who do not, from appreciating the food.

There is a time for everything, but when one is eating is not the time for smoking, and the dust and other influences that go with dancing do not contribute to interest in good food and getting from it all it is worth. If I go into an eating place where I know the "stuff" is of doubtful quality and see some silly young girls smoking there I leave. The food might not give me any satisfaction, anyway, but my psychological reaction to the whole situation would shut up tighter than a drum all my digestive juices, and it would be far better for me not to put anything into a stomach which could not, in consequence, take care of it—the wear and tear is great—too horrible.

The French Crêpe.

By the way, the French crêpe is just a thin pancake, often filled with something sweet and almost always used as a sweet dish. Wine is much used with them, and there are not only crêpes Suzette, but crêpes with endless other names attached to them. The fact that the old monks of a thousand years ago or more loved pancakes suggests that man does not change his nature from age to age.

Since the French are the people who raised cooking to the rank of a high art—cooks being knighted for their serious and perfect work and being accepted socially in artistic and literary circles—we need always to go to their gastronomic literature when we wish to refresh ourselves and renew our faith in the high mission of food and its fine care and preparation. There are influences to drag us constantly away from this faith.

For colorful, always novel—or seeming so, at least—menus we must still go to French sources. We cannot today use many French recipes, as they stand, because wine is so universally prescribed in them, but we never did use wine in cooking to the extent they always have, and one can never read the best recipes without getting some new idea about perfecting a body's cooking.

Patience and Menus.

To begin with, the French menus are incomparably specific, therefore the variety of menus is many times multiplied, while the possibilities with us are so soon exhausted. To the one who can think only of soup, meat, vegetables, and dessert in planning a meal the outlook is exceedingly limited. When that one advances to naming the meat the chance of making a variety of menus is increased, but when the menu tells where the meat came from and how it is prepared then there is a chance of the interest of the dullest eater being excited.

In eating a fine French meal of the near perfect sort we really need a menu to enhance the value of the "plats," whose specific character we would not at all understand without the explanation it offers in its terms.

It is a little strange that the average American has so little patience with these menus, or is so unwilling to do the little work involved in finding out just what they mean. It can easily be proved that there are thousands of people who really like fine eating extravagantly, yet who despise high intelligence about foods.

But in defense of those who will not try to understand a menu in French let it be said that there are often rather absurd tags to some of the items. For instance, in reading some late ones I looked up a name and found it that of an orator and professor of the eleventh century. This seems far-fetched, yet great French writers, generals, statesmen have known how to cook, and every one remembers what Napoleon said about his desire to make a perfect omelet.

Translating French Menus.

There are many words in French menus which it is impossible to translate, unless we have had the widest kind of experience with high class, bourgeois, and folk French cookery, while a complete knowledge of French history and literature would come in handy. Our American menus sometimes show how wide one can go in making a literal translation of a French dish, but we have sensibly taken some French terms and partly anglicized them, in such cases as beef à la mode, maitre d'hôtel potatoes, Lyonnaise potatoes, and so forth. To keep these terms from being mongrel we should spell beef as the French spell it.

As an illustration of what might happen to a term in French cookery, if we went straight to the dictionary for a translation without some knowledge of French cookery and some experience in eating in France, we might take the term "terrine de caneton Rouennaise." Translating this literally, we would get "an earthen dish of Rouen duck"—the most famous of ducks. But the really common English for this is "potted duck."

Geographical Names Lend Interest.

A French menu of any class, without one or more geographical names and also without some name of a celebrity in art, literature, or drama in it, is unusual. This is perhaps a greater attraction on a menu than some people realize, and we are not without similar resources, which we could use if we would take a greater interest in the quality of what we eat. We are proud of our Watertown, Rhode Island, Baltimore, California, and other products, like New York Herkimers and so forth, with Maryland fried chicken, Creole gumbo soup, Boston baked beans, Philadelphia scrapple, and so on. And there are creeping into use such terms as Pascal celery, while we should not be indifferent to that of Kalamazoo.

In England there are no end of geographical names attached to food products, like Banbury tarts, Bath buns, Aylesbury ducks, Cheshire cheese, Devonshire cream, Shrewsbury cakes; and our hotel stewards could help us to a knowledge of where our best products come from.

The French cooking magazine Culina, for June, has numerous sets of menus. Some are headed "Some Good Little Menus" and one page, without recipes, has the heading, "Family Menus for June and July." Under "La Grande Cuisine" it gives long, long recipes, while the good little menus without recipes read like a succession of little stanzas of verse, especially the luncheon menus. These luncheon menus generally have two hors d'oeuvres, or two "little things in order to commence," but in the following only one:

Sardines in oil
Omelet with points of asparagus
Hunter's style of sauteed lamb
Genoa peaches
Arles sausages
Mackerel maitre d'hotel
Chicken sauteed with mushrooms
Souffle with cherries
Eels in green
Poached eggs Mornay
Veal scalloped with squash
Peaches with rice

Some of the two appetizer luncheon menus, always "for the family," read:

Salted beans, marinated lettuce
Poached eggs Soubise
Calf's heart with carrots
Home-made noodles au gratin
Strawberries of Bourgogne in wine
Desserts
Tomato salad, meat jelly
Scallops au gratin
Calf's liver Flemish style
Fried eggplant
English cream with brioches
Desserts
Little Dieppe mackerel, cracklings (rillons)
Eggs fried in pork fat
Beef kidney sauteed with mushrooms
Rice croquettes
Desserts
Artichokes with pepper sauce, liver pate
Mixed fry or grill
Countryman's style pie
Green bean salad
Compote of apricots
Desserts
Eggplant pulp vinaigrette, marinated clams
Red tongue
Crawfish tails in shells, Paris style
Broiled mutton in tomato sauce
Byron potatoes
Wild strawberries of Chambertin

JULY 24, 1921.

The Theaters

FOLK whose likings in the way of diversion incline them toward something to see rather than something to do may begin to take heart, for there are signs of life in the theaters. It has been a dull July on the so-called Rialto, but a good deal is promised for August and more for September—tentatively, in some cases, for all amusement plans are subject to change in this most uncertain of theatrical years, but with enough assurance to make it certain that we shall not be much longer in the doldrums.

As usual, the season will be in full swing by Labor day, and not much before. In the interim the playhouses will be coming to life one by one, and if present arrangements are carried out they will do it according to the following schedule:

Colonial—Aug. 7, with Fred Stone in "Tip-Top," one of those mannerly Dillingham extravaganzas by Anne Caldwell, R. H. Burnside, and Ivan Caryll. The Duncan sisters, high lights of the entertainment in New York, have been "knocking 'em dead" in London this summer, but are reported to be hurrying back to rejoin the show in Chicago.

Studebaker—Aug. 14, with Leo Ditrichstein in "Toto," a comedy of Parisian life adapted by Achmed Abdullah from a French play by Maurice Hennequin and Felix Duquesnal. This provides Ditrichstein with the sort of rôle he plays best—that of the acknowledged leader of a gay set in the French capital, debonair, whimsical, and, of course, a prime favorite with the ladies.

Olympic—Aug. 14, with Fiske O'Hara, the singing actor, in "The Jolly Cavalier," his new Irish play for the season, written for him as usual by Anna Nichols. You'll be sorry to learn that O'Hara will not make love this year to Miss Patricia Clary, his erstwhile leading woman. Miss Clary will be here, but in a domestic rôle, she being Mrs. O'Hara, and will be resting.

Central—Aug. 28, with Tom McNaughton in "Three Live Ghosts," a comedy by Max Marcin, which has found considerable favor elsewhere.

Palace Music Hall—Aug. 29, with vaudeville.

Playhouse—Late in August, possibly with Miss Gilda Varesi in "Enter, Madame."

Blackstone—Sept. 1, with Frank Bacon in "Lightnin'," the record breaking comedy by Winchell Smith and Bacon himself, which has had more than 1,290 performances in New York and is still in the running there as lustily as ever.

Powers'—Sept. 4, with "The Gold Diggers," the Belasco comedy about chorus girls, in which Miss Ina Claire had a long and prosperous career in the east. Miss Claire will not come to Chicago; in her place we shall have probably Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt.

Cohan's Grand—Sept. 5 (or perhaps sooner), with "The O'Brien Girl," George M. Cohan's one remaining production and the only one, he says, which will bear his name next season. The players were given their choice as to whether the piece should be continued or sent to the storehouse at the end of its present engagement in Boston. They decided to "stick."

Ambassador—Sept. 5, with Miss Florence Reed in "The Mirage," by Edgar Selwyn. You may be puzzled about the Ambassador. It is the name most favored at present for the old Great Northern, to be taken over next week by the Shuberts, rejuvenated, and restored to its former estate as a home for "legitimate" attractions. The month of August will be devoted to the alterations, which contemplate a stately scheme of gold and silver leaf for the auditorium, spacious lounges, and new lobbies in walnut and French mirrors.

The four playhouses which have been open during the summer will begin their regular seasons thus:

Cort—Aug. 28, with Grant Mitchell in "The Champion." The engagement of "Smooth as Silk," which was to have terminated Aug. 6, has been definitely extended until that time.

Apollo—Sept. 4 or 5, probably with the inauguration in Chicago of the Shuberts' new vaudeville venture, for which purpose the theater has been taken over from Mr. Woods.

Princess—Sept. 4, with Holbrook Blinn in "The Bad Man," the comedy by Porter Emerson Browne, in which a Mexican bandit of the Villa type is pictured as a humorously philosophical gentleman, given to diverting adventures and many quizzical observations on life.

Garrick—Sept. 5, perhaps with "Snapshots of 1921," a revue populous with entertainers, of whom the chief are Lew Fields and De Wolf Hopper. The Garrick was to have been used for vaudeville, but the taking over of the Apollo has changed that.

Plans for the Illinois are uncertain. The Woods has been leased for picture purposes and will reopen Aug. 17 with "Over the Hill," a film they liked in New York. The La Salle will have spoken entertainment again when "The Four Horsemen" leaves—possibly "Afgar," with Mlle. Alice Delysia.

Finally, six new theaters are promised. Building operations will begin soon, it is said, on the two Selwyn-Harris playhouses which are destined for Dearborn street, immediately north of the Woods. The Shuberts propose to erect a house for vaudeville in Clark street, and the Erlanger interests are eyeing three locations for as many new places of amusement.

So it may not be such a dull season after all.

Would you know who are supreme among the players? Consider the opinions of George M. Cohan—opinions with which you may not agree but which you must, at least, find interesting. Talking again for publication, Mr. Cohan submits that Miss Fay Bainter is the greatest actress he has ever seen. "That girl," he says, "could play any rôle in the theater." William Collier he sets down as the greatest of farce comedians, Theodore Roberts as the greatest character actor, and Fred Stone as the best all round comedian in musical comedy. And there you are.

Mr. Ziegfeld has repented his melancholy determination that the "Midnight Frolic" shall hold forth no more in New York, and a new edition of the entertainment will come into being this week. There were obsequies when the show was closed "forever" in May, the event, according to Mr. Ziegfeld, being "symbolic of the fact that the most prized possession of America—liberty—is dead." Just what has happened to liberty in the meantime the announce-

Many Operas Given and More to Come at Ravinia; Music Gossip

By Edward Moore.

WITH seventeen different operas already given and four more to come within the next two weeks, Ravinia enters the fifth week of its summer season in the consciousness of duty well performed.

These are interesting figures. They show real accomplishment in a company of the Ravinia dimensions. The Chicago Opera association has the reputation of showing speed in its season. Yet it moves no faster, and it is at least three times the size and has at least three times the resources of the Ravinia company. Its most hectic weeks have accomplished no more than the north side organization does with a minimum of waste motion and effort. The Metropolitan grinds out its répertoire much more slowly.

The surprising part about it is not so much its speed, but its speed coupled with a high average of performance. They have their off nights at times—all singing companies do—but an off night at Ravinia is likely to be very little off. It is frequently the equivalent of a high effort in another organization.

Opera out there is refreshing, and so far the weather has been ideal for open air performances. So smiles prevail in the Ravinia neighborhood.

"The Secret of Suzanne" and "The Jewels of the Madonna" will be added to the list this week. "Fedora" and "Mignon" are bulletined for the week to come.

The schedule for the present week is appended:

Today at 3:15—Concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Louis Hasselmans conducting; Enrico Tramonti, soloist.

Tonight—"Carmen," with Alice Gentle, Florence Macbeth, Morgan Kingston, Riccardo Stracciari, Louis D'Angelo, Margery Maxwell, Philine Falco, Paolo Ananian, and Giordano Paltrinieri.

Tomorrow night—Moving pictures, "Stranger than Fiction," with Katherine MacDonald as the leading actress, is announced.

Tuesday night—"Faust," with Marie Sundelius, Charles Hackett, Leon Rothier, Graham Marr, Miss Maxwell, and Anna Correnti.

Wednesday night—"L'Amore dei Tre Re," with Frances Peralta, Rothier, Kingston, and Marr.

Thursday afternoon—"Children's Carnival," a story book pageant, produced by Bertha M. Iles. Music by Great Lakes band.

Thursday night—"Rigoletto," with Miss Macbeth, Stracciari, Mario Chamlee, Miss Gentle, and others.

Friday night—"Manon," with Anna Fitziu, Hackett, Rothier, Marr, and others.

Saturday afternoon—Concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

Saturday night—"The Secret of Suzanne," with Miss Macbeth, Stracciari, and Paltrinieri, and "The Jewels of the Madonna," with Miss Peralta, Kingston, Picco, and Miss Correnti.

Miss Garden has reached Monte Carlo, which comes near to marking the end of her summer wanderings. Having visited nearly all the communities where promising opera singers are to be had, with George M. Spangler, business manager of the Chicago opera, at her side to arrange for putting desired signatures on the dotted line, she is now nearly ready to take a welcome and needed rest.

By the time she is ready to replace the managerial cloak on her shoulders there will be what looks like fairly good news for her from the subscription department of the opera company. They are saying over at the Auditorium that subscriptions have been coming in this summer as never before, that the boxes have been going with a rush, that renewals are coming in a way to gladden the managerial heart, that names are appearing on the subscription books that never took up space there before.

One firm is figuring with the company on the question of buying 100 seats a week for the benefit of its employés. It will be in a way a bonus system with opera seats as prizes. The seats will be scattered about in various sections of the theater, and the awards will be made partly with reference to the work done by the individual employé, partly as to his position in the company.

A visitor came in the other day to subscribe for a pair of seats for each

1,000 Pounds Lighter Than Cars of Comparative Wheel-base

Marmon 34 retains supremacy in design. What Advanced Engineering means to owner.

Through simplicity of design, through elimination of needless weight, through the use of lighter, stronger metals, the Marmon 34, since its introduction in 1916, occupies a unique position.

Advanced Engineering brought many important results through light weight. Perfect balance was one. And that means longer life in a car, less vibration, easier operation, greater gasoline mileage, longer life of tires and numerous other desirable qualities. Some affect comfort, some mean economies.

Higher speeds are attainable. One can tour at 50 to 60 miles per hour in a Marmon 34 instead of the usual 35 to 45.

Lighter weight and perfect balance brought greater control—easier acceleration and deceleration. And it brought easier driving as well as increased passenger comfort.

The solution of the weight problem is but one of the many superiorities of the Marmon 34. When one compares it with other cars in the 12 vital tests of performance, one can appreciate then how completely the Marmon 34 has departed from the conventional standards.

performance—not ten Monday or Tuesday or Wednesday nights, but every night in the week for ten weeks. He said that he liked opera, and the performances he did not care to see would be witnessed by his friends.

Whatever may be the outcome of the season in the theatrical world generally, they are maintaining a resolutely optimistic spirit at the Auditorium. If subscriptions continue to the end as they have started, it will be the best thing that could possibly happen to the company. The campaign to make two subscriptions grow where only one grew before will lighten the burden of the guarantors and increase the life and strength of the company. If it could come to pass that the entire Auditorium were sold out in advance for the season, there would be no need for guarantors at all. At least, it would take some pretty wild extravagance for a season to cost more than the house can hold.

M. Dalcroze Writes a Book.

A large book, 334 pages of it, with sixteen more pages of appendix, has been filled by Emile Jaques-Dalcroze on his favorite subject, "Rhythm, Music, and Education." Written at his home in Geneva, Switzerland, it has been translated from the French by Harold F. Rubinstein, and is now issued by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.

In a way it is not a new book. It amounts to a series of partially rewritten papers, the first dating back as far as the year 1898 and from there down to two years ago. There is, however, sufficient unity of subject in all the fourteen chapters to make the volume logical.

M. Dalcroze, as some in this country are aware, is the inventor of the series of bodily movements and gestures that go under the name of eurhythmics. To see them, either in performance or picture, one might think of them as intimately connected with the dance. They are, however, part of his system of musical education, a development on the rhythmic side.

The first part of the book is pretty well taken up with what a great many others teachers have discovered and enlarged upon—namely: that music students do not learn much music in the course of their studies. Harmony students cannot read their exercises; piano students know little outside of the actual piece they are at work upon at the moment; singing students cannot sing; and so on.

M. Dalcroze thinks this is deplorable, as it is. He has a remedy that will be effective as soon as people get around to adopting it, say in a couple of centuries or so. It is, briefly, to catch the students young and give them a prolonged course of ear training and listening to music before they begin a more specialized study.

Later on he develops a theorem that will come as a profound shock in certain circles. It is that music and its study is a joy, not a task to be overcome; not even an ethical uplift, but a joy. And this, too, arises out of increased rhythmic freedom.

Any one who has listened much to young musicians will know that their rhythm is likely to be the weakest part of their performances. M. Dalcroze may or may not have discovered the secret of how to make them feel and express it, but he makes out a persuasive argument. He would carry it through to the professionals; in fact, he objects strongly to certain aspects in professional life, particularly among opera singers and in the ballet. Of the former he says:

"We have only to visit any of our principal opera houses and study the play of the performers, while listening to the orchestra, to perceive at once that there exists a barrier between the orchestra and the stage, and that the orchestral music acts as a mere accompaniment to the song or to the attitude of the actors, and does not really enter into them and inspire their movements. The music rises, swells, breaks out in grandiose resonance; the gesture either does not follow the crescendo or does not convey it to the spectator. The music subsides, whispers, and murmurs as in a dream—the attitude on the stage reveals a muscular tension which is fortissimo!"

Of stage dancing, this: "Bodily movements tend neither to express feelings nor to transpose sound movements. They rarely harmonize at all with the music which is supposed to have evoked them, and the limbs that execute them are not even themselves in harmony. The arms ignore the movements of the legs, or rather they have the air of refusing to follow the latter in their evolutions. They confine themselves to maintaining balance, and might as well belong to a different body. As to the legs, their rôle would appear to consist in repudiating the weight of the body."

If M. Dalcroze has done nothing else, he has pointed out what is the trouble with the operatic and ballet stages. It narrows down to the fact that the opera star knows how to sing and does not know music; the ballerina has studied dancing and is similarly ignorant. The remedy is to know more about music, as he continues to point out.

But on this the book itself must be read.

George Bernard Shaw declines to approve the amusement tax on concerts. Says he: "If Lenin and Trotzky were to appear in England to lecture on the soviet system, and to charge high admission fees, they would have crowded houses everywhere and earn a lot of money, but they would not have to pay a penny of taxes, for their lectures would be called 'demonstrations in political economy.' Why on earth can't we call our concerts 'demonstrations in musical composition' and escape the tax?"

Buenos Aires desires to establish an Argentine symphony orchestra, with Felix Weingartner as conductor. Arthur Nikisch is making his first visit there this summer to conduct a series of twelve symphony concerts with the orchestra that plays for opera at the Teatro Colon.

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, also scouring Europe for artists and scores, is due at Vienna, where, among other things, he will hear Erich Korngold's "Dead City," which is to be brought out at the Metropolitan next winter. The composer will conduct, and Aagaard-Oestvig and Mme. Gutheil-Schoder will sing the chief rôles.

Rosa Raisa and Giacomo Rimini have been singing this summer at Rio de Janeiro. A message from there says that they were approved with complete South American fervor when they appeared in "Aïda."

Jascha Heifetz has been demonstrating the art of the violin and Mischa Levitzki that of the piano in Australia. Extraordinary success and tumults of enthusiasm are announced in the reports.

The national peace carillon proposed by the Arts Club of Washington will be erected. The recent convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at Salt Lake authorized its representatives to join in the incorporation to bring it about, which means that 2,500,000 members of the federation will take an active part in the movement. It will be a memorial to those who perished in the great war. Paul Cret, the designer of the Pan-American building, is making the drawing for the structure, and the site has been selected by John Taylor, a famous bell founder of England. Fifty-four bells will be placed in a tower 300 feet high. They will weigh 154,000 pounds. Two years will be required to make and tune them.

Two morning recitals, both by pianists and both at the Ziegfeld theater, are announced for next week. On Tuesday Rudolph Reuter will play Schumann's "Carnaval" and works by Liszt, MacDowell, Granados, Brahms, Bach, and Chopin. On Thursday Glenn Dillard Gunn will appear in what is announced as the last of the summer recitals at that hall. His program includes works by Liszt, Debussy, Ravel, Chopin, and some arrangements of compositions by Rameau, Couperin, Mattheson, and Bach.

The garden scene from Gounod's "Faust" and the mirror scene from Massenet's "Thaïs" will be presented, under the direction of Richard Hageman, at the Central theater Wednesday afternoon. A contingent of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play.

ments do not make clear, but the New York police and their decreased solicitude as to what you may have on your hip are said to have something to do with the matter. The new "Frolic" is to have more of speed and less of stateliness, they say—more of the jazz and less of the saraband. And—shades of the dear, dead days and "Diamond Jim" Brady!—there's to be a fountain, presided over by no less a person than Pierre Mulilneaux from Monte Carlo, internationally famous for his ability as a mixer—of soda water.

The dramatization of Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street" revealed in Indianapolis last week by Stuart Walker's stock company would appear to have confirmed the suspicion that footlighting of the much-discussed novel was not a task to be ventured upon lightly.

"Those who have read 'Main Street' even with modern discrimination," says the critic of the Indianapolis Star, "must have been quick to detect the difference between Mr. Lewis' ironic and vivid picture of small town life and the stage version of Mr. O'Higgins and Miss Ford.

"Mr. O'Higgins and Miss Ford are experienced and skilled playwrights. In justice to them, final judgment should be withheld, but it is certain that their 'Main Street' is not the 'Main Street' of Mr. Lewis, although he may, as we are informed, have given them the benefit of his impressions. The 'Main Street' of Mr. O'Higgins and Miss Ford is likely to be more diverting to those who have not read Mr. Lewis' book. An effort has been made to bring out the qualities in Carol Kennicott, Erik Valborg, and Dr. Kennicott, and as a play it is melodramatic and entertaining."

Miss Peggy Wood was the Carol Kennicott of the piece; McKay Morris, the debonair sculptor of "Aphrodite," played Dr. Kennicott (there's a contrast for you!), and Tom Powers, whom you saw with Miss Helen Hayes in "Bab," had the rôle of Erik Valborg.

Affairs of the theater are at a low ebb in Europe, says Henry W. Savage, returning from an eight weeks' survey of the continent. French actors, Dutch actors, German, Austrian, and Russian actors—all are seeking theatrical engagements in America, and in preparation for a future of peace and plenty are engaged in the same pursuit: learning to speak English.

"Nearly every actor I interviewed in Europe," related Mr. Savage after his arrival, "told me that his principal concern in life was to learn the English language, so he could find a niche in the American theater. The dramatic and musical agents mention 'knowledge of English guaranteed' as a principal asset for the clients they wish to place. The theatrical season in Europe is the leanest I have seen in thirty-five years' observation."

Even in Paris musical plays are being produced with decided economy of talent and setting, says Mr. Savage. Only ten girls and two men decorate the chorus of one current musical success in Paris. In Vienna, Berlin, and other Austrian and German cities the chorus may be cut down to a half dozen. Only the orchestra remains as it was before the war.

In Vienna, where Mr. Savage remained for a fortnight with Franz Lehar, the composer, discussing plans for the new production of "The Merry Widow," and also arranging for the American presentation of Lehar's latest operetta, "The Blue Mazurka," theatrical fare was especially thin. Musical productions are now made in such a modest way, with scenery from the storehouse and with wardrobe that has seen long service, that it would take transcendent genius in authors and actors to make up for the lack of stage effects.

Willard Mack has written a play for Eddie Foy, including his heirs, entitled "Dad," which will be produced next season.

Miss Geraldine Farrar has been engaged to arrange the incidental Spanish songs in "Don Juan," which opens in New York in September with Miss Farrar's husband, Lou Tellegen, in the leading rôle.

Reduction in Price

SUPREME among the ideas and ideals that have brought to realization the new Cole Aero-EIGHT is engineering perfection.

Temperature, pressure, acceleration, resistance and balance are a few of the mechanical problems constantly being solved by Cole Aero-EIGHT engineers.

Fleet comfort and assured duration of economical performance are fundamentally more significant to those conversant with motor car values than the present reduction in price.

THE CAST.

Sheila Athlone..................Wanda Hawley
Brian Moore......................T. Roy Barnes
Robert Codman Ames..........Bertram Johns
Bertie Ballast........................Walter Hiers

By Mae Tinée.

THIS is lots of fun! It's farce and knows it; it's ridiculous and likes it, and it preens itself over the sparkle and action, with which it overflows.

Look at the cast. T. Roy Barnes, who, if you remember, played in "Scratch My Back," appears as a young author, who writes a story a beautiful young artist (Miss Hawley) is requested to illustrate.

The proofs are sent her. She casts an eye over the tale and shakes a blonde and determined head. She will not draw pictures for such an improbable story.

"No girl who has only known a man for four hours would permit him to kiss her," she says firmly over the phone to her publisher. The author at the time, unknown to her, is sitting at the publisher's left.

The publisher relays the news of the spirited rejection. Whereat the author settles his tie, clamps his hat on his head, and starts out to show Miss Sheila Athlone that it can be done.

At the time the story opens Miss Athlone is engaged to a rich, long, tiresome gentleman with a perpetual cold. She hungers for romance. It is not forthcoming from the rich, long gentleman.

Enters her life, then, an author in disguise. From then on the film is a merry thing, with youth, beauty, and romance being sleuthed by perpetual dullness and an amateur detective impersonated by the plump Mr. Hiers, who is one of the really funny fats of filmdom.

Beautiful scenery, fine photography, and direction do their part toward making the production one that should cause folk in the box office to lift their eyes to the hills and sing songs of praise and thanksgiving.

MISS FLORENCE HEDGES in "UP IN THE CLOUDS" GARRICK

CLOSEUPS

It is declared by folks declared to be experts that Edna Murphy, who stars with Johnny Walker in Fox pictures, has perfect hands. Artists have been known to use them in making pastels.

Betty Blythe will not desert New York for California. She's moved, as the gossips reported, but only from an hotel to an apartment.

When you see "Fifty Candles," that well known screen villain—Bertram Grassby—will be the "heavy" in the piece.

Haven't seen Gladys Hulette for a long time, have you? Well, you're due to witness her soon in the new Barthelmess picture "Tol'ble David."

In "School Days" Wesley Barry, whose secret ambition has been to be all dressed up for "onct," will achieve his desire. He will even be the son of wealthy parents. Dear, dear, "Dinty," what a long way we've come!

House Peters' new little daughter has been christened Peggy. Peggy House. They say he likes the child.

Jewish home life is said by the press agent to be "depicted with unerring realism" in "Shams of Society," due for an early release. It will have even a barmitzvah party. (What's a barmitzvah party?)

Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa is afraid of thunder storms. Which is not a purely Japanese characteristic. So are we.

Philo McCullough, the w. k. screen villain, having tried his hand at directing, decides he'd rather sin for a living and is ready now for any good, new contract.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

JANET W.: Sure, I remember Enid Markey. Address her at 245 West 51st street, New York City. Y'wekum.

COUNTRY GENTLEMAN: Glad you like the column. I like your namesake. Write to Vera Gordon, care of Betts & Fowler, 1482 Broadway, New York. You're, O so welcome!

THUTH A THIMP: Wathn't it thilly? If a cool wave hadn't of come, the welcoming gates of Dunning would have swung ajar and there would have been a new face in the padded cell.

W. J. B.: Realart Studios, Los Angeles, for Wanda Hawley. Y'wekkum!

P. F. M.: If anybody was ever right on the job, you are that somebody. Thanks for writing.

DAN B.: If you're so hot, why do you bother so much? I do NOT play football.

M. M.: Thanks for your information.

MRS. G. O. S.: Hope Mr. Barrymore takes your play. Lamb's club, New York. That was easy to answer.

HANK: That picture sure is funny. Mr. B. hath changed in many ways, it seems. O well, mistakes will happen. Because, of COURSE, he never sat for that photo. Thanks for sending it.

O'BRIEN ADMIRER: No more than I knew at last hearing. Mr. O'Brien sews on his own buttons, so far as we are able to learn.

JOHANNA: It is a comfort to know that you are not feeling sorry for yourself. Of course, it may have been the janitor.

MRS. H. G. S.: Why don't I do some good in this world? I don't know. My idea of doing good, however, does not coincide with yours. My "age, sex, caste, and religion," need not matter. I do not believe in fear as either a weapon or a corrective.

KITTY KAT: Thanks for your lovely letter. Your favorite is to be starred by Lasky.

News of the Stage in New York

NEW YORK, July 23.—[Special.]—Eugene G. O'Neill's "Chris," which was performed out of town more than a year ago, is to reappear this season under the title of "The Ol' Davil." Arthur Hopkins, it is reported, will be the producer.

Miss Marie Doro, after a number of years spent in the films, will be seen again on the stage this season. She will have the leading rôle in "Lilies of the Field," a comedy by William J. Hurlbut. It will be sponsored by a new producing firm.

"The Blue Lagoon," a dramatization of the D. De Vere Stacpoole story, will be offered late in August by the Shuberts and Basil Dean. Over in London the piece was and is a huge success, and Mr. Dean is coming over—personally, as they say—to stage it here.

The dramatization of "Queed" recently tried on the road with Grant Mitchell in the leading rôle has been laid reverently in the moth balls. . . . Another recent road failure was "Mlle. Milo," writen by Frederic and Fanny Hatton and tested by the Shuberts. . . . On the other hand, Owen Davis' "The Detour," also a Shubert property, is said to promise well, and is being recast for New York. . . . "Phi-Phi," the great Parisian success of the past three years, probably will be produced here with Miss Irene Bordoni in the leding rôle. . . . Arthur Richman's "Ambush," the first offering of the Theater Guild at the Garrick, is owned in part by Robert Milton, the stage director. It is said to be a distinct novelty in play writing. . . . Four or five last acts were written for "Six Cylinder Love" during rehearsals before a satisfactory one was found. . . . Zoe Akins' "The Lady in Waiting," frequently reported on the eve of production, is now known as "Greatness." It is a study of the artistic temperament. . . . Avery Hopwood's new play, to be produced by Mr. Woods, is concerned with life in a motion picture studio. The title, which is being withheld at the moment, will be a revelation to those who believe that all of the available titles for Mr. Hopwood's brand of entertainment have long since been used.

"Kiki," with Miss Lenore Ulric as its star, will be produced in Atlantic City tomorrow night by Mr. Belasco, and will come to New York about Sept. 1. It is a French comedy with much incidental music . . . "Flighty," a comedy by J. C. and Elliott Nugent (father and son), will also have its premiere tomorrow night—in Harrisburg. The same authors have also written "Kate." . . . "A Night of Love," comedy by J. C. and Elliott Nugent duced in Atlantic City last week by Edgar McGregor—with extreme quiet . . . Miss Olive Wyndham will have a play of her own next season—"Eliza O'Neil," written by Fred Jackson.

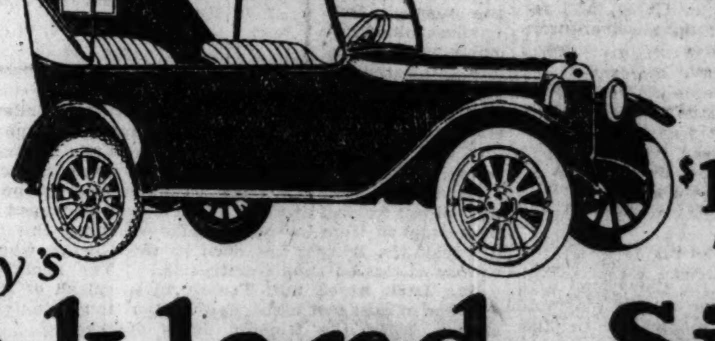
The Hippodrome's experience with motiin pictures was not of a kind to kindle much enthusiasm for a permanent film policy at that theater, and the chances are that the customary spectacle will be presented there this season. The wheels have not yet been set definitely in motion, but R. H. Burnside is giving signs of being about to plunge into feverish activity.

The annual report has been set in motion that Miss May Robson will be seen in New York again. Miss Robson, a comedienne of great popularity on the road, has been but little on Broadway in recent years—largely because her plays have been of the kind that the road appreciates more than does New York. Miss Robson's play for the coming season will be a comedy entitled, "It Pays to Smile," by Ethel Watts Mumford, based upon a Saturday Evening Post story by Nina Wilcox Putnam.

Ethel Kelly's popular story, "Beauty and Mary Blair," has been dramatized by Owen Davis. As yet, however, no definite arrangements have been made for its production.



And NOW the Test of Power

In Today's Oakland Six you will find an abundance of power even for extraordinary conditions—power that flows smoothly and responds instantly to your demands at any speed from two miles an hour to a mile a minute.

Yet this power is delivered with utmost economy. Oakland owners report from 18 to 25 miles per gallon of gasoline.

There are very definite reasons for the high efficiency and unusual economy of Oakland's overhead valve engine. For example, the cylinders are now "honed" to a glassy smoothness providing a perfect working surface for the new light weight aluminum alloy pistons.

Not only are these new pistons very light and tough but by a special process they are made self-adjustable to the cylinder walls, insuring a mechanically perfect piston fit.

Engineering refinements such as these mean to the buyer that in all ranges of power, under all traffic and road conditions, Today's Oakland Six can be relied upon for continuous, economical, trustworthy service.

The car itself is always ready to prove the things we say of it. Call or phone for a demonstration today

Cloverland Reaps Harvest of Early Highway Building

Wonderland of Northwest Shames Illinois by Progress

BY J. L. JENKINS.

IRONWOOD, Mich. — [Special.]— Highways have unlocked 10,000,000 acres of nature's vast northwest treasury to Uncle Sam. They are the key to Cloverland, where nearly 300 years of industry and tireless development has little more than scratched the surface of unlimited mineral wealth.

Nowhere in the world is highway economy better illustrated than in the wonderland of sparkling lakes, endless forests of virgin timber, mountains of iron and copper, and leagues of shore line that makes up this wild paradise. Enchantment lies in Cloveland, but, without the remarkable system of state roads driven through the heart of the wilderness, it would remain buried with the region's hoard of mineral treasure. Transportation has been the greatest work in Cloverland ever since Jean Nicollet set foot in its vast tangle in 1634, and transportation is still the biggest asset in its development.

The story of this great lakes arcadia is a romance filled with the lives of determined pioneers and the broad vision of white men. It was entered at first in the sixteenth century search for a western outlet to Lake Superior, which would lead to China, and for several years the original adventurers contented themselves with puhsing through the miles of wilderness at the edge of the great waterways. Convinced at last that the lakes were a world in themselves, the pioneers turned to trade, and for years overcame the bitter opposition raised by the roving Indian tribes that resented the white man's presence from the first.

In 1668 Father Marquette, patron saint of the northwest, brought comparative peace to the Cloverland with his rugged doctrine of fair play and his fearless work among the Indians. Then the first roads were struck through the forests following the ancient Indian trails from trading post to trading post and branching to find the natural gateway to the lakes. They are in many instances the foundation for the splendid system of smooth highways which carry the business of the northwest to all parts of the world.

In 1812 the war tore the region in its factional battles, and development halted. It was then that the Upper Peninsula became simply a part of America's "unknown territory," belonging to no one in particular and worked by hardy and adventurous souls who saw only its fur trading possibilities. Later Michigan entered a hot dispute with Ohio for territory south of Detroit and refused to accept the Cloverland instead of the disputed ground to the south. It was not until 1835, after Michigan had remained out of the union because of the controversy, that the state accepted the Upper Peninsula and became a state.

Highway and railroad development followed fast in the wake of this step, and the beautiful cities of the north lake land began gigantic undertakings and improvements. Mammoth locks were built to facilitate shipping; the mining activities which had already sifted virgin hills for their hidden iron and copper went forward with a rush; great lumber companies cleared miles of first growth timber and formed the biggest industries of the northwest. Lakes gave up endless supplies of fish, and the territory became the most popular vacation country in America.

Highway building went forward at the same pace and spread hard surfaced roadways in a network about the more populated districts bordering Lakes Michigan and Superior, while lumber roads ran for hundreds of miles through the dense timber tracts.

Then ex-Gov. Osborne was elected on the good roads and tax reorganization ticket and put an army of engineers into the field to properly classify and value Mihcigan's treasure house. They covered every foot of the district and set an accurate estimate on the timber, mineral and agricultural value of the land. Another army was required before the vast interests controlling the Cloverland were made to return a proper amount of taxes to the land.

These taxes were used in laying out and building the magnificent system of state roads that form the Cloverland network. Hard surfacing was pushed throughout the northeastern districts where today some of the finest roads in the country carry freight and passenger traffic equal to the tonnage of the big trunk line railroads which have grown up with the country. In the copper and iron regions the state funds cleared broad avenues through virgin timber and laid down thousands of miles of ore roads, smooth as the best macadam and as efficient in wearing qualities as concrete.

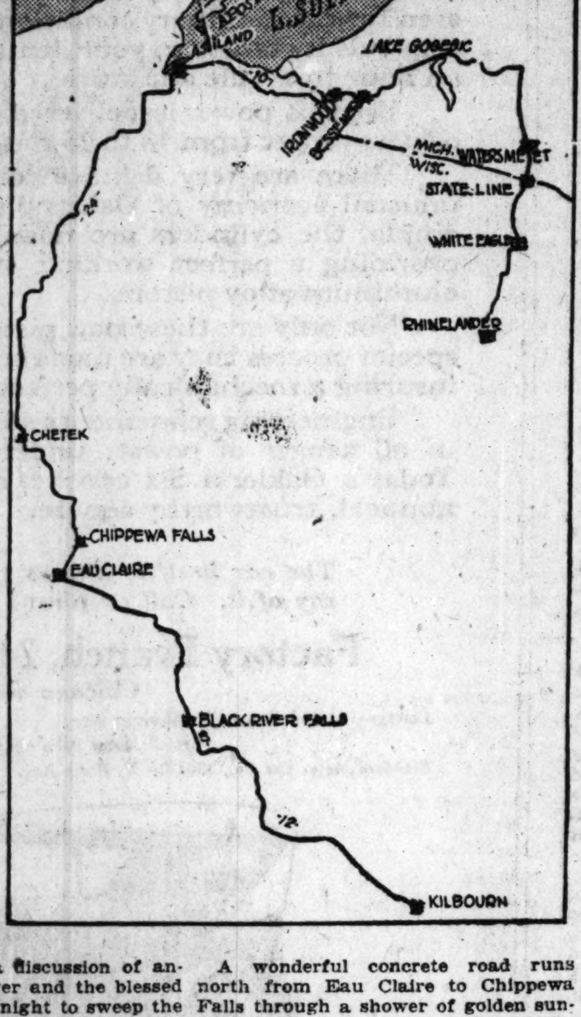
The ore roads are among the most interesting of the highway system. Picture the Cloverland trail, dropping down from the iron heights at Ironwood and Bessemer and winding in and about the untouched mineral mountains that step down toward Lake Michigan. The road heads straight into and through the timberland where much of the territory has not yet been touched by civilization. Mile after mile it runs under a solid canopy of green with the pines towering on both sides above the hemlock, birch, and hardwood growth.

In this country most of the veneer of civilization is eliminated. Like its vast waters and gigantic hillsides, it is hard and clean and uncompromising. The essentials alone survive, and for years highways have been known as the most important of the essentials. While Illinois and other states of the rich corn belt have been haggling for years about the cost and difficulty of road building through territory alive with prosperous farms, the Cloverland, with a log hut here and there and a rude lumber camp the business center, has wrought the seemingly impossible in road building. It has overcome the great forest, iron hills, and rushing streams to lay its life bringing roads, and it is reaping the benefit now for its labors.

TALES of the TRAIL

by Jenks

A circle tour of Wisconsin has brought The Tribune's party of memorial tree promoters through practically every district of the state where trees have proved the greatest natural treasure. Wisconsin is awaking to a new realization of her tree wealth through the national memorial campaign, and is preparing to replant her magnificent highway system with characteristic thoroughness and vigor. This wandering story attempts to picture some of the beauties of the state's vacation land.



THE PINES.

THURSDAY, July 14.—Walt and Avery are up and stirring to catch the clean, sweet tang of balsam riding in this morning from the the north. Doc has just joined the party, carrying a badly tattered inner tube, and the three are depe in a discussion of another carbon remover and the blessed rain that came last night to sweep the cobwebs of heat from Tomah, Frank King's home town. Gasoline alley was all but washed away in the deluge that swept in from the north and west to break the longest hot spell in the history of this bustling countryside.

The Lark nosed into Tomah in a smother of dust last night, and ran for shelter, while the friendly doors of Tomah's famous little hotel opened to THE TRIBUNE party. From Kilbourn the yellow ribbon of No. 12 highway unwinds itself across rolling fields of golden wheat to disappear in distant, haze capped hills. Mile after mile the smooth clay and gravel dances ahead to skirt miniature bluffs of the Wisconsin dairy land and fling itself up and over the long slopes that overlook leagues of pictureland country.

We headed out of Tomah over slippery clay that climbed laboriously to the top of the world through fresh washed meadows. Twenty miles ahead they shade off into a wild tangle of spruce growth and lose themselves in the dreary depths of the Winnebago Indian reservation. There the proud highway forgets its education and rolls down into deep sand. Through miles of burned stumps and ragged timber it winds into deep ruts. Its hair is tangled. It needs a shave. It is a bad, bold road with Indian written all over it, and it remains bad and worse until a sudden turn to the north brings it into contact with a dignified brother road, No. 27. The two join forces and run decorously into Black River Falls, where they climb a score of steep hills in a typical trading post. Northward to Eau Claire smooth going makes a delightful run to the Chippewa valley, center of the old lumbering days.

A wonderful concrete road runs north from Eau Claire to Chippewa Falls through a shower of golden sunshine and over a prize stretch of the Yellowstone trail. A giant rainbow was draped across the eastern sky and raced the fast gravel road north to Chetek, where the lake country begins. The boom of restless frogs and the splash of lazy, heat logged pike make music tonight across the reed bordered lake.

Friday, July 15.—A balky generator, the first minor trouble in nearly 3,000 miles of running, brought a morning of happy tinkering before we headed out again over fair to good gravel and heavy, new work into Rice Lake, the town with the fifty foot main street and crowding lumber mills. Here we turned back south for a few miles and picked up excellent gravel and graded clay over "rocking chair road," highway 64 to the west. Miles of rolling hills take the highway into the heart of the raspberry and musky lake country through Ladysmith, and a turn north into county trunk line 111 discovers probably the best graded dirt road in the world. It winds through wooded country into Phillips, famous as the home of the fighting musky, Dan Sullivan's sample room, and "tunic fish" salad. The latter rare dish is listed prominently on the bills of fare in the leading restaurant.

Saturday, July 16.—Clear as green glass the icy waters of Lake Superior are rolling in tonight across Chebomnicon bay from the shadowed mystery of pine clad heights to the north and the dim, lovely outlines of the Apostle isles. The perfume of the pines is everywhere. The stillness of vast woodlands is broken only by an occasional clang of hoisting derricks on Ashland's great lake piers and the murmur that comes now and again from the sinister powder plants far across the bay

To the south for seventy-five miles the high road dips under patches of the old pine forest, where a few short years ago first growth trees held absolute dominion. Down and down it dips into the valley of White river, where busy badgers work about old wooden bridges, to climb steeply over a five mile grade to the beautiful ridge of High Bridge. There the magnificent panorama of the old northwest spreads itself out for twenty miles in each direction. We make the ridge at sunset and were rewarded with a view unequaled anywhere east of the Rockies for loveliness. Ashland, the gateway to the Apostle islands, and one of the busiest trading centers of northern Wisconsin, goes to bed early and leaves the bay to its own cold devices.

Sunday, July 17.—A porcupine is waddling aimlessly near the reedy shore of Gogebic lake. Three dainty deer have broken from the dense timber to the south for a drink from the ice cold spring that comes up through unknown depths of iron rock, and a great owl is complaining far back in the woods behind the clearing. Everywhere the murmur of the great north woods comes on the night wind across miles of tangled wilderness, where logging huts and an occasional burned out campfire alone mark the hand of man.

We took the Cloverland trail from Ashland this morning and climbed into the heart of the great Gogebic iron range. Past Ironwood and Bessemer with their giant mines and into the home of the original pine, the red ore road dips and climbs to disappear under a canopy of green at timber line. Mile after mile it runs straight through the big woods without sight or sound of man. At each turn one expects to see a thriving city or at least a northland trading post intercepting the remarkable boulevard, but each new turn brings new vistas of giant trees. The road is one of the most remarkable manifestations of highway progress in the country, and one that motorists should seek out in any journey to the northwest. We are housed tonight in the old resort hotel that for half a century has marked the foot of beautiful Gogebic lake, with the forest primeval bending down on every sido and civilization ages removed.

Monday, July 17.—Thirty miles of the same red ore road took us into Watersmeet, depot of the north woods, this morning. There we turned south through miles of burned over forest to the Wisconsin state line and through a country literally speckled with lakes. It is here that the tragedy of big fires is felt at every turn, and here, too, that the posted warnings against tourist carelessness and campfire care must be heeded to the letter. A fire in this country means the devastation of hundreds of acres, and those who run may read of the tragedies in vast cemeteries of charred stumps. and dead giants, killed by careless settlers and more careless campers. From State Line through Eagle River to Rhinelander, the run is a succession of picturesque lakes and wooded hills, swarming with northbound tourists. Every hill is kept busy these days brushing flivvers from its brow, and every garage and resort hotel is reaping a rich harvest. Heat throughout the middle west has made the biggest motor pilgrimage in history, and the north woods are receiving more than their share.

22,000 Miles of Improved Roads in U. S. System

National Network Carries 9,000,000 Motor Vehicles

THE mileage of federal aid roads which have been built or are now under construction is nearly sufficient to encircle the globe. This is the record of work accomplished since July, 1916, when the federal government first stepped in to aid in the enormous task of building highways that are now called upon to carry more than 9,000,000 motor vehicles plus a very substantial horse-drawn traffic in the forty-eight states.

The federal aid law is well named. The department of agriculture has given the broadest possible construction to the law for the purpose of providing the greatest mileage of highways suited to the traffic to be carried over them at the minimum expense. An analysis by the bureau of public roads of the projects under contract shows that all types of roads, from the graded earth road up to the finest paved surfaces, have been built.

On March 1 of this year 22,030 miles of highway, extending into every state, had been completed or were in process of construction, says the bureau, at a total estimated cost of $361,946,868.

The states initiate the road projects, but before federal aid is granted an engineer of the bureau makes an inspection of the roads to be improved, studies the local conditions, consults with the state highway department, and no projects are approved which are not considered suited to the conditions to be met.

Many popular fallacies exist as to road improvement, and there have been many misconceptions as to the types of roads on which federal aid funds may be used. Properly built earth roads, say specialists of the department, are the fundamental requirement in all highway improvement. Regardless of the material or type of surfacing which is to be placed, the preparation of the roadbed requires the highest engineering skill and experience. The department considers that the use of adequate sums for the securing of proper location, thorough drainage, permanent bridges and culverts, and the elimination of railroad crossings is demanded if enduring improvements are to result.

On Call.

The day of the stranded motorist, marooned in desolate spots of rural Missouri, will be at an end within the coming year if plans now under consideration by William King, general manager of the Automobile club of St. Louis, mature.

The proposal is to place a telephone along the roadsides of the main highways of Missouri at each milepost, these telephones to be operated by central exchanges, and to be used by members of the club, or associated clubs, through the instrumentality of a private key which will open the telephone boxes to members.

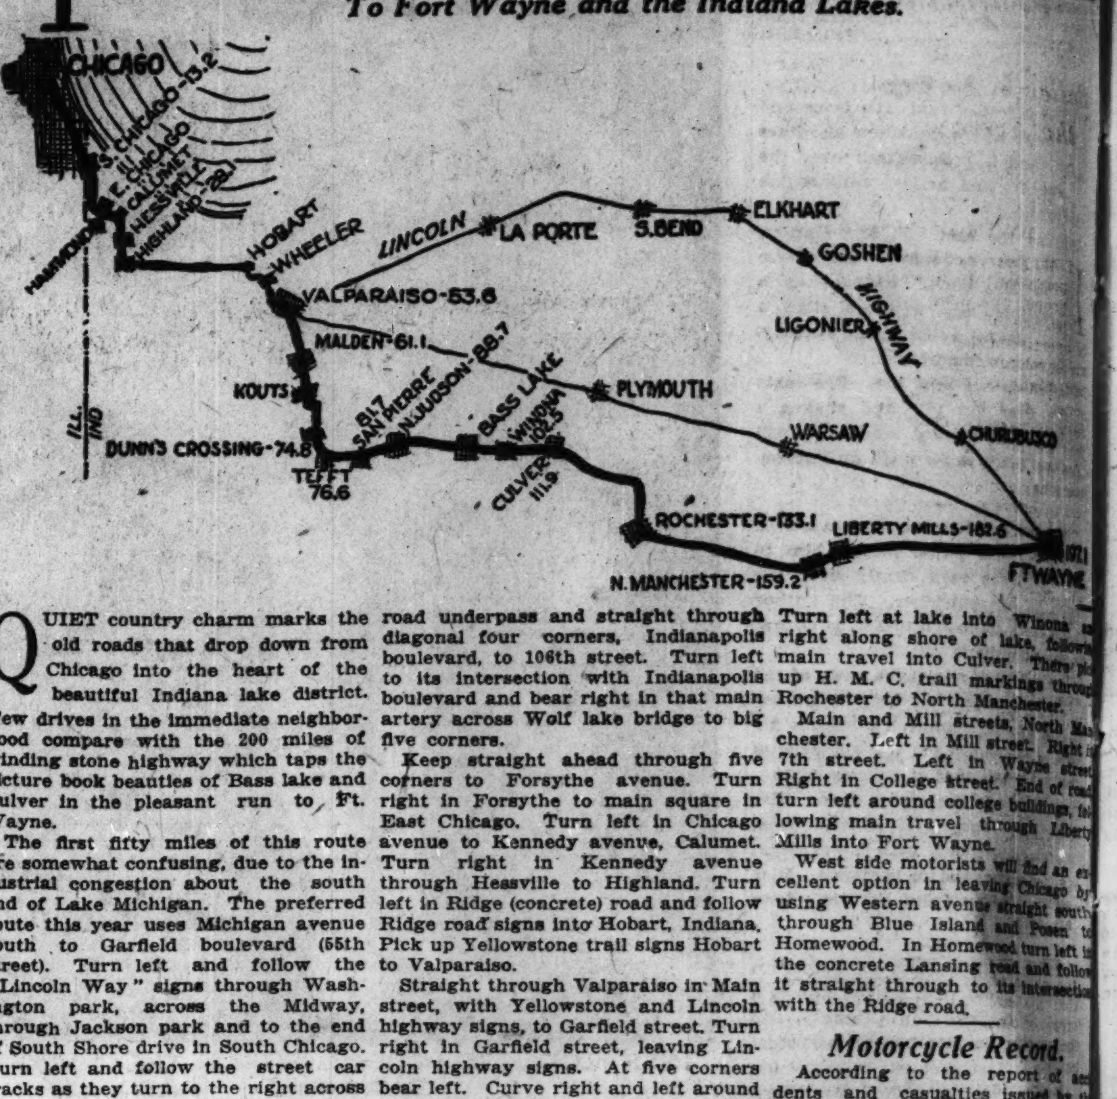
The system contemplates 300 telephones between St. Louis and Kansas City, and a total of 1,600 telephones on the main highways connecting the larger centers of population. Under such a system, King points out, the motorist who has met either tire or engine trouble on the roadway will always be within a half mile of telephone station, which will connect him with a service station in the nearest town.

In Uruguay.

Of the 10,134 motor cars in the entire country of Uruguay, 5,702 are found in the capital city of Montedido.

Tribune Tours

To Fort Wayne and the Indiana Lakes.



QUIET country charm marks the old roads that drop down from Chicago into the heart of the beautiful Indiana lake district. Few drives in the immediate neighborhood compare with the 200 miles of winding stone highway which taps the picture book beauties of Bass lake and Culver in the pleasant run to Ft. Wayne.

The first fifty miles of this route are somewhat confusing, due to the industrial congestion about the south end of Lake Michigan. The preferred route this year uses Michigan avenue south to Garfield boulevard (55th street). Turn left and follow the "Lincoln Way" signs through Washington park, across the Midway, through Jackson park and to the end of South Shore drive in South Chicago. Turn left and follow the street car tracks as they turn to the right across town. Cross the railroad, still with the tracks, and turn left with them at the four corners beyond. Keep straight ahead, leaving tracks, to end of road at steel mill. Turn right along high fence. Now in Buffalo avenue. Keep ahead to 92d street bridge. Turn left across steel bridge and follow car tracks in Ewing avenue through railroad underpass and straight through diagonal four corners, Indianapolis boulevard, to 106th street. Turn left to its intersection with Indianapolis boulevard and bear right in that main artery across Wolf lake bridge to big five corners.

West side motorists will find an excellent option in leaving Chicago by using Western avenue straight south through Blue Island and Posen to Homewood. In Homewood turn left in the concrete Lansing road and follow it straight through to its intersection with the Ridge road.

Motorcycle Record.

According to the report of accidents and casualties issued by the Texas railroad commission, the motorcycle is the safest means of transportation, at least in so far as railroad grade crossings are concerned. The motorcycle shows the lowest percentage of accidents of any of the vehicles listed. Even the number of horse drawn vehicles involved in such accidents outnumber motorcycles, the report shows

BY HIGH SPEED.

It has been aptly said that the importance of lubrication to the proper operation and continued existence of the motor car cannot be overemphasized. One who follows the developments in the automobile field might be tempted to think the present generation of car owners had been thoroughly educated in this, but then he finds one making some mistake in lubrication that shows that many car owners still do not know the real meaning of the subject.

For several years past no wise motorist has used grease as a lubricant for his transmission, yet many car owners who ought to know better still employ this heavier lubricant in this location. Grease cannot flow to the bearing surfaces and in the transmission the gears cut a clean path through the grease when it is cold and run practically unlubricated thereafter. In addition, grease has the unfortunate characteristic of carrying dirt and foreign matter that it may pick up. It has distinct drawbacks as a lubricant in any location, especially in cold weather, when it ought never to be used. In winter the grease is almost certain to become packed against the walls of any case in which it is used, while the gears operate entirely dry.

When grease is used in cups, it has the characteristic of getting hard, so that the cup cannot be turned down properly, and little lubrication gets to the bearing surface for which it is intended.

On practically all cars of any but the most recent vintage grease cups are fitted at various locations. If the owner desires to substitute oil as a lubricant for the grease, he has practically to replenish the cups every day. In many cases this would be worth the increased labor.

On the other hand, it may be possible to replace the grease cups with large oil cups having gradual feed. Some of the newer car models have been designed with central lubricating points and with wick oiling devices, which require replenishment only once or twice a season. At any rate the substitution of oil for grease for almost any lubrication service will be a benefit to the parts affected.

Naturally different parts of the mechanism require different lubricants, that is to say, different grades of oil. For the gears, the transmission, differential and rear axle a heavy oil will be the most satisfactory lubricant. Other parts will do better on a cylinder oil. For the average car two grades of oil will pretty well take care of all the lubrication needs.

The last year or so has seen a number of extremely ingenious oil cups offered to the motoring public, some of them embodying a gradual feed, achieved by means of constricted passages that allow the oil to leak out only by degrees. Others employ what is known as wick feed, in which the oil is carried up in a wick and fed gradually to the part needing lubrication. For such places as the shackle bolts of the springs, the cross shafts of the brakes, the universal joints, in some types this makes a satisfactory arrangement.

It has always been the custom to lubricate universal joints by means of grease or graphite, because there is great difficulty in keeping oil in the joint. This part moves with great rapidity when the mechanism is in operation and needs the most effective lubrication. Recently it has been found possible to lubricate the universals by means of oil fed through wicks. In many cases this change would have to be the result of altered design, which the manufacturer is loath to do because of the cost.

Wick feed has the double advantage of being economical as well as efficient. In operation the oil travels up the wick by capillary attraction, just as it does up a lamp wick, and is discharged upon the surface requiring lubrication. The oil spreads itself all over the whole surface, and really this method is the next best thing to having the parts run in oil. The wick oil cup does not require frequent filling, and another advantage of the system is that dirt or foreign matter, even if it is present in the oil, cannot make its way to the bearing surface.

The question of obtaining adequate lubrication is one to which engineers have given and are giving almost constant thought. Some of them have even attempted the negative solution of the problem by employing bushings made of wood or of metal that do not require lubrication. In most of these latter there is a certain proportion of graphite, which is intended to act as a lubricant, just as the soapstone griddles our grandmothers used to have would bake cakes without the application of outside grease.

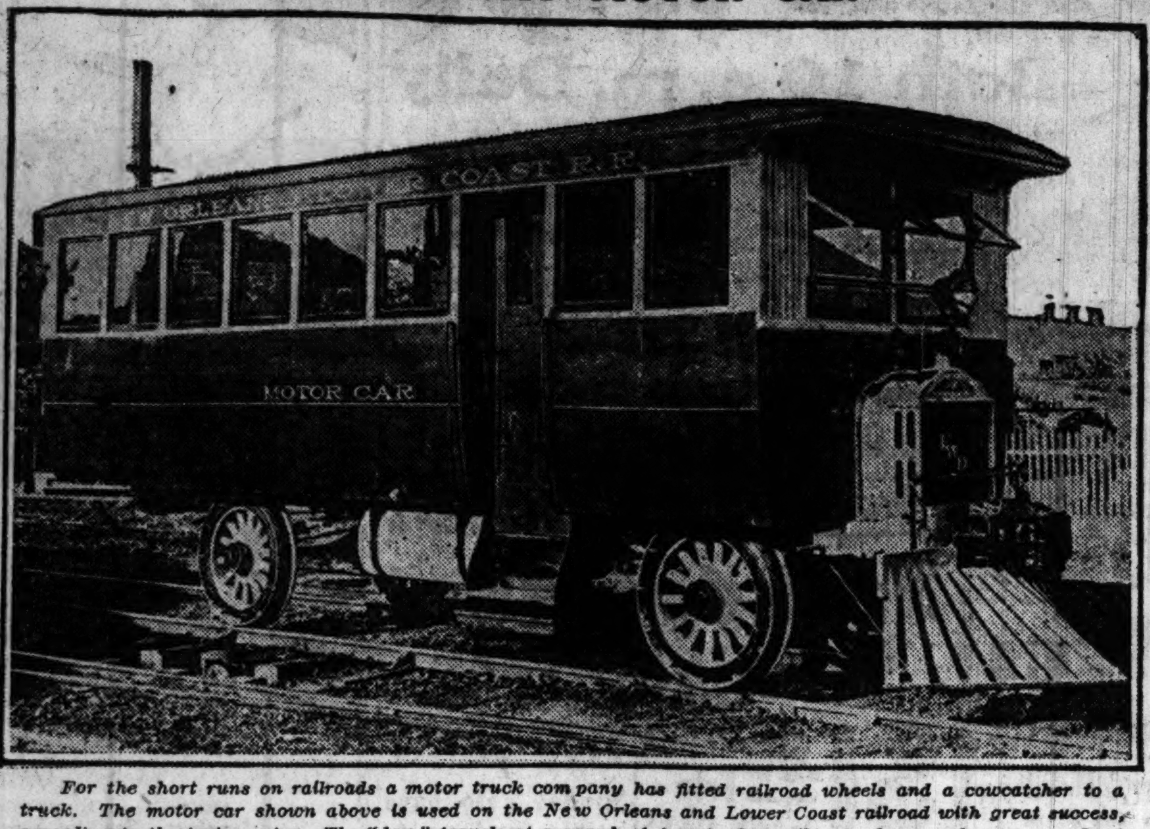
These lubricantless bearings serve well for certain parts of the car's mechanism, but where there is intense movement they are scarcely up to the work. However, at that, they probably are better than grease cups.

Many engineers believe that eventually we shall have a car that embodies a single lubrication system, feedIing all parts of the mechanism. In that case, all the owner would have to do would be to fill up a single central reservoir. In fact, a car approaching that ideal was exhibited at the shows of a couple of years ago. In the meantime the owner who desires to treat his car with all possible tenderness and get out of it all the mileage and service that there is in it will substitute oil lubricants for grease, even at the expense of installing new cups of the gradual or wick feed type. The change will be worth while.

In Athens.

Athenian coppers have a rather unique method of getting and punishing speeders. The town cannot afford motorcycle cops, so each one is equipped with a plank studded with nails. If he sees a car coming up the lane that shows any sign of not keeping the lawful pace, he throws his plank out on the road. If the car is speeding, its tires are punctured. If not, it can stop before it reaches the plank.

A RAILWAY MOTOR CAR



For the short runs on railroads a motor truck company has fitted railroad wheels and a cowcatcher to a truck. The motor car shown above is used on the New Orleans and Lower Coast railroad with great success, according to the trainmaster. The "bus" travels at a speed of twenty-five miles an hour and can run about eight miles on a gallon of gasoline.

St. Clair Refuses to Let Politics Hinder Progress

BLOOMINGTON, Ill.—[Special.]—St. Clair county, instead of talking and dreaming about improved highways, is displaying action. It was the first county in Illinois to start the distribution of oil this year.

D. O. Thomas, county engineer in charge, has produced effective results. It was in 1917 that St. Clair became aroused to the importance of improved highways. A bond issue of $1,500,000 was voted for the improvement of the state aid roads, but the war and other conditions have prevented the building of the proposed hard surfaces. However, the county graded and built permanent bridges for ninety miles of the bond issue road system and maintains the entire stretch as earth road under the supervision of the county engineer. Hills have been cut down, dangerous curves eliminated, low places filled, and other permanent earth grading performed.

St. Clair county good roads promoters maintain that the earth foundation is really the only permanent part of a hard road, as it stays forever, while the slab of concrete will wear out sooner or later and will have to be replaced.

St. Clair county, in addition to the grading of ninety miles of the heavily traveled highways, has devised a system of maintenance which combines the use of a patrolman for certain sections and a central gang from the county seat. This gang is largely made up of workhouse prisoners, and material and supplies are handled in army trucks furnished by the government and secured from the Illinois department of public works and building. Each patrolman is asigned to twelve miles of road, and he is provided with a tractor, a grader, and a maintenance machine. Each patrolman has under him farmers along the section, who have contracts to drag the road at regular intervals as designated by the patrolman.

In addition the county is also oiling the roads, purely, however, as a maintenance proposition and not regarding the use of oil as being the solution of the hard road problem.

Out of War.

An Omaha man in an army camp, watching some machine guns in action, mused: "If these machine gun chassis can stand this terrible abuse, why can't they be used for something more constructive than bullet pumpers?"

On his return this young man worked to establish motorcycles as standard delivery for grocers, cleaners, tire service companies and for pickups in the jobbing and wholesale business.

As a part of his plan, he bought chassis in lots of fifty and built various kinds of bodies by the dozens.

Omaha became the greatest motorcycle delivery city in the country, as a result, and the young man with the bright idea is glad that Uncle Sam gave him time to think things over.

Auto Art.

A further drive on the people of the west to show the utilitarian value of motor transportation has been begun by the National Automobile Dealers' association. The association last week sent into the western states Ezra W. Clark of the Clark Equipment company with the new famed series of paintings which formed a distinguished feature of the national automobile shows and which depict "The Spirit of Transportation."

Quaint Quebec Is Mecca for Many Summer Tourists

Adirondack Route Proves Most Popular Run in Northeast

THE well kept stone highway the entire distance from New York to Montreal is making the Adirondack-Montreal-Quebec tour one of the most delightful panoramic automobile trips in the world. All a motorist has to do is to keep to the perfect state highway and he will journey through the most fascinating section of the Adirondack mountains right into Montreal and thence to quaint old Quebec.

The trip is replete with pleasant surprises and memory markers. The well kept state highway skirts forests and streams, rivers and lakes, wilderness and metropolis. From start to finish it is brimful of pleasure, as well as instruction and novel experiences. Extremes seem to meet at almost every turn. From the rush and turmoil of city life, with its brick and mortar confines, to the freedom of the great outdoors gives one a taste of the newer and better life, while at the journey's end the automobilist is captivated by the proverbial hospitality extended by quaint old Quebec.

One has only to drive along the beautiful highways of Quebec city, to look at its monuments raised in honor of the country's pioneers and men of note—Champlain, Cartier, Maisonneuve, De Salaberry, Wolfe, and so on—to see the hundreds of wayside shrines that dot the highways and byways throughout the countryside and the fine churches that rear their stately spires in every parish, to realize that the French Canadians, who form the major portion of the population, draw their inspiration to progress from higher things than the events of the moment.

The famous King Edward highway, which has its northern terminus in Montreal, links up with the Adirondacks, the White and Green mountains, and the well known routes in New York and the New England states, while the new Montreal-Quebec highway, which runs for much of its distance along the north shore of the St. Lawrence, forms an ideal means of travel between the metropolis and the capital.

From Quebec city the motorist can easily make many enjoyable trips. He can run down to Montmorency falls, alongside of which is Kent house, once the residence of royalty, or go on to Ste. Anne de Beaupre, famous for its churches and shrines, its Scala Sancta, and its monasteries, a quiet little town to which thousands of tourists wend their way every year.

Detailed description of the different routes that may be used to reach Quebec and full information may be obtained from the tourists' bureau of Montreal, 909 New Birks building, Montreal, Canada.

TOUR BOOK OUT

THE Automobile Club of America has just published its 1921 edition of the "Associated Tours Guide." This convenient handbook of motor travel is now in its eighth year of publication and it becomes more complete with each issue. The present edition contains all the necessary information on 30,000 miles of selected highways covering all the favorite touring sections of New York, New England, southern Canada, Long Island, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, and right on throught the south to Miami on the east coast of Florida and Tampa on the west coast. The middle west is covered and two transcontinental routes are given; one goes by way of Newark, Easton, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, Omaha, Cheyenne, Salt Lake City, Reno and Sacramento to San Francisco; the other passes through Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Wheeling, Columbus, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, La Junta, Las Vegas, Albuquerque, Flagstaff and San Bernardino to Los Angeles.

The Chain Bath.

The silent chains that are becoming popular for camshaft and other drives should be thoroughly cleaned every time the motor is taken down. The chain should first be soaked in a bath of kerosine and then be brushed with a stiff brush to get off all dirt and grit. After cleaning, the chain should be dried and then washed in hot water to which a little washing soda has been added. Next the chain should be submerged in a bath of moderately heavy lubricating oil and allowed to remain until the lubricant has reached every cranny of the bearing surface. It is a good idea to have this oil warmed through before immersing the chain in it, as this thins it a little and permits it more readily to reach hidden surfaces.

Discrimination.

Application blanks for the Paris automobile show, recently received in this country, bar American cars from participating on the same terms as other major countries.

The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce feels that this is a step backward in international relations, especially as the American automobile industry has been petitioning congress to reduce the present tariff on all imported cars from 45 to 30 per cent.

S. A. Miles, show manager for the N. A. C. C., is now in Europe and will take up the question of this discrimination with the French automobile authorities.

A Week's Cruise to Duluth & Return

On the Big New Cruising Ship
"North American"

$72.50
Meals & Berth Included

A WEEK OF JOYFUL RECREATION AND SIGHTSEEING

Chicago to Duluth and Return Via Lake Michigan, Mackinac Island, Locks at the "Soo," Beautiful St. Mary's River, Portage Canal, Lake Superior, Lake Huron and Georgian Bay (30,000 Islands).

Think of the pleasure on a warm, sultry day of leaving the heat and cares of the city behind you and gliding out into the cool, refreshing waters for a week's cruise through four great lakes — over 2,200 miles of beautiful scenery, shoreline, islands, rivers and bays—care-free, you will give yourself up to a spell of enjoyment—you will eat well and sleep well, and after a too quickly ending week you will return home thoroughly refreshed and invigorated. If you enjoy seeing places of interest, the numerous stops and short cruising distances from the shore, during the greater part of the trip, offer sights of wonder and beauty that are sure to please you. You can be quiet and secluded, if desired, or if you enjoy a real good time, there is the continual round of deck games, cards, etc., during the day, and dancing, musicales and other entertainments in the evening.

Combined with all these pleasures, you will have conveniences and comforts on this magnificent steamer equal to those on the best Atlantic liners. The dining service and food are equal to that of the best hotels. Steamer equipped with wireless and every modern device for safety of passengers.

The "North American" leaves Chicago every Monday at 1:30 P. M. (Central Time), traveling directly to Mackinac Island, where ample time is allowed to drive around the island and visit the many historical points of interest. Leaving Mackinac Island, she enters the beautiful St. Mary's River, noted for its 50 miles of wonderful scenic features, and stops at Sault Ste. Marie. Here you pass through the big canal and see the immense ships raised and lowered through the locks, next to the largest in the world. Leaving the "Soo," you enter Lake Superior and head via Portage Canal for Houghton (Hancock), home of the famous copper mines; then on to Duluth.

After spending several hours in that city of beautiful parks and homes, the return is made again through Sault Ste. Marie and into Lake Huron, then into Georgian Bay, passing close to many of the 30,000 Islands and stopping at Perry Sound. From there directly to Mackinac Island and Chicago, arriving home Monday morning—a week's vacation that brings you back rested and feeling fine.

Call or write for pamphlet and full information about this wonderful trip.

A Sweeping Final Clearance

Ridiculous Reductions on All Odd Pieces

THIS week's sale—in which we are making still greater reductions on prices already greatly reduced—vividly demonstrates the truth of the above statement.

Our July Clearance Sale—comparing it with past sales—has been a success. All who have visited it know this—they know of the interest and enthusiasm created by the unusual values.

Owing to the unbearably hot weather, however, which made shopping impossible for many, the sale has not cleared out all the merchandise which we must sell before next season.

Hence, additional reductions upon reductions—to an extent that has never been reached before. Every bit of this merchandise is choice merchandise and every department is included. While the lines are very broken, the assortment is very great and the values wonderful—for example—

An exceedingly smart Sapphire Duvetyn Evening Wrap, with flying squirrel collar, which was $350, is now $95. There is a gray Tricolette Sport Suit, with tucked coat and skirt, which was originally $65, now $15. An attractive Afternoon Dress of brown net and taffeta, was originally $175, now $75. A Russia Calf Oxford, which was formerly priced $12.50, is now $2.95.

Read carefully the offering of each department. Space limits us from giving more than a few items, but there are many, many more.

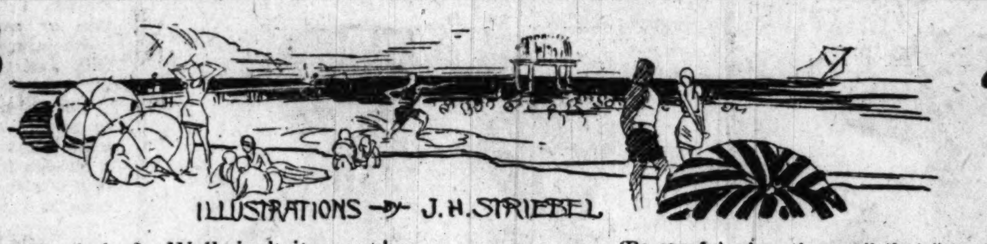
THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy



ILLUSTRATIONS —by— J. H. STRIEBEL

They All Go Bathing!

PROLOGUE.

Bathing beaches are populated by two herds of homo: bathers and beachers . . . these subdivide into Dumbbells and Dizzies . . . Dumbbells are what cause the iris to contract in pain and severely try one's faith in Genesis; while the frabjous, delectable, and soul satisfying apparition presented by the Dizzies is a balm to the swooning orb and plays upon the optic nerves as on a harp of a thousand strings . . . Gentlemen, be seated.

Scene I.—"You Watch the Baby."

The Potters, Pa, Ma, Bill, Mamie, and the Baby, have come down to the cool waters to bedew their parched frames and minister to their molten minds; to lave and loaf and let the world boil by. Pa, the family beast of burden, is carying the umbrella, the Baby's clothes, and whatever the other members of the family do not want to carry. The scene opens with that time honored discussion between Pa and Ma: who will take the first turn watching the Baby. Bill is already in . . . Mamie is just melting into Pose Number Three . . .

PA: You watch the Baby while I take a dip,
Then I'll come and mind him while you make a trip.

MA: O, I'm too hot to wait up here;
You hold 'im first while I go, dear.

PA: Well, come with me and let 'im stay.;
He can't wander so far away.

MA: You'll have to stay where you can see . . .
D'ye think this suit looks good on me?

PA (lying like a gentleman and a husband):
It looks just fine, it looks just fine—
Whaddye think of this suit of mine?

MA (lying like a lady and a wife):
It looks just fine on you, my dear;
A person would think it was bought this year.

PA: This year? Ha, ha, likewise ho, ho . . .
Why, I bought this suit five years ago . . .

MA: It doesn't look nearly as old as that . . .
(wistfully)
Do you think this suit makes me look too fat?

PA (gallantly):
Why, of course it doesn't . . . come on, let's go.

MA (timorously):
I think I'll wait for a minute or so . . .
(brightly)
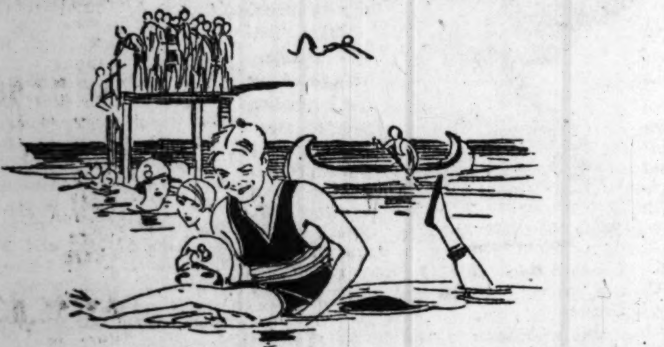
I'm scared the Baby might wander away—
You go and swim for a while . . . I'll stay.

(Pa shuffles down to the water, while Ma arranges the Baby on a quilt under the umbrella . . . near by sits a neighbor, Mrs. Redlin, with her baby, aged two.)

MRS. REDLIN:
If it isn't Mrs. Potter . . . and the baby, too!
What a dear little baby! . . . coo-coo . . . coo-coo.



"Now, Bill, behave."

MA: Is that your baby? Well, isn't it sweet!
And how is the darling standing the heat?

MRS. REDLIN:
My dear, he's a perfectly wonderful child,
But this terrible weather is driving 'im wild.

MA: The poor little dears can't stand much heat,
And you must be careful of what they eat . . .

MRS. REDLIN:
You know it's his second summer, too.
I'll be so glad when the child pulls through.

MA: The second summer is always the worst.
Does he . . . etc., etc.

(All of which is too intimate to interest any but mothers, and how do we know that you, gentle or wild, as the case may be, reader, are a mother?)

(Some minutes later):

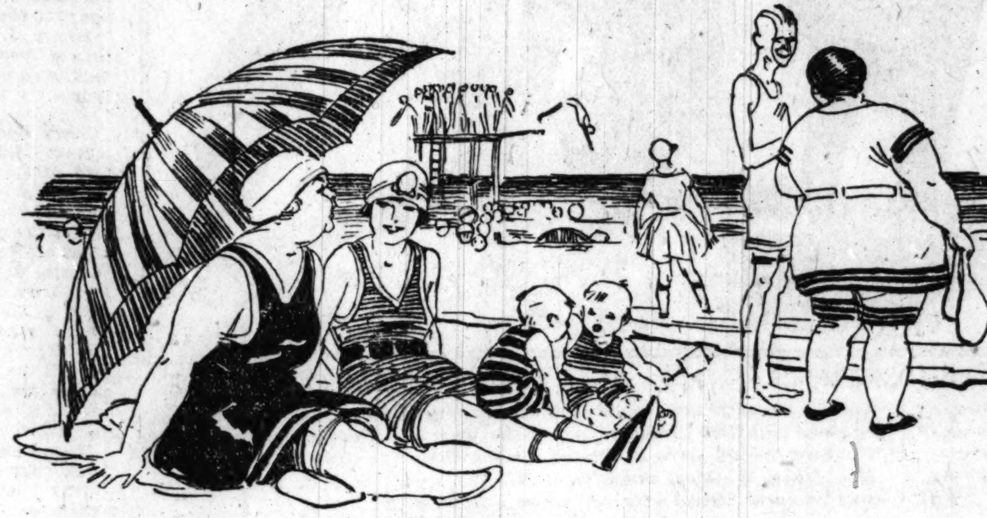
MA: Ain't it disgraceful the way they dress?
They couldn't get by with very much less.
O, lookit that woman . . . isn't she fat!
Thank God I'm not as fat as that . . .



"Thank God, I'm not as fat as that . . ."

There is no comfort like unto that which descends upon the soul of the plump lady who sees a plumper lady on the same beach . . . it gives her a new, glad courage . . . in fact, it was the hope of seeing such a person that brought both of them there.

Scene II.—"Now, Bill, Behave."

Bill is engaged in that labor of love so dear to the young male: teaching the female of the species to swim. This particular, after a fashion, lady has been taking lessons since the lake was a puddle . . . Bill is but the newest of a long line of earnest instructors . . . but Elsie toils not, neither does she swim, and yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed as is Elsie, nor the Queen of Sheba, either . . . learning to swim is one course the dear girls will never take from a correspondence school.

ELSIE: O-oo-h, hold me up, here comes a wave . . .
Here, let me down . . . now, Bill, behave.

BILL: C'mon, you don't try hard enough—
Kick out your heels . . . there, that's the stuff.

ELSIE: I'll never learn to swim, I see . . .
Don't you feel sorry for poor little me?

(Be careful when they pull that "poor little me" stuff. "You're so big and strong" comes next.)

BILL: You're getting along just great, old top.
Now kick once more . . . that's bully . . . stop.
You swam that all alone, you know—
Say, I'm a teacher—ain't it so?

ELSIE: I love to see you plow along,
But then you're O, so big and strong.

(What did we tell you? The dear old brother of contented cows.)

Now hold me up, I'm gonna float.

BILL (to canoeists):
Hey, gwan away with that doggone boat!
You've got all the rest of the lake, you dub . . .
Gwan now, beat it from here with that tub . . .

ELSIE (round-eyed with admiration—at least that's what Bill thinks):
Why, I'd be afraid to bawl 'em like that.

(Yes, she would!)

BILL (bravely):
They'd better not monkey with me, that's flat;
I'd take the both of them to the mat.

ELSIE (coyly):
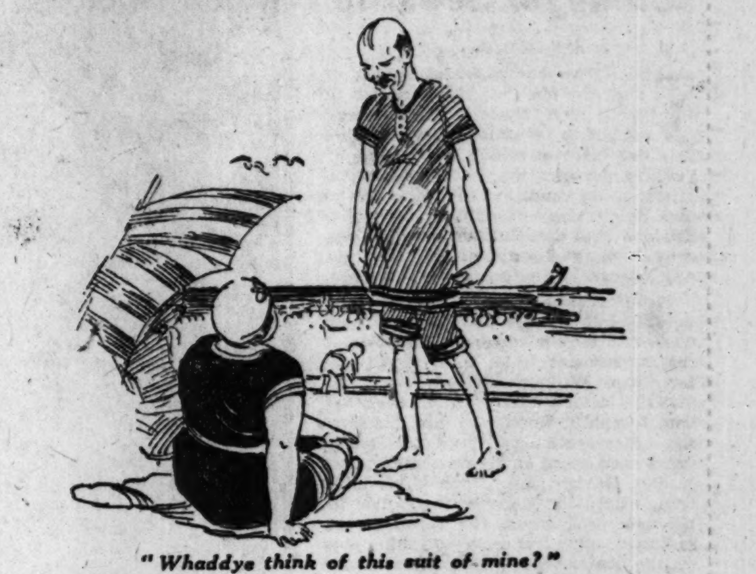
O, I just love a man that's brave . . .
Now, William, stop . . . Now, Bill, behave . . .

Scene III.—"Don't You Ever Peel?"

After all, you can't blame the dear girls for buzzing the Life Guards, what with having to look at the portly gentlemen bathers who have watermelon waist lines or are all sunk down in the middle like an old grave . . . we see Mamie chinning one of the Bronze Apollos who make the beaches safe for democracy . . . incidentally, why do they always wait till the victim is going down for the third time before they rescue him?

MAMIE: What a lovely tan! . . . don't you ever peel?
What a beautiful color! . . . how does it feel?



"Whaddye think of this suit of mine?"

LIFE GUARD (who is as modest and shy as any actor):
This ain't nothing to what I'll get;
I'll get a real tan, don't you fret.

MAMIE (romantically):
What a wonderful life by these wild, wild waves,
Rescuing people from watery graves.
(Isn't that pretty?—she read it.)
It thrills me to think how you must feel—
What a beautiful tan!—don't you ever peel?

LIFE GUARD:
I've saved a lot of 'em, don't you fret,
But they ain't nothing to what I'll get.

MAMIE: It must be thrilling to be a Guard,
With muscles so big and strong and hard.

LIFE GUARD:
Here, feel my arm—some arm, I'll say;
There ain't many guys what can get that way.

MAMIE (feeling his arm gingerly):
Boy, some muscle! I'll say you'll do . . .
But feel my arm—I've got some, too.

(They're getting along famously . . . Life Guards are all like that . . . but hist and hark, who comes this way? . . . none other than Pa himself, and is this his little datter with the bold, bad man? It is. Ha!)

PA (suddenly behind Mamie):
C'mon, it's time for us to go . . .

MAMIE (slightly fussed):
But Pa, I haven't been in, you know.

PA: Go on in, then, don't be so slow . . .
If you don't go in your Ma will rave . . .

MAMIE: I'm not going in . . . I'll spoil my wave!

(So Pa, who is plainly baffled by this curious feminine logic, retreats to where Ma is parked with the Baby, and as the curtain goes down you might hear the following composite ensemble from various quarters of the beach:)

MAMIE (to Life Guard):
O, I just love a man that's brave.

ELSIE (to Bill):
Now, William, stop . . . Now, Bill, behave . . .

MA (to Pa):
Look at her, Pa, if you think I'm fat . . .
Thank God, I'm not as fat as that!
(And that's that.)

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

MRS. JAY MORSE-ELY AND DAUGHTER CARYL

MISS ISABEL WATKINS

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM S. BACON

The world's championship cowboy contest, which concluded a week's engagement at Grant park yesterday, attracted a large number of persons who are summering in Chicago's suburbs. Mrs. Potter Palmer was chairman of the affair, which netted several thousand dollars for the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society. Mr. and Mrs. William S. Bacon of New York, who, with their small daughter, Betty Blossom, are spending the summer with Mrs. Bacon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Blossom of Hubbard Woods, were interested spectators on the opening day, as was Miss Isabel Watkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O. Watkins, who was an early arrival with her fiancé, Alexander H. Revell Jr.

More Chicagoans Forsake Our Tropic Clime for Seaside

By Mme. X.

THERE is one cheerful aspect of the hot spell of the summer of 1921, and that is that there ought to be a marked diminution in those diseases which are routed by profuse perspiration, such as rheumatism, gouty condition, and other maladies due to hyper-acidity. A chronic Turkish bath can eliminate malign poisons more quickly and completely than any foreign and expensive water cure.

It unfortunately eliminates not only poisons but also people. Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen took a house in Lake Forest for the summer to be near her daughter, Mrs. William McCormick Blair and the latter's children, and near her son, Joseph T. Bowen Jr., and his family. Her summers have for many years been spent at her charming place in Bar Harbor, Me. This is an ideal spot, where the summer is always deliciously cool, where the views of sea and mountains transcend anything else on the eastern coast, and where every prospect pleases, even man.

It is the favorite refuge of many attractive people from all over the country. Among the charms of Bar Harbor is the fact that nowhere else do flowers grow to such beauty as there. Larkspur towers to a height of six feet. Roses riot in a splendor of color and fragrance of which we know nothing here. Phlox, wall flowers, snapdragons, marigold, daisies, mignonette, every blossom and flowering shrub known here attains there a perfection amazing considering the shortness of the season. The soft sunshine and the sea moisture combine to give them what they most want.

Chicagoans at Bar Harbor.

Not only is Mrs. Bowen abandoning the pleasant looking red brick mansion which nestles under the elms of East Deerpath avenue, but her daughter, daughter-in-law, and grandchildren all accompany her to the coast of Maine and its bracing breezes and matchless scenery. Probably nothing will ever persuade Mrs. Bowen that the north shore of Chicago has not always a tropical summer climate. She will cherish the belief that our only breeze is that of an electric fan (heaven bless the man who invented this weapon against heat!), and it would be useless to show her pictures of open wood fires burning in Lake county homes in mid-July, as ours did last year.

She will not find quite so large a Chicago colony as usual at Bar Harbor. Such habitues as the Harold O. Howards and the Charles L. Strobels have gone elsewhere. Mrs. R. Hall McCormick and her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, and the latter's children are together in the McCormick summer home there.

Mr. McCormick has taken up with enthusiasm a new sport, aviation. He has bought an airplane and has an aviator who takes him up for flights. He has not attempted to navigate himself the uncharted highways of the air. Aviation cannot be so lightly undertaken as a sport or pursuit as motoring or riding or boating, although many of us will doubtless live to see the day when it will be a common mode of travel.

In Europe the trip from London to Paris by air has almost ceased to be a thrilling adventure, so many people take it daily. The air flight between London and Brussels is nearly as common a line of travel.

House and Garden Harmony.

Other Chicagoans who have fled the fervid summer are Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson, who departed a week ago for Beverly Farms, Mass., where they have joined their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Frost. They have left the beautiful gardens of their Lake Forest estate, Havenwood, to bloom without Mrs. Ryerson's devoted, personal care. There is no lovelier garden in the country. It is a formal French or Italian garden, with fountains, statues, balustrades, paths, hedges, pergolas, summer houses, and pavilions.

It is one of the four gardens open today to those who visit the North Shore Horticultural society and Garden club's exhibit in the Gorton school in Lake Forest. The other places are the Harold McCormick, the Cyrus Hall McCormick, and the Keene Addington gardens.

The two McCormick estates are of contrasting styles in landscape design. The Harold McCormick's is one of the most perfect examples of the best period in Italian landscape and garden architecture. It was designed by the architect of the house, Charles Platt of New York.

In thus uniting the planning of the house with its setting, the ideal in such design was achieved. It is only in recent years that the instructed have come to realize that the work of an architect in charge of the planning of a country house is only half done when the house itself is designed. It is as important that it should be set in the right place in the right sort of garden.

An Italian villa should stand in an Italian garden. An English or a colonial dwelling should have the more informal gardens which time and custom have associated with this more informal style of architecture. It is on a par with the setting of precious stones. Unless properly set, the latter have no artistic value or proper effect.

A Fragrant Retreat Called Ravello.

The Cyrus H. McCormick house is a large, friendly dwelling, distinctly English in style. So the garden surrounding it is of a similar form of landscape design. It makes use of the natural features of the ground it covers. There are miles of lovely walks and drives through the deep and well wooded ravines which wind through the place.

The rock garden which the late Mrs. McCormick herself designed on the face of the bluff, with its charming path from the lawn to the lake shore, is one of the most poetic and enchanting pieces of garden design in this part of the country. Innumerable specimens of rock plants, vines and ferns border the path and grow in the interstices of the stones which pave the winding way under pines and hemlocks.

Above on the edge of the bluff a bit of Italy [for it's hard to keep Italy out of even the most informal garden] is introduced by a lovely marble pillared and balustraded pavilion, reached by a flower bordered walk from the house a quarter of a mile away. A hundred feet or so above the lake it is so reminiscent of a similar pavilion at Ravello, in southern Italy, above Amalfi, that Mrs. McCormick christened this charming retreat "Ravello." There she used to spend many quiet hours, far from the sound or summons of the exacting telephone.

It looks out over the almost empty expanse of Lake Michigan. Nothing breaks the wide stretch of blue or purple [those are the lake's two summer complexions], except an occasional distant steamer trailing a widow's veil of smoke along the horizon. The only sound in this retreat is the songs of birds. It is the essence of peace and revery, and a most fragrant haven.

In the Keene Addington garden visitors will have the opportunity of seeing the many possibilities of a smaller country place. No one who has not had such a domain in which to carry out ideas knows the infinite pleasure and many satisfactions of such a garden. It offers sometimes even more than a large place in the way of variety and opportunity.

Eastern Seacoast Calls.

To return for a moment to those who will soon fly from the many opportunities for healthy and complete perspiration offered by this most hygienic of seasons, Mrs. Donald M. Ryerson of Lake Forest and Mrs. Arthur Cable of Glencoe are planning to take their children the latter days of July and go to the sandy, sea swept rocks of Hyannisport, Mass., where they will occupy the house rented, but not occupied this summer, by the Edward L. Ryersons Jr. The bathing is delightful along that shore, not so cold as north of Boston, and with both still water and surf bathing.

Apropos of the sea and its customs, there has risen in the minds of some acquainted with seafaring knowledge a question as to whether the far reaching beacon, which rumor says will ultimately shine forth from the tip top of the gleaming Wrigley tower, will not come in contact with the United States signal service and have to be operated by the lighthouse department. This seems not improbable.

If its beams blaze forth over the lake, it cannot help serving as a guide to distant mariners. Should it become a lighthouse lamp it will have to dispense, say the sapient, with its electric lantern and take to the old fashioned kerosene. All lighthouses the world over are operated by this medium of illumination, so as to insure an entirely uninterrupted service. Electricity, gas, and other similar forms of lighting are subject to uncertainties which would make them unfit for the important service of lighthouses. That is a light which must never go out by accident.

Shore Acres Golf Course Open.

Members of the new Shore Acres club at Lake Bluff are already playing on the just completed eighteen hole course. They all say it is a sporty course. Those who laid it out took full advantage of the ravines and other inequalities of the ground to make natural hazards. A player can get an unusual lot of climbing for a course in this level land.

Of the club buildings only the lockers are as yet extant. Not until times are better will the main buildings be put up. David Adler has made delightful plans for them, which, when the right moment arrives to build, will make this one of the show clubs of the west.

The next door neighbors to Shore Acres are the residents of another kind of club, Arden Shore. At this summer camp of city folk, boys, girls, babies, and mothers, an average of 425 a week, from stifling slums, are entertained in two week shifts. It is supported by an association known as the Arden Shore association, an organization, composed of committees from the suburban communities from Evanston to Lake Bluff.

Mrs. J. MacGregor Adams is honorary president. Mrs. Carl R. Latham is president. Mrs. Robert B. Gregory and Mrs. Grant Ridgway are vice presidents. Miss Gladys Spry is recording secretary. Miss Elizabeth Thorne is corresponding secretary. Mrs. E. D. Parmelee is treasurer. Each subcommittee has a chairman and other officials, and undertakes to raise a certain amount of money yearly.

Drive for Arden Shore.

Just at this moment the Lake Forest branch, of which Mrs. W. E. Casselberry is chairman and Mrs. Charles Atkinson treasurer, is making a drive for the $10,000 it pledges as its quota.

The camp is part of the city's health and welfare department and the board of education, though exactly to what extent I don't know. Its relief work is conducted by the association bearing its name, and not a penny of the money raised goes to the cost of raising it. It is one of the most interesting and appealing of our many philanthropic undertakings. A visit to it is a real experience.

All the north shore communities are rising up in revolt against the usurpation, monopolization, and destruction of their beaches by city motorists, whose bad manners and vandalism are fast driving the local folk distracted. Complaints are made about the foul language and indecent habits of some of these visiting parties, behavior which drives away those who live near by and who may be said to have a prior claim on the beaches. It is to be regretted that the actions of these minority obstreperous ones will probably keep the majority decent element away from suburban beaches, as the north shore communities are making preparations to shut out all but residents of their neighborhoods from enjoyment of beach privileges.

The South Sea Islands.

A half century ago Herman Melville, in his fascinating "Typee," opened to the reading public a new field of romance, the little known south sea islands, a part of the world which had escaped attention since it was discovered by Capt. Cooke and the other explorers of the sixteenth century.

Some years later Pierre Loti, the French sailor and writer, gave new life to waning interest by his "Rarahu; a Romance of Tahaiti," one of his early and best works.

Once again the writers and painters of today are directing attention to this remote region. Gaugain, by his exotic paintings and his pen; O'Brien, by his "White Shadows in the South Seas," and Somerset Maugham by his "Moon and Sixpence," have thrown the searchlight on those beautiful, tropical isles. We are reintroduced to their strange and attractive peoples, the races with the straight black hair, pale yellow skins, and symmetrical bodies. Their songs, dances, customs, and traditions are become the theme for fiction and art. An increasing throng of travel is being diverted southward, though many tourists, on arriving, are quickly discouraged from staying by the primitive conditions of living. A few, however, stick it out and are rewarded by a freshened inspiration and new fields of color, romance, and interpretation.

Among these courageous and adventurous ones is an artistic couple, the Jerome Blums, he a painter and she a sculptor. They have just returned from a three months' sojourn among the people of the Society isles.

A Haven for World Weary Mortals.

They have many things of interest to relate. One of the most curious is the fact that the south sea isles are a favorite retreat for military aviators, who seem to have a post-war desire for the utter peace and remoteness of these far away, inaccessible regions. Several of them have bought land there and are settling down to the "dolce fa niente" form of agriculture which nature makes possible there.

Another and most extraordinary world weary mortal is a former dean of the Boston School of Technology, one Harrison Smith, known in south Pacific regions as "Borneo Smith" because of his extensive researches in Borneo in the study of natural history. He has so far identified himself with the customs and manners of the gentle islanders as to have had his body from neck to heels covered with tattooing of a highly decorative and fancy kind.

He discovered somewhere, in Borneo, I think, a new sort of frog. This interesting bactrian he had reproduced in tattooing on his left leg, a little above the knee. He did this so that when he went into an unexplored district in search of specimens of this creature he need not have to describe it to the natives, but could simply show what he wanted by exposing his knee.

His final decision to abandon the land of his birth, which he professes to love, was caused by the passing of the eighteenth and nineteenth amendments. I don't know whether prohibition or woman's suffrage gave him most pain. At any rate, the combination was too much for him, and the U. S. A. lost a valuable citizen.

The Blums have gone to New York to put their material into shape for exhibit next winter. Chicago will have a chance to see what sort of inspiration was theirs when their show comes here in the spring.

On the Way to Beirut.

The most recent departure of a well known Chicagoan for distant lands is that of Mrs. Jesse Moss of Lake Forest, who sailed last week on the first lap of a trip to Beirut. Beirut, as you know, is a port on the Mediterranean coast of Asia Minor. Mrs. Moss lands in England and from there goes in a P. and O. steamer to Port Said, Egypt. There she reëmbarks on a coasting vessel for her destination. The latter is the feature of her voyage which will provide the most variety and adventure. Mrs. Moss was born in Palestine and her sister, whom she goes to visit, lives in Beirut in the winter and in the nearby mountains in the hot season. The latter's husband is a missionary.

Another Chicagoan who has lived there the last thirty-odd years is Mrs. Bliss, a daughter of the late E. W. Blatchford. Her husband also was a missionary. Mr. Bliss died some years ago, but she still resides in Palestine.

Henry J. Patten, who recently returned from a trip through the Holy land, was entertained by Mrs. Bliss in Beirut.

Story Book Pageant on Thursday.

Next Thursday on the broad green field of Ravinia Park there will be a children's festival, a "Story Book Pageant." It will depict "the birthday of the queen," and the king has invited all Fairyland to come to it as a surprise to the queen. Little boys and girls from all the suburbs from Lake Bluff to Evanston will take part in it. Miss Bertha Iles is in charge of it, and Mrs. Frank Green of Winnetka, president of the Ravinia club, and her committee are promoting what is always one of the prettiest of the summer spectacles.

In our own private and particular "beg your pardon" column we hasten to say that when, in last Sunday's screed we referred to "the early cricket," we meant the even more premature katydid, which on July 12 first shouted her unwelcome message, a full month ahead of schedule.

Are we really going to have frost in six weeks from that date, Mr. Cox?

ART AND ARCHITECTURE

Tribune's Offer Opens Big Field for Mural Artists

By Eleanor Jewett.

ONE of the most distinctive steps in the advancing of the opportunities of a practical application of the best in art to everyday affairs is the competition recently announced as being sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. It is rare that as busy an organization as a newspaper should concern itself with matters of such calm purport as a painting or a piece of sculpture. One cannot connect painting and journalism readily. They are not logical bedfellows. The reporter is the antithesis of the artist. The product of the typewriter is as far from the product of the palette as east is from west, but east and west are to meet in this competition.

Back of the competition lies an eagerness on the part of the newspaper to recognize the value of art in the world of practical affairs. It is on a larger scale what other businesses have been doing quietly for the last year. Exhibitions have been held in downtown offices; business men have joined painting classes to learn the better how to enjoy their feeling for the beautiful. Now THE TRIBUNE joins the field.

The competition is open to every scholar who enters the art school of the Art institute this fall. The Art institute is back of the newspaper in this attempt to recognize the value of mural decorations. Which last words bring to mind the fact that the subject for this competition has so far been entirely overlooked in this account. The competition is as follows:

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE offers a prize of $5,000 for the design which shall prove the most suitable for the embellishment of the city room in its new plant, and most expressive, pictorially and spiritually, of significant phases and episodes in the history of journalism.

In addition to this prize, the artist who has the winning design will be paid for his time and labor in putting the complete mural upon the walls of the city room. An estimate made of the time it may take to decorate the room is two years, basing that on the employing of the artist and four assistants. It is a big piece of work.

The Art institute is directly concerned in the competition. Those, for instance, who are privileged to compete, include only those scholars who shall enter the art school of the institute this fall. Thus the competitors are limited, but, as any one who cares to may become a member of the art school for the coming year, looked at from another point of view, the competition is nation-wide. That people are interested is made evident by the fact that within a few days of the first announcement of the prize the Art institute had had more than 400 inquiries concerning details.

The institute has consented to be the direct medium of communication between THE TRIBUNE and the contestants during the period the competition is open, and later, during the execution of the work. In addition, the Art institute is offering ten free scholarships open on a competitive basis to those students who enter THE TRIBUNE competition.

"In making known their generous decision, the institute authorities say that these scholarships are offered not only as a token of the institute's appreciation of THE TRIBUNE's project but as the institute's contribution to a plan which looks solely to the practical encouragement of a noble and rapidly developing art form in America."

The scholarships will be open to students, not now enrolled, who shall enroll before Oct. 1, 1921, in the Art institute art school for the year of 1921-22. Every student so enrolling shall accompany his request to enter the scholarship contest with [1] a composition in color, [2] five life drawings, and [3] a life painting. These must be submitted to the institute authorities by Sept. 15, 1921, and should be addressed to Mural Scholarship Competition, Chicago Art institute.

The following account of the problems to be considered in this competition brings them out so well that it seems needless to repeat their sense in other than its words. This account appeared in THE TRIBUNE on June 18, but demands for more information concerning the details with which it treats, serve as an adequate excuse for reprinting it in this column.

The special point THE TRIBUNE would like to emphasize in connection with these scholarships is that they make it possible that an artist of very small means shall not be excluded from competing for THE TRIBUNE grand prize by reason of inability to pay a year's fees in the institute school. From the start he has a chance. His work alone will tell the story.

This project thus develops three sources of stimulation for painters in America:

"[1]—It will enable ten gifted men to work under Art institute auspices and to enjoy for a year every resource of the institute's great school, without the expenditure of a dollar for fees or instruction.

"[2]—The artist who produces the design most appropriate for the embellishment of the huge room which is the news and nerve center of THE TRIBUNE plant will be rewarded with an undivided grand prize of $5,000.

"[3]—The most appropriate design having been accepted, the execution of it will provide the successful competitor and four of his colleagues in the art of mural painting with—according to Art institute estimates—distinguished and remunerative employment for two years. Everybody concedes that the laborer is worthy of his hire; in this country that principle is not so firmly established in its application to the artist. To emphasize it is one of the aims, and a very important aim, of the present offer."

"It is a room of noble spaces, and, we like to think, of genuine significance in the life of our country and community that THE TRIBUNE invites artists to consider as an opportunity for themselves and as a problem in esthetics.

"The problem is as spacious as is the opportunity, for it is not the conception and the execution of unrelated mural paintings which are involved, but the problem of a room. Within the scope of the design comes the matter of treatment of such existing factors as two lofty structural pillars, the treatment of many large and small windows, some of which will require elimination or modification, and the treatment of lighting fixtures, bulletin boards, paper lockers, and telephones, and the further matter of the introduction of a monumental clock and a perpetual calendar, both of which features are capable of high decorative treatment. There are, consequently, interesting sub-problems in wood and metal work, while the opportunities for the exercise of ingenuity and fancy in the handling of inscriptions and grotesques are endless.

"In short, the artist has the stimulating problem of a room whose function is not to be transformed or changed on the one hand, nor, on the other, to be overlooked. The artist's task here is to get that function visualized in one of the grandest of art's media—to get it expressed in a way at once feeling, poetic, and pictorial.

"The walls of the city room comprise three premier panels, the largest of which (part of the upper section of east elevation) has a length of 37 feet and a height of 15 feet. Contiguous to this panel, and divided from it only by a shallow pilaster, is another which completes the upper section of the east elevation and has a length of 18 feet and a height of 15 feet. The artist purposing to embellish this east elevation will be confronted with the inspiration of a wall space which, inclusive of the pilaster, comprises 855 square feet.

"The third dominating panel of the room (upper section of west elevation) has a length of 22 feet and a height of 15 feet.

"There remain nine lesser panels, the dimensions of which average a length of 21 feet and a height of 7 feet.

"The foregoing dimensions are roughly calculated, and are given at this time only for the purpose of indicating on how heroic a scale the artists will be able to work out their conceptions. Precise dimensions, data as to the composition of the surface of the walls, which are hollow tile construction, sets of photographs and blueprints, as well as the liberty of the room for the purpose of studying the day and night lighting, will be provided for the artists when the year's work on the competing designs begins next autumn at the Art institute.

"The three premier themes for the dominating panels of the city room are indicated herewith by THE TRIBUNE, and their selection is the result of the conviction that these themes represent highly significant episodes in the development of the freedom of the American press and the American people:

"(1)—The bringing in of the verdict of not guilty in the case of the King vs. Zender for libel, an event of great historical importance in colonial annals of the American people. So important did our forefathers consider it that the jurors, whom the crown judge had instructed to the effect that only a verdict of guilty against the editor, Zender, was possible, and the accused and his counsel became the idols of the colonies and the cannon on the Hudson thundered a salute of not thirteen but twenty-one guns. Lawyers have long agreed that this verdict was 'the first step in the onward march of American liberty.'

"(2)—The sitting of the American congress in which the constitutional amendments, safeguarding the liberty of the press were adopted, such provisions not having been incorporated in the original instrument. This episode will make possible the introduction of a great array of the fathers of the republic in an intensely American setting.

"(3)—Pre-war conference in the old TRIBUNE office in the late '50s between Abraham Lincoln and the early editors of THE TRIBUNE concerning measures which eventuated in the liberation of the slaves and 'union one and indivisible.'

"Subjects and inscriptions for the nine lesser panels are now under consideration and will be announced in due time. It is not, however, THE TRIBUNE's intention to make inflexible provisions for the embellishment of these panels. We want the spirit of our friends, the painters, to have ample opportunity for truly individualized expression.

ROBERT R. MCCORMICK,
J. M. PATTERSON,
(Co-Editors of The Chicago Tribune)."

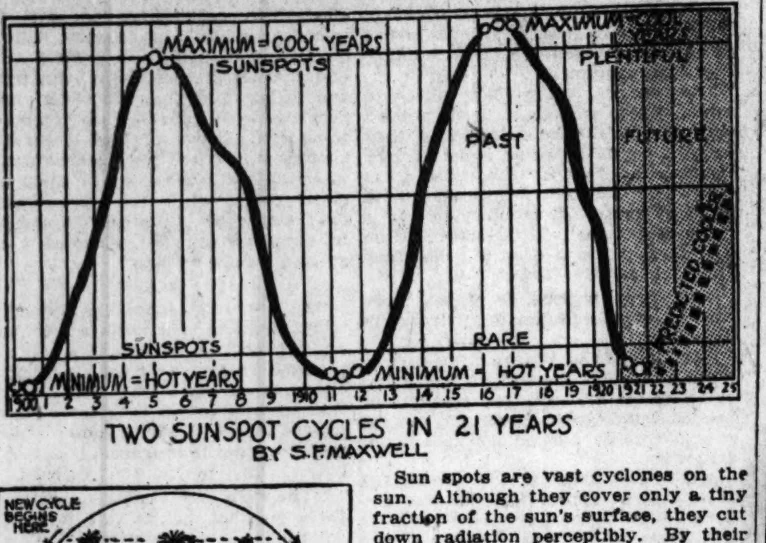
ASTRONOMY

SUN SPOTS AND WEATHER.



TWO SUNSPOT CYCLES IN 21 YEARS
BY S. F. MAXWELL

THE present year of extremely warm weather is reported to be general over the entire world. This summer is a season of intense heat, drought, and suffering over great parts of the continents of North America, Europe, and Asia. News from such distant points as China and Russia and the British isles, nearer home, indicate a most abnormal summer everywhere.

Stephansson, the arctic explorer, predicted an extremely hot season last winter, because the Arctic seas, from which he had just returned, had not frozen over. The Arctic regions act as a safety refrigerator to the temperate zones of the earth, to check an unusual rise in heat. But last winter was mild, and the arctic regions got warmed up.

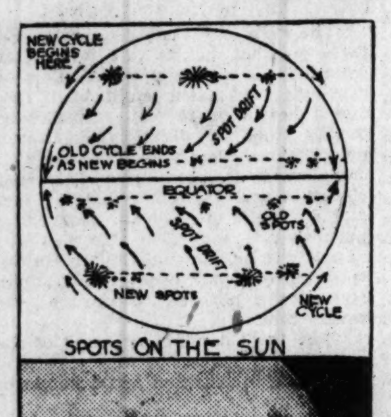
We had news of icebergs floating far south of their range a few weeks ago, so thick that they were a menace to shipping. If you will remember back, you will recall that the Titanic was sunk just eleven years ago on an iceberg far out of its range.

In 1915 the seasons were abnormally cold. You may also remember that the Northern lights were prominent about that time. And lastly, if you are an astronomer, you will remember that there was a sunspot maximum at that time; and that we are having a sunspot minimum now.

These facts, apparently so widely divergent, are, in fact, closely connected. Hot weather—no spots; cool weather—spots on the sun; there you have the whole secret.

About 1900, which is as far back as most of us can remember without the help of notes, the seasons for several years were warm. About 1905 we experienced a number of exceedingly cold winters. In 1910 and '11 the summers were intensely hot. In 1915, '16, and '17 the winters were extremely cold again, with a last remnant in 1918. The last three years have been growing progressively milder, with a record breaking summer in 1921, and indications of warm weather into 1922, rapidly cooling to cold winters again about 1925 and '26.

Weather records from widely separated localities show this to be true. Printed above is a table of sun spots which shows why. When spots are few the sun sends out more heat in all directions, and the earth feels the effects of it, no matter whether we are having winter or summer. If it is winter for us, we notice a lack of zero weather. It it is summer, we notice the particular virulence of sunburn, the great heat of the sunshine, and the parched dryness of the air, alternating with sweltering humidity. If we were students of weather, we would also notice the frequency of dry "lows," as storm areas are called—places where it is too dry to rain, but just gets hot, dry, and misty, followed by a few days of breeze and then another hot spell.



SPOTS ON THE SUN

HOW SUNSPOTS APPEAR

Sun spots are vast cyclones on the sun. Although they cover only a tiny fraction of the sun's surface, they cut down radiation perceptibly. By their behavior astronomers believe that they affect every portion of the sun's distance, through its vast 886,000 miles of diameter. They appear to be only the surface manifestations of enormous forces which go on deep down below the sea of flames that makes the sun's surface.

Sun spots recur in definite cycles of eleven years and forty-seven days each and also thirty-three and eighty-eight years. At the beginning of a cycle two zones of them appear, like belts about the sun, about midway between equator and poles, in what would be the temperate zones on earth; as the cycle advances these belts draw toward each other, increasing in intensity sharply at first and then slowly fading. They vanish when almost at the solar equator. Sometimes a new cycle of spots will start in the high latitudes while the old zones are persisting in the low ones, and then there are four zones of spots.

Numerous attempts have been made to connect sun spots with the actions of the planets, but without much definite success. It may be said, however, that the eleven year cycle corresponds roughly with Jupiter's period of revolution, and the thirty-three year cycle—not so pronounced—with that of Saturn. These two planets are now in conjunction in the west at sunset, where you yourself may see them and speculate on whether they have anything to do with our unusual weather.

AVIATION

Day and Night 'T' Should Be Set For Our Flyers

By Morrow Krum

THE following announcement comes from Washington:

"A system of model airways covering the entire continent is planned by army air service officials for use of all operators and owners of aircraft. It contemplates various chains of well organized landing fields, supplemented by various emergency fields and identification markers connecting the principal cities."

The plan is not new. Since the close of the war, when military aviators first saw the necessity of pushing commercial aviation, the story has gone the rounds. Airways and well marked landing fields have been planned by any number of associations. But when the idea gets into the lobbying stage the congressmen throw up their hands and speak of other things. The only direct aid the United States government is giving to commercial flying is through the air mail service.

Aviators must have landing fields. Trails must be marked. The country must be mapped. Because of the lack of appropriations from the federal government, air service officers have decided to appeal to aviation clubs, chambers of commerce, and civic organizations to assist in the creation of the airways.

Every town or village in America should have a landing field. The field should be marked. Some method of marking it for night flyers should be arranged. Accommodations for securing oil, gasoline, and water should also be arranged. A service of that nature will, in time, prove a great source of revenue.

Take the experience of Ross Jacobi, the Hoosier boy from Kokomo, Ind., who carried the fight pictures from Jersey City to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

"Well, it was dark when I left Cleveland," said Jacobi. "The street lights and the illuminated buildings were beautiful as I sailed along above Euclid avenue. Then I passed over the western edge of the city and out above the open country. Everything was blotted out below. Just the dim, vague horizon line and the stars to guide me. Occasionally I would pass over a train or a street car.

"Boy, it was lonesome up there. I watched my instruments carefully. The phosphorous on the little needles on the compass and the altimeter all were mighty comforting, but the most cheerful thing of all was the even purring on the Curtiss C-6 motor in that Oriole. If that motor had ever cut out I would have been out of luck.

"No landing fields visible—nothing but the black earth below. Say, if that motor had stopped I would have just stuck her into a slow glide and stalled it before she hit. It's a tough game, I tell you."

Had there been emergency landing fields Jacobi would have been much happier. Of course he didn't need them—but there is always a possibility of a motor stopping. Three simple oil torches would mark a landing field. It wouldn't cost much. Before many years every town will be so marked.

Three weeks ago Paul Milnor and I set out to catch a Baltimore and Ohio train. We were in a Paterson Hornet and had planned to catch the train 150 or 200 miles east of this city. We left Ashburn field and picked up the B. & O. tracks out of Gary. One hundred miles out the motor was running hot and we decided to land. Three times we circled the town of Bremen, Ind. The race track appeared to be waist deep in weeds. The other fields looked small, but finally we picked out one and Milnor set the wheels down.

The field had appeared to be level from the air, but it was as uneven as the sand dunes, with mounds rising from three to four feet. However, the landing was successful.

"Why didn't you land by the graveyard?" asked a citizen who came out to see the ship. "It's the best field near here—a bit out of town, but a good field."

Later we saw that field. It was quite a distance from the edge of the village and small. But it was level and would have been a better place to land.

"Well, why don't you mark it?" asked Milnor. "We got in this field without any trouble, but we took a chance. Mark that other field and then there won't be any crashes here."

The experience gives its message without further comment, except perhaps the recording of the crash that followed our attempt to take off from the field. The motor cut out just as the stick was pulled back for the intended zoom over the low fence. There was no zoom. We were not injured.

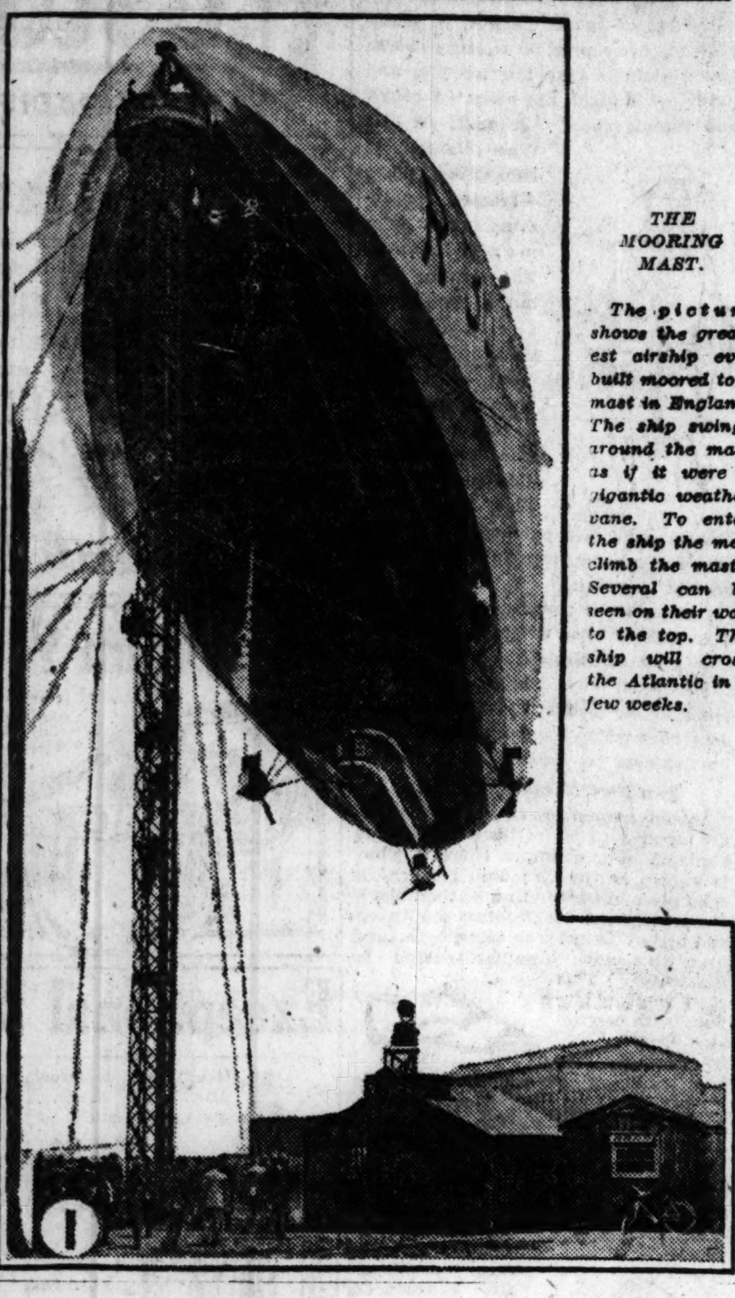
That night the plane was left unguarded, although the chief of police had promised protection. The following morning all of the instruments had been stolen. Protection is another thing the aviators of America want.

Tulips by Air.

A quarter of a ton of tulips cut in Holland July 2 arrived in Manchester, England, for sale the following morning.

Chile.

The sum of 2,000,000 pesos has been publicly susbscribed in Chile for purchasing aircraft for the army and navy.



THE MOORING MAST.

The picture shows the greatest airship ever built moored to a mast in England. The ship swings around the mast as if it were a gigantic weather vane. To enter the ship the men climb the masts. Several can be seen on their way to the top. The ship will cross the Atlantic in a few weeks.

Curtiss Indiana Co. to Stage an Aviation Meet

THE following communication has recently been received from the Curtiss-Indiana company, Kokomo, Ind.

"The Curtiss-Indiana company have just moved on to their new field, and in order to let the general public know what we have done in the promotion of aeronautics, we are going to have a big aviation meet on Sept. 20, 21, and 22.

"Our new field is marked with the regulation 100 foot circle and 60 foot cross, and is in every way up to the government requirements. We expect to notify as nearly as possible, every pilot in the United States who owns a ship and ask that he come here and take part in this meet. The program has not been arranged as yet, but undoubtedly we will have a program which will keep the fliers busy during their stay here. Gasoline and oil will be furnished for all of the machines during their stay, and there will be automobiles at the service of the fliers.

We expect that there will be many thousands of spectators here from all parts of the country and there is no reason why this should not be a huge success, as the people in Indiana are enthusiastic about flying. There will be many prizes, cups, etc., awarded by the various factories and merchants in this locality, and we believe that it would be well worth the while of any pilot to come here. We also expect that we will have at least twenty-five different types of ships on our field and we anticipate that there will be more than 100 visiting ships."

The Curtiss-Indiana company owns the Oriole Ross Jacobi used in his record flight from Jersey City to Chicago with pictures of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight for THE TRIBUNE. Jacobi is the concern's star pilot.

New Sport Ship.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Times reports:

"A new racing aeroplane has been tested at the Johannisthal flying ground. It is designed as a sporting machine for amateurs, and its dimensions have been calculated so that it can be housed in a motor garage of moderate size.

"The machine is 22 feet across the wings and the body is 16 feet long. The weight of the whole, without petrol or pilots, is about 310 pounds. The motor consists of two horizontal air cooled cylinders, developing twenty-eight horse power. The propeller has a diameter of 7 feet 2 inches and a pitch of 1 in 5. With a consumption of six gallons per hour, an average of between sixty and sixty-five miles per hour was obtained. The machine climbed easily and made a smooth landing."

New Airship.

Italian newspapers report that the funds arising from the sale of the "Roma" are to be used for the construction of a new semi-rigid airship, which is to be commenced shortly.

Mystery Ship

A new type of naval seaplane is undergoing tests at the naval air station at Rockaway, Long Island. No official announcements as to the characteristics of this machine have so far been issued, but from accounts of eye-witnesses who saw the machine taxying off shore it appears to be a twin-tractor float type monoplane.

Judging by the sound of the engines, of which there are two, mounted on the wing, these are Wright types.

The New York Herald says they are 300 horse power models and the maximum speed of the machine is 110 knots, or 132 miles per hour.

An interesting feature of the machine is its thick wing section, which an experienced eye recognizes from afar. The machine is intended for torpedo or bomb carrying and was built by the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor corporation.

Aircraft Yearbook

The Aircraft Yearbook for 1921, published by the Manufacturers' Aircraft association, Inc., which has just been received, gives a most comprehensive study of flying from every angle. The book contains a complete history of the new science, a chronology of the important flights and inventions of aviators, covers in detail every manufacturer of aircraft in the United States, and in a few brief editorials outlines a policy for the government. There are one hundred odd pictures and diagrams of airplanes, blimps, dirigibles, and flying men.

FARM AND GARDEN

Woodcraft Boys' Truck Farm Crops Given to the Poor

By Frank Ridgway.

BOYS on the west side of Chicago have found a new and profitable way of spending their vacation—growing vegetables for the poor. When school ended last spring 1,000 of them, all members of the Original Boys of Woodcraft, dragged out their old scout packs, raked up all the garden implements they could find in the neighborhood, and prepared for work on the truck farm at Camp Schiessle, two and a half miles northwest of Park Ridge, Ill.

Hoes and rakes began to fly as soon as the plowman got out of the way, and now with ten and a half acres of vegetables planted and growing at a rapid rate the boys believe they have a big treat in store for thousands in Chicago. As soon as the vegetables are ready to gather this fall they will be pulled and picked, tied in bunches, and crated and hauled in trucks to a central distributing point in Chicago, where they will be readily accessible to the poor.

Each Does His Share.

The organization has worked out a system which not only gives each boy a chance to do his share in growing the vegetables, but also furnishes him a liberal amount of time for recreation. Each boy's expenses are paid for one week at the camp. A group of fifty boys is selected by M. M. Lewis, head of the general council of the Original Boys of Woodcraft, and taken to Camp Schiessle every Monday morning. They return to the city on the following Sunday evening. These boys are selected from the various organization camps here in the city—Douglas, Harding, Grant, Liberty, Pershing, Unity, Sherman, Wood, Jackson, McKinley, Washington, Wilson, Lincoln, Democracy, and Mollesen. The latter camp is named for H. F. Mollesen, president of the organization.

There are fifty new campers and workers taken out each week, and fifty new white and tender backs reddened and blistered by the hot boiling sun every Monday morning. Warnings from R. R. Kahn, camp commander and farm director, do little good. Every boy in the new crew wants a rich Indian red tan like the one he saw on boys who came in from camp the day before. Shirts fly as soon as the boys reach the field, and before they have made many rounds killing weeds with a hoe there are fifty more crimson backs added to the long list.

The Day's Schedule.

Mr. Kahn puts the boys through a regular routine every day. The bugle blows at 6 o'clock in the morning, and they go through Ling's Swedish exercise instead of lining up for reveille. This lasts for forty-five minutes, and then they are marched to the field. They work in the field from 7 to 8, and are brought back to the mess tent for breakfast between 8 and 9. After a rest of half an hour, they go back to the field and work until noon. All of the work in the field is done with hand tools.

The afternoons are given to recreation. After a short rest immediately following the dinner hour, the boys are free to play various sorts of games during the afternoon, and they are called in for mess at 6 each evening. Taps is sounded and lights go out at 9.

The ground is furnished free of charge by Mrs. Vera Pease of Baraboo, Wis. There are two and a half acres of the farm used for a playground. A track surrounds the baseball diamond and tennis court. Lewis Cohn, athletic director of the camp, is arranging for contests in the various branches of athletics, including baseball, tennis, running, jumping, boxing, and swimming. The boys hike to an old swimmin' hole about a mile from camp on Wheeling road.

Taking an All Day Hike.

Every Thursday morning the bugle blows at 4 o'clock, tent flaps are tied, the cottage doors locked, and the boys leave the camp for an all day hike through the Cook county forest preserve and along the Des Plaines river. Some of them take their fishing tackle along, but there are so many things to see in the preserve that they seldom find time to use them.

All of the crops are hoed and hand weeded once a week. There are three acres of sweet corn, one acre of pumpkins, one and a half acres of cucumbers, one acre of radishes, one acre of beets, one-half acre of carrots, and an acre and a half of tomatoes. If the season is normal, the farm director estimates that there will be produced at least 2,000 dozens of roasting ears at Camp Schiessle this year.

He says that if the bugs do not eat too many of the vines, the boys expect to grow enough pumpkins to feed pumpkin pie to the whole town on Thanksgiving day. Mr. Kahn believes that if the weather is favorable they will be able to haul at least three carloads of pumpkins out of the patch at harvest time.

"If we get plenty of rain," he said "and the boys continue to keep the crops in good shape, we will have 1,000 pecks of cucumbers, 800 crates of black Spanish radishes, 1,000 bunches of beets, 1,000 bunches of carrots, and nine to ten tons of tomatoes. Besides all of these crops we expect to plant late beans between all of the rows and grow two crops on every acre of ground.

No Racial Clashes.

"The camp serves a double purpose. We are not only producing several hundred dollars' worth of vegetables to be given to those who need them in the city, but we are furnishing good wholesome recreation and the equivalent of a vacation to several hundred boys in Chicago. Most of our boys come from the west side, the melting pot district, and the spirit of the camp is so democratic that racial prejudice is wiped out.

"While we have many nationalities represented here in our various groups—Italian, German, Swedish, Jewish, Norwegian, Greek, Polish, French, Russian, Lithuanian, Bulgarian, and others—there is never the slightest indication of any friction. The boys find that their likes and dislikes are all about the same, regardless of their nationality. The camp is not only helpful in developing the boys physically and mentally, but they learn to coöperate, and I believe it makes them better Americans."

Added to all of this, the boys are given a general course in vegetable gardening. Each day lectures, accompanied by actual field demonstrations, are given on various phases of gardening.

"Cubed Cork" Insulation Saves High-Priced Ice

Ice is higher than ever this year. Use less of it. Make every pound do double duty.

"Cubed Cork" insulation will give you more refrigeration for the same amount of ice.

Alaska is the refrigerator with the cork insulation. When heat strikes "cubed cork," with its myriads of confined air cells, it meets a resistance stronger than itself.

The heat is deflected. The refrigerator interior remains cool, no matter how hot it is outside.

Ice lasts longer. Ice bills are lower. Foods keep better. Baby's milk is kept fresh. Waste is lessened. Health is maintained.

"Cubed Cork" insulation is but one of the Alaska features. The exclusive patented circulation system gives a constant current of chill dry air throughout the food compartments.

Among improvements are:

Linings of seamless porcelain with rounded corners; also of white enamel; easily cleaned.

Shelves of heavy, non-rusting woven wire, easily removable for cleaning.

Icerack of galvanized steel, heavily coated, removable.

Special drain pipe with patent trap to keep warm air from entering refrigerator; easily cleaned.

Tight-locking doors. Handsome finish of several coats of finest varnish.

Insist on seeing the name Alaska on the front of the refrigerator before you buy. Don't accept a substitute.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Conference for Church Leaders at Lake Geneva

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

The Rev. HENRY HEPBURN D.D.
GIBSON SYKES & FOWLER PHOTO.

THE seventeenth annual conference of the Missionary Education Movement will be held at the Young Men's Christian association camp, Lake Geneva, Wis., Aug. 2 to 12. The Lake Geneva conference is for the purpose of bringing together for recreation and training in leadership those who earnestly desire to fit themselves for positions of greater usefulness. During the ten days of the conference new strength and inspiration will be offered to the hundreds of young people who are gathered there to seek a new vision of the world's need and of God's plan for their lives through enlarged service in His church.

In the ten days' vacation and recreation among ideal surroundings opportunity will be offered to those in attendance to increase their efficiency in knowledge and methods of service, to learn the latest information about missionary and young people's societies, how to make their Sunday school an effective missionary agency, and to be introduced to the new mission study books and the best normal methods for mission study leaders.

The afternoons at the conference are reserved for recreation, under the supervision of a recreation committee and director, with provision for hiking, boating, bathing, tennis, baseball, volley ball, basketball, conference sings, stunt night programs, and excursions to surrounding points of interest. The delegates will occupy tents, cottages, and the villa, and all meals will be served in a large dining hall accommodating all the members of the conference, to the number of 350.

From the rising bell at 6:30 in the morning until lights out at 10 o'clock at night there is an hourly program of classes, lectures, discussions, and conferences, besides services of intercessions for the missions of the world, and vespers.

Among the thirty or more prominent missionary leaders announced on the program for this year's conference are clergymen and laymen and women of the Baptist, Congregational, Methodist, and Presbyterian churches from all over the world. Miss Hazel H. Poyer is the executive secretary of the Missionary Education Movement, with offices in room 1324 at 19 South La Salle street, Chicago.

Among the summer preachers to be heard this morning are the Rev. Dr. C. H. McCrea, assistant editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, at the Sheridan Road Methodist church, Sunnyside and Hazel avenues; the Rev. John W. Findlay of Lafayette, Ind., at the Hyde Park Presbyterian church, Blackstone avenue and 53d street; the Rev. John Robertson McMahon of Paw Paw, Ill., at the Fullerton Avenue Presbyterian church, Fullerton parkway and Geneva terrace; the Rev. Robert B. Kimber, at St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church, 1424 North Dearborn street; the Rev. W. O. Homer, LL. D., at Calvary Episcopal church, 3164 West Monroe street, and the Rev. Frank E. Wilson of Christ church, Eau Claire, Wis., at St. Mark's church, Evanston.

The finance committee of the diocese of Chicago of the Episcopal church, of which the Rev. Dr. George Craig Stewart is chairman, has fulfilled the commission intrusted to it by the diocesan convention, and has secured for the diocese, headquarters on the fifth floor of the Le Moyne building at the southwest corner of Wabash avenue and Lake street. Thirty-five hundred square feet of space is provided in the new quarters, with an option on additional space, if necessary, in the spring. At these headquarters there will be offices for the bishop, the suffragan bishop, the executive secretary of the bishop and council, the Church Club of Chicago, the Woman's auxiliary, the Bishop Bookshop, and other diocesan organizations, which will all contribute towards the support of the new quarters. The bishop has signed the lease for three years, and it is hoped that the move may be made on Aug. 1. The provision of these headquarters for the diocese and its official organizations will mean an inestimable increase of efficiency in carrying forward the work of the diocese.

Making Bibles cost two and one-half times as much as it did before the war. Books that cost $185,000 to print in 1915 cost $468,000 in 1920, according to the report of the board of managers of the American Bible society, presented at the annual meeting. But in orders to keep the Bible within the reach of even the poorest person the prices of Bibles were not increased to cover the advance in cost. A loss of over $35,000 was voluntarily sustained by the society, which is a noncommercial organization, whose sole purpose is the circulation of Scriptures without note or comment.

In 1920 the society issued nearly 4,000,000 copies of the Scriptures. Yet some of its agencies had empty shelves much of the time because sufficient books could not be furnished them. The demand for Bibles is greater than ever before, in spite of the increase in cost.

The annual report of the board of managers shows that the total issues of scriptures by the American Bible society since its organization has been 140,000,000—enough to furnish one to every man in a procession that would take sixteen years to pass a given point at a rate of one a second, marching eight hours a day and six days a week.

The Rev. Henry Hepburn, D. D., is celebrating his twelfth anniversary this year as the pastor of the Buena Memorial Presbyterian church at the intersection of Broadway and Sheridan road, near Montrose boulevard. A beautiful new Gothic church will soon be built on this commanding site, the rear of which is already occupied by a modern community house containing Sunday school rooms, a gymnasium, and a social center auditorium, dedicated five years ago.

The Rev. Dr. Hepburn is a graduate of Park college, Parkville, Mo., class of 1899, and of the McCormick Theological seminary in 1902. His alma mater honored him with the master's degree in 1905 and the doctor's degree in 1916.

Upon his ordination to the Presbyterian ministry in 1902 the Rev. Mr. Hepburn became the pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Monett, Mo., remaining for three years; of the church in Aurora for four years. He came to the Buena Memorial church in 1909. Dr. Hepburn is a trustee of Park college and is prominent in the Chicago presbytery and the Church federation.

The Rev. John B. Furay, S. J., president of Loyola university, is to be the head of the educational department of the new Roman Catholic university of St. Mary of the Lake at Area, Ill., just north of Chicago, according to an announcement made by Archbishop Mundelein recently.

The educational department of the divinity school will be in charge of Jesuits, while the administrative department will be in charge of diocesan priests from the Quigley Preparatory seminary, 65 East Chestnut street. The domestic department will be in charge of the Sisters of St. Francis, from Joliet.

Coincident with the announcement of the faculty the archbishop announced that the school of philosophy and six other units of the great university would be completed and opened in September, thus realizing the first materialization of the archbishop's vision of a complete Roman Catholic university in the west, with the preparatory, high, and grade schools leading up to it.

The faculty as announced by the archbishop includes: Professor of philosophy, the Rev. W. L. Hornsby, S. J., at present teacher of logic and general metaphysics at St. Louis university; prefect of studies, the Rev. J. B. Furay, S. J., at present president of Loyola university, Chicago; professor of history, the Rev. William A. Pasberg, S. J., of the faculty of Creighton university, Omaha, Neb.; prefect of discipline, the Rev. Gerald A. Kealy, D. D., of Quigley Preparatory seminary; procurator, the Rev. Herman Wolf of Quigley Preparatory seminary.

"This will be the only theological school in the country under diocesan control in which the Jesuits teach," said Archbishop Mundelein, "and their presence is the hallmark of scholarship. Until now we have been compelled to send our young men away to be educated for the priesthood. Beginning with the opening of this first class in September we will be able to educate our boys to the priesthood at home."

The curriculum will include philosophy, logic and ethics, church history, science, patrology in Greek, English, and an elective foreign language.

The selection of the Rev. John B. Furay for the new university faculty will necessitate the selection of a new president for Loyola university.

Revival meetings conducted by F. F. Bosworth will be held this morning at 11 o'clock, this afternoon at 3, and tonight at 7:30 in the gospel tent at Cicero and North avenues. B. B. Bosworth will speak every afternoon this week except Tuesday, when A. F. Booth-Clibbourn of England, who has been in gospel work for forty years all through Europe and England, will speak.

Following the Summer

By Guy Lee.

Jay Haskins of Portland suggested
A notion of excellent worth;
It has any idea bested
I've heard for some time on this earth.
It hasn't a shudder or shiver;
It's safe and it's sane and it's sound—
So I'm going to buy me a flivver
And follow the summer around.

I'm going to get me a flivver,
And fasten a trailer behind;
And hie me o'er valley and river
Where the sun and the zephyrs are kind.
And I'll loaf and I'll golf as I ramble,
And sleep 'neath the stars on the ground;
And life will no more be a gamble
As I follow the summer around.

A couple more years and I'll gather
Enough dough to furnish the gas;
Then ho! for the open—well, rather!
Can any one beat it for class?
I'll fish and I'll forage for vittles,
And I'll work not a lick, I'll be bound!
It'll be, if not beer, at least skittles
To follow the summer around.

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

Meet the Jacket That Doesn't Meet in Front

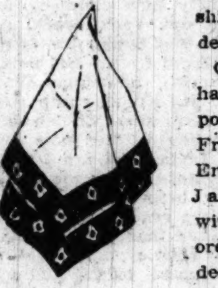
NEW YORK.—Like a picture or a porcelain, clothes are things one must live with, and a certain stir of personal pride is inseparable from the possession of the genuinely good. Thoughtful men set pride above price in the selection of their wardrobe. Your creed, my creed, the world's creed, is nothing for nothing. You get to a ha'penny exactly what you pay for.

A bargain has been wittily described as something somebody doesn't want offered to somebody who doesn't want it either, in the hope that the bait of low price will make him buy it anyway. Price soon wears out of the mind, but quality never wears out of the clothes. Well woven, well designed garments last far longer, because, being cut and fitted to the teenth of an inch, they arch and flex with the wearer's every posture and movement, and, thus, are not subject to strained stitches, drawn buttons, pulled armholes, scant shoulders, tight seats, and other faults of clothes made to accommodate a price, instead to fulfill a standard.

These are self evident truths, but it is well to be reminded of them afresh in times when some men are overly keen about the mere consideration of cost, forgetting art, taste, refinement, fashion.

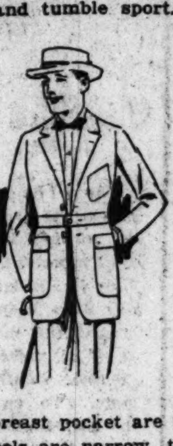
French, English, Japanese.

Colored silk handkerchiefs, instead of the conventional linen affair, are smart just now, because of their lightness and the fact that they permit the introduction of the boldest blendings, as Persian and Paisley patterns. Such handkerchiefs are carried both with town and sporting clothes in colors to tally with suit, shirt or cravat, if desired.



One of these handkerchiefs is portrayed. It is French crepe or English foulard or Japanese silk with a plain colored center and a deep hand blocked border revealing spaced diamond designs of brightly contrasting color. On the links or at the nets this sort of handkerchief may be folded narrow and drawn through the trousers loops, serving as a picturesque belt, or it may be loosely knotted around the throat, serving in place of collar and cravat.

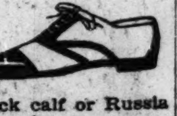
Jackets of surah, pongee, or shantung silk are capital for country knockabout, though they are too fine and light to withstand the usage of rough and tumble sport. Garments of this type should be held to their place—seaside, mountains, and summer recreation. The spruce two button jacket, pictured almost comes together in front, but is kept open by means of a buttoned belt. The two straight side pockets and the slanting breast pocket are patched and the lapels are narrow, tapering into broadness at the peak.



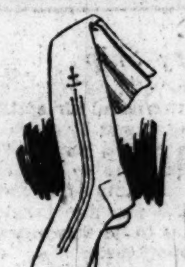
Cricket cloth trousers go well with this jacket. The white cheviot shirt shown has the attached self collar and the pointed end, bowknot tie is of polka dotted design. All in all, this is a turnout which has both coolness and unusualness to recommend it.

Two Feet Ahead in Fashion.

Instep trimmings of various kinds are applied to white buck shoes this summer. For example, there is what is known as the Canadian pattern, a solid piece of contrasting leather, black or dark Russia, which forms the instep and upper. A prepossessing departure from this now familiar design is illustrated. This shoe is of white buck with cap, instep crease, eyelet facings, and heel trimming of black calf or Russia leather, achieving an effect at once novel and engaging. The toe is oval; the sole is rubber; the heel is beveled; the laces are white.



Clocks on socks are striking this season, all sorts of contrasting colors being used, up to the most minute variations of shade. The triple striped, cross topped affair, reproduced here, is a favorite, and may be procured in twenty or thirty different hued clocks from the ground—black, white, tan, gray, and navy blue being the colors preferred by the generality of men.



Last Minute Mode of the Week.

London tailors are cutting trousers extremely wide and, frequently, the bottoms are finished with that perceptible bell effect flare familiar to men who have lived abroad.

Exquisite cloudlike blue georgette with fluttery petals on the skirt, a dainty sash of rose—no one makes a mistake purchasing such a gown when it can be kept always fresh and dainty with Tintex 15c
15 fashionable colors
THERE are 15 fashionable Tintex colors for any washable fabric. But not only the wide selection of "summery" colors makes Tintex popular.
First of all, Tintex is the simplest thing to use. Just dissolve the powder in the clear rinsing water. Then rinse the garment as usual until it is the exact shade you want. Not even one extra process to obtain a new and fascinating hue for your gowns, blouses, underthings, curtains, etc.
Next of all, Tintex is not a soapy, mussy dye. This has two advantages. It contains no alkali to injure the delicate fabrics; and the water is not cloudy and soapy to confuse you about the depth of color you wish to obtain.
You can buy Tintex at all drug and department stores at 15c a package. Try it, in your favorite color, today.
Whitex Have your white silks become yellow? Whitex will restore their new appearance. Used just like Tintex. 15c at Drug and Department stores.

FIVE GOOD HUSTLERS TO BE ADDED TO FORCE
WHERE REAL MONEY IS EARNED.
At intervals this season we have made additions to our sales force, selecting a few good high grade men from this and adjoining towns. We want five more such men and would be pleased to show you the commissions paid men who have come to us since the first of the year. If this has been an off year for you, we can show where plenty of our men are pulling down from $125 to $550 per week. This astonishing record is due to the wonderful appeal our device has to the merchant at this particular time, when half the articles in his store do not sell. Our men are earning money, and so can you if you have a good personality, are a hustler, and have the ambition to get ahead. We positively will not waste time on anybody under 26 or over 58 years of age; neither do we want professional peddlers or job hunters to apply. The men we can use must have the desire to get in on real big money. Many of the best salesmen we have today are men who seldom read ads for new connections, and some of them never sold before. Our proposition will be explained to you by MR. HOUGH, Hotel Brevoort, Monday and Tuesday, from 9 to 12 and from 2 to 4. Out of town applicants write.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Illinois.

COUNTRY ESTATE.

I have a beautiful place of 476 acres, with two sets of homes on it. There are two very large barns and one small one, one large cement 6 car garage, three stories high with living rooms over it and a steam heating plant in the basement. Pipes run underground to my home, eliminating any dirt or danger of fire. One home consists of twelve rooms with steam heat, electric light, telephone; in fact, all modern improvements. I have my own electric lighting plant, this plant is in the basement of garage so the whole place is lighted at a small cost. There are big barns, chicken houses, corn cribs, large big water tower on the place; all kinds of machinery, including two tractors, new threshing machine, etc. About 60 head of sheep, 40 head of hogs, 10 horses, 10 Jersey cows and many [illegible]; in fact, everything needed on such an estate. There is a beautiful spring creek running clear through the farm and you could have your own fishing pond by just putting in a small dam. I am told I have the finest land in Illinois. I have reports to the government which I can prove by my neighbors that I raise double the amount of oats, corn, wheat, barley, and rye of any neighbor in my community. I have owned this farm for nearly 20 years, and a father and son that owned it for 50 years before me. It has been a stock farm all these years; that is the reason why my land is so rich. This place has cost me over $300,000 and I will make a great sacrifice and will take $200,000 for it, $50,000 cash and the balance on time. My place is 2¼ miles from Crystal Lake, beautiful roads all the way from the country. There is a great deal of fruit on the place, including raspberries, red raspberries, gooseberries, blackberries, pears, cherries, and apples; a large lawn and about 100 large rose trees; 30 days ago I had over 50,000 roses in bloom. This place is clear of any incumbrances, but as the state of my wife's health necessitates her living in the South, I am compelled to sell at a sacrifice; will not consider trade. A man ought to make at least $25,000 a year and live a gentleman's life, besides his own living and the benefit of a city and country home combined, being only an hour's ride from the city on the train and two hours' ride by auto. Plenty of first class trains with parlor car service. I have 25 acres of beautiful woods where a man could raise a lot of turkeys. I have a great number of large walnut trees, large oak, and hickory trees. For further particulars address M N 309, Tribune.

FOR SALE—COUNTRY HOME AND FARM, 40 acres of good tiled black soil, 10 room modern residence, large concrete barn, concrete hothouse and concrete power house, garage, wagon shed and 6 room farmhouse; all bldgs. equipped with electric light, furnished by a new Delco plant; crops all planted and in fine standing. This place is wonderfully located on Golf rd., nr. Milwaukee-av., just out of Chicago, which makes an ideal country home with all city conveniences; registered cows and hogs, about 200 chickens, 40 turkeys, 40 geese, team of good horses; all tools and implements go with the place; price to sell, $30,000. A Special Display
OF PIERCE-ARROWS
INCLUDING THE 1920 MODELS.

IN ADDITION TO PIERCE-ARROW CARS WE HAVE A CAREFULLY SELECTED STOCK OF LATE MODEL CADILLACS, PACKARDS, MERCERS, STUTZES, DANIELS, NATIONALS, ROAMERS, AND MANY OTHERS.

A few typical examples of our stock are briefly described below:

PIERCE-ARROW 1920 6-38, dual valve 4 passenger sport. Cast aluminium body. A superb car driven carefully only 5,000 miles—not far enough to eliminate the first stiffness found in a new Pierce-Arrow. Very smart appearance. Finished in Burgundy wine color. 5 excellent cords.

PIERCE-ARROW 1919 6-48 dual valve 7 passenger touring car. Cast aluminum body. This luxurious and very roomy high powered touring car is absolutely perfect mechanically, inside and out in every detail. this fine car presents the appearance of brand new. 6 new cord tires. New shark skin seat covers, etc.

PIERCE-ARROW 1920 6-38, dual valve, town car limousine. Cast aluminum body. Designed by Brewster, New York. A very distinctive, extremely modish small town car. Artistically appointed. Finished in two tone green, tinted gray. Used very little. Presents the appearance of new. Nothing like it in Chicago.

PIERCE-ARROW 1920 6-38, dual valve, coupe. Cast aluminum body. Westinghouse shock absorbers, front and rear bumpers. Exterior finished in Brewster green with light green stripe. Interior upholstered in leather above window line and broadcloth below. Silk and linen seat covers. This automobile is absolutely 100% in every particular and driven only a slight distance in such careful hands that it is not apparent that the car has been used at all. It could be easily sold as a brand new car. The Pierce-Arrow coupe is the smartest and most distinctive appearing small inclosed car imaginable.

PIERCE-ARROW 1920 6-48, dual valve, sport touring. Cast aluminum body. A surpassingly beautiful car. Body and chassis finished in dark blue with ivory stripe. Wheels ivory white with blue stripe. The last word in quiet refinement and elegance in a gentleman's sport car.

PACKARD current model 3-35 7 passenger touring car, in perfect mechanical condition. Equipped with seat covers, tonneau wind shield. 5 excellent cord tires. Has the long, graceful, sweeping lines unmistakably "Packard."

CADILLAC 1921 4 passenger victoria coupe. This car functions so quietly and smoothly that one is unmindful of its mechanical action. The only real difference between this car and a brand new one from the Cadillac factory is the price, for this is like new in every particular.

CADILLAC late series model 57 sedan. This car has had such wonderful care that the velour upholstery on the driver's seat does not show the slightest evidence of any usage. Priced very low.

MERCER 1921 4 passenger sport model. One of those low, racy looking latest model Mercers, driven only a few thousand miles. Completely equipped and beautiful.

STUTZ SPORT 4 passenger, late series dual valve. A wonderful car that has just been through our shops and renewed. Finished in Rolls-Royce blue, with nickeled radiator, lamps, and wind shield. Complete equipment.

A car from the house of HARRIS & RODGERS is a guarantee of satisfaction and a great saving in a high grade late model motor car.

Every car is placed in absolutely perfect mechanical and coach condition and presents the appearance of new before it is offered for sale. A standard new car guarantee accompanies every purchase.

Be sure and pay us a visit—you will be well rewarded and consider your time well spent.

There is no other store like ours in the United States—an institution specializing in high grade used cars of late models. You can own an automobile of finest quality and reputation at about the price of a mediocre one. Thousands of prominent Chicagoans and people from all parts of the United States have bought cars from us and are living indorsements of the House of HARRIS & RODGERS.

A visit to the Pageant of Progress is not complete without a visit to Harris & Rodgers. We are open Sunday and every evening.

CADILLAC'S
9 BARGAINS

NASH SEDAN, 1920. This popular make of car, particularly in the Sedan type, are models that have given such wonderful satisfaction that they are very hard to get a hold of. We are very fortunate to get this one from a customer who has given it wonderful care and attention. Its mechanical condition is way above the average. Coach and paint condition is exceptionally fine. Has an excellent set of tires, one extra, bumper, clock, etc. This same car costs new around $3,000. We were able to obtain this car at a ridiculously low price and are offering it way below the market price. If interested you will have to act quickly if you want to avail yourself of this bargain. Special for this sale, $1,500.

MARMON LIMOUSINE, MODEL 34, 1919. We have obtained this car from a family who has 4 automobiles in their private garage. When you examine it, you will quite agree with us that it does not look as if it had been used but very little. It has been privately owned and well cared for. Has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, bumper, clock, 5 wire wheels. Mechanical condition is all that you could expect. Paint and upholstery are exceptionally fine. In fact, the entire car does not look like the ordinary used automobile. This same type of car sells new today for over $5,500. Considering the general condition of this car, our price is so far below its value that we believe the first person interested that makes an examination and receives a demonstration will purchase it. Special for this sale, $2,500.

FIAT LIMOUSINE, 4 cylinder, 1919, show model. This is what might be termed a touring limousine. The body on this car is a very special job, built by the Kimball Company of this city. It has many desirable features, one of which is the convertible feature of turning this car from a standard limousine into what might be termed a touring limousine. It was especially built for the Automobile Show and sold to one of the most prominent families in Chicago. It has not been used a great deal and is in most excellent condition throughout. Has just been turned in to us after having some work done on it at the Fiat Service Station, so you can be assured of getting an excellent car mechanically. Upholstery and paint is in most remarkable condition. It has 4 exceptionally fine cord tires [2 extra], bumper, Westinghouse shock absorbers, clock, etc. You probably could not duplicate this car new today for less than $7,500. We are very fortunate in being able to get this car at a ridiculously low price. We are offering it to the first person who appreciates good quality and low figure. Price $2,000.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, SEDAN. This 5-passenger Sedan is probably the most popular of any of our Sedan models. Is exceptionally roomy; yet it is a short coupled job making it cozy and comfortable on the inside, and it is not a heavy car. It is of the latest double letter series. We have made a thorough examination of this car and replaced all parts that were necessary. It has been refinished in a very high class manner. Upholstery, which is velour, shows no wear. Is equipped with 4 new tires, one extra tire, bumper, clock, etc. If you are looking for a Cadillac Sedan that has the appearance of a new car and carries our standard guarantee at a low figure, this car will please you. Special for this sale $3,250.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, VICTORIA COUPE. This is a double letter and latest of this series. Equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, one extra tire, tire cover, bumper, clock, etc. Velour upholstery shows practically no wear. Paint which is dark Cadillac green is in excellent condition. This is probably one of the most popular models ever built by this company in a roomy 4 passenger coupe. Mechanical condition of this car we will guarantee, as we have just made a thorough inspection and replacement of worn parts. You probably will never have another opportunity of buying this series at this price, so you will have to act quickly. Special for this sale, $2,900.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, TOURING CAR. It is going to be very hard to describe this car in an ad. It must be seen to be appreciated. We have made a thorough examination of this car and renewed what parts were necessary. The car has been painted a dark Cadillac blue in our own shop. We have also re-covered the top in our trim shop and replated all bright parts. This car has the appearance of a new automobile and will carry our standard guarantee. It has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, bumper, clock, etc. Everything considered, this is without a question the lowest priced Cadillac offered in this paper. If you are looking for a used Cadillac that is all right in every respect and a real bargain, do not miss this opportunity. Price $2,150.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, ROADSTER. This is the latest and current series and selling new today for over $4,200. This car does not look like a used automobile. Customer is exchanging for a Cadillac with larger seating capacity. Goodyear cord tires now on car show no wear; has one extra and bumper. Painted standard Cadillac blue with hardly a scratch on it. This car has been used so little that it can hardly be told from a new automobile; has not been run enough to thoroughly limber up the motor. If you are looking for a roadster greatly reduced in price, but still like a new automobile and carrying a new car guarantee, do not fail to see this car at once. Special for this sale, $3,250.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, VICTORIA COUPE. This car is painted a dark Cadillac blue. Is a roomy, 4 passenger Coupe body and is equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, one extra and bumper. Upholstery and general coach condition of this car show practically no wear. We have made a thorough inspection in our mechanical department and replaced the worn parts. We will guarantee this car. If you want a roomy, up-to-date, 4 passenger Coupe at way below the bargain price, do not fail to examine this car. Special for this sale $2,100.

CADILLAC 8 TOURING CAR, TYPE 51. This car is in most excellent condition throughout. Not only mechanical condition but the top and upholstery, body and fender condition is fine. Has a good set of tires, one extra, bumper and clock. This is the first opportunity we have ever had to offer one of our 8 cylinder models at this ridiculously low price. If you are looking for a bargain in a dependable Cadillac touring car, do not hesitate, but act immediately. Special for this sale $500.

PAIGE
REBUILT CARS
Prices Reduced

When Bird-Sykes says "rebuilt Paige" they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motors, transmission, and rear axle—measuring or testing parts to determine wear — replacing worn parts with new—rebuilding—adjusting—tuning up—repainting body — refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt Paige satisfies the eye as a new car and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every rebuilt Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented and in perfect mechanical condition, and if anything turns out unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes make it good without cost to the purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage Charge.

We do not ask our customers to pay the exorbitant rates charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy of us on deferred payments. You can buy a Bird-Sykes Rebuilt Paige on easy terms, paying only ordinary bank interest rates on deferred payments.

PAIGE 6-39, light six cylinder, 5 passenger car. Just rebuilt and refinished a Rolls-Royce blue. This snappy, economical car is just the thing for the man who wants real enjoyment at a reasonable figure. This car has practically the same lines as our 1921 model. Top is brand new. All good tires, spotlight, and bumper. Car is complete, ready for the road. Price $850.

PAIGE COUPE, 1919, MODEL 6-55. Roomy 4 passenger car just rebuilt and refinished a beautiful Burgundy. 6 cylinder Continental engine. Ideal, all year car for the small family. This is a model with the famous V-type, nonglare windshield. Equipped with a bumper, good cord tires, good spare tire, storm visor, lock, etc. Coach condition excellent. Priced very reasonably at $1,500.

PAIGE 6-55 TOURING CAR, 7 passenger, 1920. Rebuilt and refinished a dark blue. Continental engine. This is the roomiest car the Paige Company has ever built; has 7 inches more space in the tonneau than former models. It is an ideal vacation car; plenty of room for passengers and luggage. Equipped with 5 good tires and white wire wheels, motometer, bumper, wind wings, etc. It is very apparent that this car has had careful handling. Coach condition excellent. A similar car just a couple of months ago brought a price of over $2,000. Our reduced price $1,650.

PAIGE, MODEL 6-55, 1920, BROUGHAM, 5 Passenger Coupe. Rebuilt and refinished same dark blue color as our 1921. Ideal all year car for a small family. One of the most popular cars in our line. Equipment most complete, including 5 good tires, bumper, heater, spotlight, cigar lighter, vanity case for the ladies, and other accessories. Top a taupe color; velour upholstery; Continental engine. Account of reduction in prices we can sell this for only $2,550.

PAIGE SPORT, 1921, Model 6-66. Like new; just gone through our shops and refinished a beautiful mouse gray. Car has seen very little service. Top, upholstery, and general coach condition excellent.
